BEDDING PLANTS

Bedding Plants have been sold at wholesale for many years at prices which are, at present-day costs, below the cost of production. We have eliminated many varieties from our catalogue and offer a selection of the very best, preferring to devote our time, labor and energy to the production of those most popular with our customers and to grow those items in larger quantities. We supply a good grade of plants and offer this list at prices which are, in some cases, slightly in advance of those of former seasons, satisfied that, if the trade does not see the reasonableness of the advance, there are other lines that can be grown with more certainty of profit.

Note: Add 10c per 100 for Rooted Cuttings by Parcel Post.

A WINNER on the Battle Field

Because of its dependable performance throughout four years of war service—

Its low consumption of fuel in countries where gasoline had to be rigidly conserved—

Its sturdy construction which required little attention to keep going at times and in places where drivers were inexperienced and field mechanics were scarce—

The White is the most widely used 1½—2-ton truck in army service here and overseas. It has been adopted as the standard U. S. Army truck of this capacity.

Now Produced for Industry

As the urgency of government demands has decreased, we are now in a position to resume commercial delivery of the 1½—2-ton model.

Shipments can be made to all industries.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

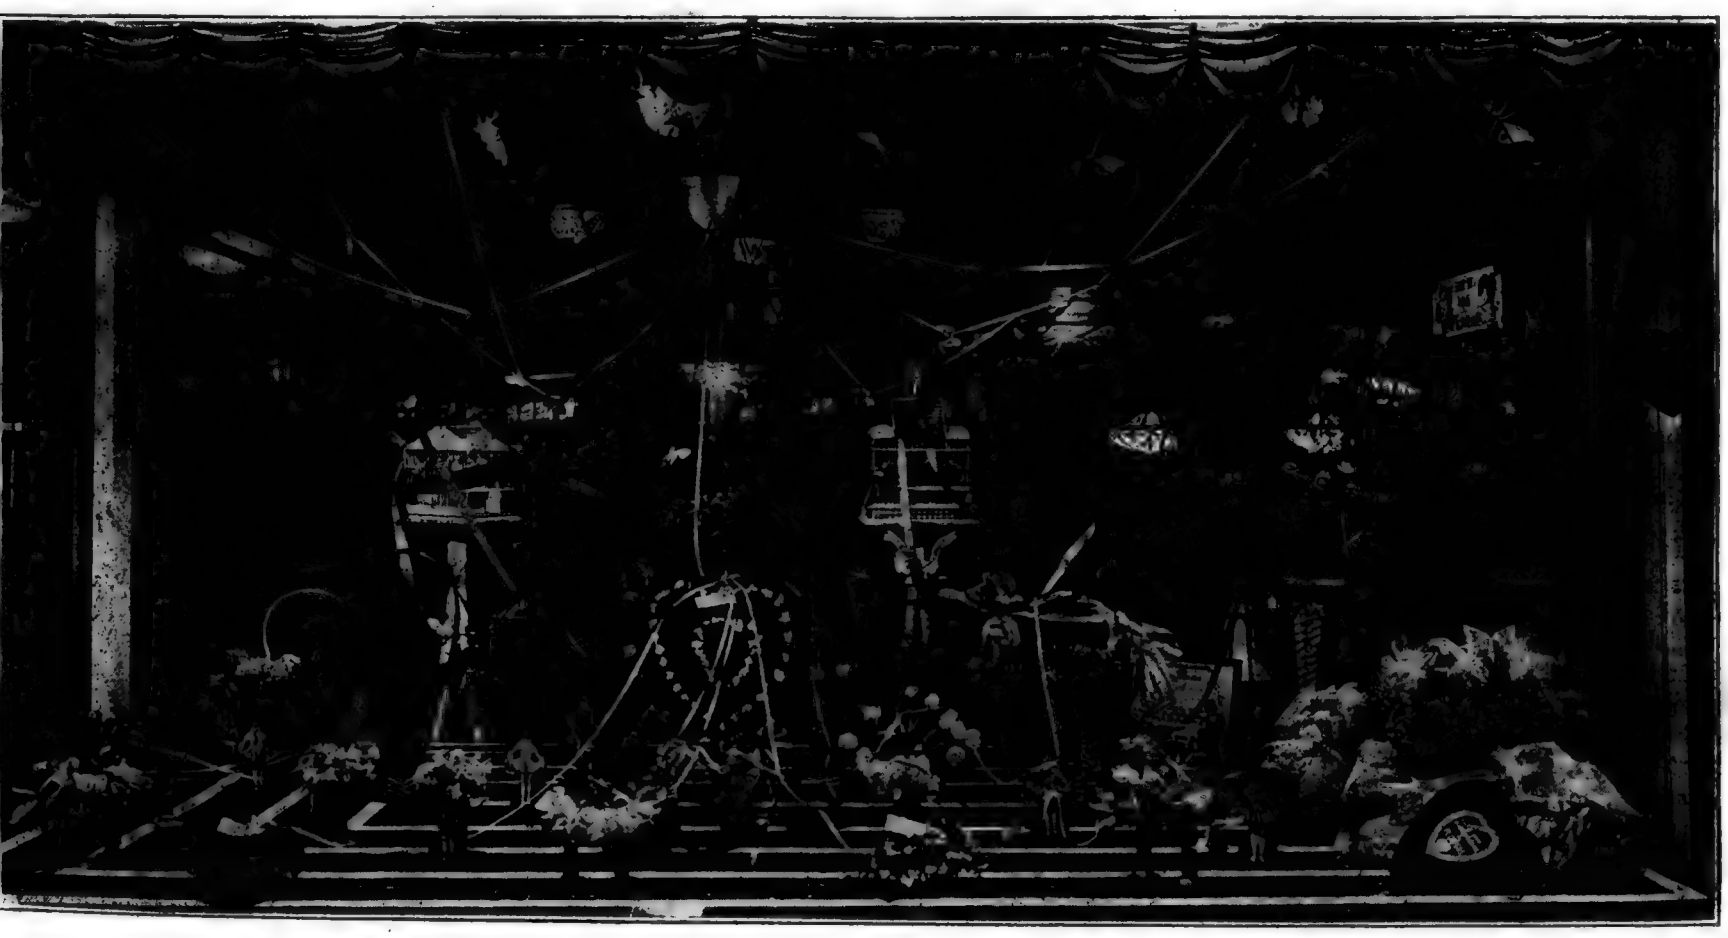
"THE LORD HELPS THOSE WHO HELP THEMSELVES"

The purpose of this article is to induce 10,000 florists each to do at least a little something to call attention to the special fitness of flowers for use as valentines, to all get busy now and so make St. Valentine's day another of the big special flower days.

IF the proverbs, that which heads this page seems especially to have been conceived for the benefit of florists—it should be the motto above the desk of every man of us who comes in contact with the public—and as for February 14, well, there is no other hance for us to help ourselves so much s we shall be doing by calling the attention of the public to the unequaled ppropriateness of our merchandise for se as valentines.

It is a chance that comes only once year. Don't "let George do it"—et busy now and remind as many as ou can flowers are the finest valenines.

For the last five or six years; in fact, ver since The Review published its rst St. Valentine's Number, there has een a steady growth in the importance f February 14 as a special flower day. t will continue this year unless the rade "lays down on the job." That anger arises only because of the reent shortage of stock. "Recent" is he word; the shortage in most places lready has passed. Not only is there nough stock to supply every present demand, but there soon will be so much prices must fall unless we increase our sales effort as the sun gets stronger.



So favorable a January for cut flower production has not been known in many years. There will be all the stock we shall need by February 14, so "let's go," as the soldiers say when it's time to get busy.

The first thing to do, of course, is to take account of what is for sale, to look over the home supply and to get an order off to the wholesaler, but there should be no delay in planning the selling. The selling will be easier than ever this year, because the war is over, thousands upon thousands of the boys are home again and the people are spending their money as though they expected always to have plenty. Yes, it is a valentine year, all right; that is, it will be a valentine year for those who remind people of it.

That's where the proverb comes in: "The Lord helps those who help themselves." The retail florist who sits and waits need not be surprised if few people call on him for Cupid messages; indeed, a flower store that does not advertise itself, one way or another, these times does little but funeral work, and probably less and less of that. People like to go to a live store even to buy flowers for their dead friends.

"Let Your Valentine be Flowers."

One of the Reasons Why St. Valentine's Day Made a New Record at the Rogers Store, Omaha, Last Year

What to do to bring St. Valentine's day to the attention of the public depends on the local and individual conditions. It may be that the method employed successfully by one florist would not do so well for another, but there are two things practically every store can do and should do—now.

Dress the Window.

Put in a special St. Valentine's window display. The show window is perhaps the best advertising medium the average florist has; he gets the greater part of his patronage from those who pass his store. Devote a few minutes to studying the window decoration on the preceding page and go and do likewise —better it if you can, and send The Review a photograph.

The second thing a large number of stores can do is to advertise St. Valentine's day in print. A good many florists have ads running regularly in their local papers; let these this week speak of flowers as valentines. Do it now, before it is forgotten.

Or call up the local newspaper and arrange for some special ads February 12 to 14. Go as far as you like; no advertising money ever is really wasted.

Coöperative Advertising.

In many cities the retailers have combined and have used the coöperative advertising plan. This idea was first suggested by The Review, when it called attention to the possibilities of Mothers' day, and again when the development of St. Valentine's day first was urged. The plan is to purchase a considerable amount of newspaper space to exploit the St. Valentine's slogan, "Let your valentine be flowers," or something similar, and divide the cost among the florists who participate. In this way a greater quantity of space can be secured and a more effective advertisement prepared than if each florist purchased the amount of space his contribution to the fund would buy and the assistance of growers and wholesalers usually can be secured without their names appearing. Reach for your phone and start something right now.

NOW COMES CUPID'S DAY.

A Shifting of Activities.

For many years it has been said by many people that the exchange of Christmas gifts is overdone to the extent that it has become burdensome. The crowded condition of the large department stores in the days preceding the holiday, the high prices put upon all classes of merchandise, the hurry and flurry attendant upon the observance of this festival as the occasion of the promiscuous giving of presents, is causing the observance of the holiday season to be regarded by increasing numbers of people as a more or less onerous effort. This attitude of thought on the part of a large proportion of the people creates an opportunity for the florist to suggest the increased use of flowers and plants as gifts at the Christmastide, as involving less of all the objectionable features of other giving. But the substitution of flowers for other gifts at Christmas will not altogether meet the requirements of the situation. There is bound to be some diminution of the custom of exchanging Christmas presents, with a resultant decrease in the purchases of the florists' wares at the holiday season.

Flower Festivals.

The effective remedy is to emphasize the importance of other holidays as flower days, most notably, perhaps, St. Valentine's day and Mothers' day. Memorial day also will be more largely observed in future, in view of the increased number of war heroes to be remembered and the stirring of patriotic sentiments resultant upon our participation in the world war. Domestic festivities, such as weddings, wedding anniversaries, christenings, birthdays, and patriotic anniversaries, such as the birthdays of Washington and Lincoln, all will come in for a share of attention by way of making them the occasion for a liberal use of flowers for decorations.

It is not likely that anything but flowers ever will be used to celebrate the Easter festival. The supreme significance of this day in the church calendar makes the use of gifts of any other character unsuitable and in questionable taste. Flowers alone, with their beauty and their matchless fitness for their peculiar mission as the means of expression of sentiment, can fill this high requirement. The giving of flowers at Easter is a more beautiful custom, moreover, than the exchange of gifts of miscellaneous character at Christmas and the florist may enlarge upon this idea in his advertising with propriety.

Flowers for Valentines.

St. Valentine's day introduces altogether another class of sentiment for our consideration. Originally a pretty and romantic custom, the celebration of this day had degenerated into the exchange of so-called valentines which were either mawkishly sentimental, or, if comic, so objectionable as to bring the custom of sending valentines into disrepute, until florists came to the rescue of the amiable patron saint of this midwinter festivity, providing in flowers a refined medium of exchange for the occasion.

The decadence of the custom of sending so-called valentines, in fact, has provided the florist with the opportunity to encourage the revival of this anniversary as the time for the sending of floral gifts and the use of flowers as valentines bids fair to become more popular as the years go by. Flowers always have been and always will be a medium of exchange surpassing all others for use as valentines and, once the custom of sending flowers for valentines has become established as the accepted means of celebration of St. Valentine's day, it doubtless will become perpetual and St. Valentine's day be observed as a floral festival.

St. Valentine's Day Publicity.

The florist has this advantage that, once adopted, the use of flowers in observance of any heyday or holiday is not likely to fall into disrepute, for nothing better can be devised to take their place. Mothers' day is an example of the way to get started right. The effort to substitute other gifts for flowers for Mothers' day was not a success. In his advertising the florist may place emphasis on the value of flowers as the happiest selection for a gift for every occasion and in this manner develop a requirement for their use for other occasions, which in this manner, by concerted action on the part of the trade, may be made flower days worth working for. Let us see what judicious publicity urging the use of flowers for valentines will do for St. Valentine's day, 1919, the next flower day in prospect. The other prospective flower days may be taken in their turn.

THE SPLASHME DOLLS.

Henry Penn, while in New York, walk-

Ingenuity Is What Keeps Interest Up.

Palm Beach in a New York Flower Store.

ing through the wholesale houses, saw a "Splashme" doll that he thought the prettiest ever. He ordered quite a few for himself and incidentally induced Max Schling to give them a trial. Max Schling is averse to anything which is not strictly flowers, but he took the advice of his friend and bought a few of the Splashme dolls, so the next day there was a scene in his window representing Palm Beach, as Henry Penn said, "Palm Beach on Fifth avenue." The effect not only was pretty, but drew the attention of passers-by. But to have anything in his window which could not be taken out and sold was something Mr. Schling could not swallow and so he discarded his Palm Beach and made up small Palm Beaches with a ticket on, "Palm Beach in New York." Then he had something not only salable, but something attractive and something which is just right for valentines.

Besides Palm Beach in New York for valentines, there are a few other novelties interesting and pretty which every florist is able to produce by himself and with which he can offer his patrons something novel.

Eureka, Cal.—At the meeting of the creditors of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries and C. W. Ward, held January 10, the creditors present and represented by proxy agreed to extend the time for payment of their accounts to July 1, 1919, the corporation and Mr. Ward personally giving a trust deed of all their property to three trustees for the benefit of the creditors. Two of the trustees were named by Mr. Ward and the other by the creditors, the latter designating one of their own number, the president of a local bank. It is stated that the trustees expect to be able to arrange for a loan on the property sufficient to pay off all the unsecured indebtedness, before July 1. The trustees will continue the business, the belief being held that the approaching federal quarantine will be a large asset and eventually enable them to turn the business back to Mr. Ward to handle "to his own pleasure and profit."

CARNATIONISTS AT CLEVELAND

AFTERMATH OF GOOD MEETING.

The War Is Over.

[A full list of the awards, the new officers elected, a list of most of those present on the first day, notes on some of the novelties, miscellaneous exhibits and other matters, together with the reports of officers, appeared in The Review last week, while the convention still was in progress.]

Of the twenty-seven meetings and exhibitions held by the American Carnation Society prior to those at Cleveland January 29 and 30 there have been many at which the out-of-town attendance was larger and still more at which the exhibition contained more blooms, but there have been few at which the general sense of satisfaction with existing conditions was more apparent: Unexpected but none the less welcome prosperity has come to the growers this season. The convention would have been an unqualified success had there been only two growers present, to felicitate each other on the happy turn of events. As a matter of fact where last year, in war, the out-of-town attendance at Boston did not exceed a score, this year, in peace, at Cleveland it exceeded 100, the exact number being unknown because of the failure of many to register.

The Business Sessions.

The first business session opened at 8:30 p. m., January 29, all officers being present except F. E. Dorner, treasurer, of Lafayette, Ind., during which the nomination of officers occurred. There being only one nominee for each office, during the morning session of the second day the secretary cast one ballot for president, vice-president and treasurer, while the president cast one ballot for the secretary. The officers for 1920, as reported in The Review for January 30, are as follows:

President—Theo. Dorner, of Lafayette, Ind.

Vice-president—C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill.

Secretary—A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind.

Treasurer—F. E. Dorner, Lafayette, Ind.

Carl Hagenburger, Mentor, O., and W. D. Howard, Milford, Mass., were nominated for director, the ballots giving Mr. Howard the office by one vote. Judges elected for three years were D. S. Ward, Queens, N. Y., and C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill.

Fred Lautenschlager, speaking for the Chicago Florists' Club, Chicago Retail Florists' Association, Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Association, Horticultural Society of Chicago and the Chicago Association of Commerce, invited the society to Chicago in 1920. J. F. Ammann, president of the S. A. F. and secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, in the name of his state also extended an invitation for Chicago. They had opposition from Cincinnati, but E. G. Gillett was asked to withdraw his city's invitations in favor of Chicago, where the society's greatest convention is expected in 1920.

Miscellaneous Matters.

The annual address and reports of the officers were read, all of which appeared in last week's issue of The Review. The president's paper was referred to a committee composed of C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill.; Fred Lemon, Richmond, Ind., and E. Saunders, of Lewiston, Me., who approved his suggestions in a detailed report.

A report was made on the judging, which also appeared in last week's issue of The Review. The special award offered by Fred Burki for the vase holding in best condition until the end of the exhibition went to S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, Mass., for his 100 Laddie.

R. C. Kerr, of Houston, Tex., offered a prize of $25 to be awarded at the 1920 convention to the best keeping vase, the judges to take into consideration the distance from which the carnations came and also that the blooms must have received first award in the class in which they are entered. This offer brought out a discussion on the condition of carnations shipped a long distance this season. Mr. Kerr said that his loss on carnations shipped from northern markets to Texas is about three per cent, compared to twelve per cent a year ago. He attributed it to stock being better grown. Someone in the audience raised a laugh by remarking that the smaller waste might, perhaps, be one result of higher prices.

A discussion followed on the relative keeping quality of stock grown in high and low altitudes. The westerner said it is not the altitude, but the continual sunshine, that makes the western flowers keep.

A letter from C. Engelmann, the carnation grower of Saffron Walden, England, was read, in which he expressed his regret at not being able to attend the convention and in which he gave an idea of the hardships British growers have experienced during the war. The society appointed a committee, consisting of I. Bertermann, Indianapolis; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., and John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont., to coöperate in the name of the American Carnation Society with the carnation growers of England, France and Belgium and to help in every way possible to get cuttings to them for reconstruction. The society also went on record as opposing the Federal Horticultural Board's quarantine.

Coöperation and Prices.

During the morning session of the second day J. F. Ammann addressed the meeting on coöperation among the growers, asserting that when stock is not fit for the market, the grower should dump it and not send it to the wholesaler. Mr. Ammann is a great believer in sending surplus stock to the poor, to institutions and to hospitals, where it will do more good than in the waste box.

George Asmus spoke on organization. It is the view of Mr. Asmus that if the growers had been organized prices of carnations never would have gone so high as they did at Christmas; he said that the demand was on the wholesalers and they, in order to get stock, offered a competitor's grower more money for his flowers, with the result that the first house, to satisfy the grower, would raise its price again, thus making stock unusually high and almost out of reach. Organization among growers, he said, would remedy this trouble.

The average price of carnations in various parts of the country was discussed. Adam Kohankie said that at Denver it was 3 cents. E. Saunders, of Lewiston, Me., said that in his section it was about 6 cents. J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, gave his figures at 3 to 3½ cents, and around Knoxville, Tenn., Karl P. Baum said it is 5 cents. Neither Chicago, New York nor Philadelphia was heard from.

Henry Penn, chairman of the publicity committee of the S. A. F., was a late arrival, but came in time to speak on S. A. F. advertising and "Say It with Flowers."

Following the close of the meeting the directors of the society met.

Brief Mentions.

All convention business was finished by noon of January 30, giving the visitors the afternoon to see Cleveland. Many took advantage of the time and visited the retail and wholesale establishments. The J. M. Gasser Co., of which F. C. W. Brown is the head, took many visitors by automobile to the greenhouses at Rocky River.

In addition to the new varieties noted last week in The Review, there were Donald, a crimson, shown by Charles S. Strout, of Biddeford, Me.; Edna, a red shown by N. Zweifel, of Milwaukee; Bernice, a crimson, staged by W. D. Howard, of Milford, Mass., who will disseminate it next season, and Denver, pink, by George Brenkert, Denver. The Banquet.

In the beautifully decorated ballroom f the Hollenden hotel the annual banuet of the society was held in the evenng of January 30. It was not merely a anquet, but a largely attended dinner ance. The ballroom was decorated ith hundreds of flags of the Allied naions and this, combined with the tables avishly decorated with the show's best arnations, made the scene a picture ong to be remembered. There was good usic and entertainers amused the iners while not dancing. At the end f the dinner the famous Cleveland . T. D. film was projected, showing ur many Cleveland friends in action.

Herman "Publicity" Knoble acted as oastmaster and began by calling upon resident Charles S. Strout. Mr. Strout's peech was short but warm in appreiation for the Clevelanders who so successfully made the convention one that ill be long remembered by the society. President-elect Theo. George Asmus spoke on the "Past, resent and Future of the Retail Busiess." William W. Gammage's topic as "Our Friends and Neighbors."

Charles Grakelow's speech was so well iked that he was recalled and recited he famous poem, "Your Flag and My lag." Henry Penn, as all expected, spoke on publicity, his favorite topic.

The reading of the final resolutions by John H. Dunlop closed the American Carnation Society's twenty-eighth convention.

Dancing followed, at which the Clevelanders and visitors enjoyed themselves the rest of the evening, with thoughts turned toward Chicago for 1920.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

THEODORE DORNER.

THE new president of the American Carnation Society was born at Lafayette, Ind., December 31, 1874, and educated in the public schools and Purdue University. He entered business with his father and brother in 1891. A corporation was formed in 1896 and, on his father's death, in 1911, he advanced from vice-president to president. Mr. Dorner has served in the city council at Lafayette and as president of the police commissioners there. He married Lillian M. Harrington January 30, 1896. They have two daughters. Since 1911 Mr. Dorner has had full charge of the growing at Lafayette and has carried on the seedling raising started so successfully by his venerated sire; he raised Laddie, the variety which led the lot at Cleveland. He was elected a director of the American Carnation Society at its meeting at St. Louis in 1916 and, with his brother, has for years been active in its affairs.

NO SEEDS FROM FEVERFEW.

For two years I have tried in vain to get seeds from a fine, double white feverfew. I have left the blooms to ripen in the greenhouse and also outside, but without results. I get all the stock I want from cuttings, but I want to know why I cannot get seeds. Information will be appreciated. H. M.—Ind.

The more double your feverfew, the less probability there will be of its developing seeds. This applies to a large number of plants. Single flowers are easily fertilized. The reverse is true of double ones. Even if you should be able to secure seeds from your double plants, the larger proportion of them probably would come single or semi-double. If you wish to retain a good-sized double type of feverfew, propagate from cuttings. C. W.

KINDS OF MANURE.

May we ask a little further information in reply to our inquiry of January 2 about feeding carnations? We note the reference to stable manure and cattle manure, but do not understand the difference. C. P. S.—Mich.

Most growers understand that when the term cattle manure is used one means manure that is produced by cows, bulls, steers, heifers or calves. Buffaloes might also be included. Stable manure is generally understood to mean horse manure. A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONISTS AT CLEVELAND

FTERMATH OF GOOD MEETING.

The War Is Over.

[A full list of the awards, the new officers ected, a list of most of those present on the st day, notes on some of the novelties, mis-llaneous exhibits and other matters, together th the reports of officers, appeared in The Re-ew last week, while the convention still was progress.]

Of the twenty-seven meetings and ex-bitions held by the American Carna-on Society prior to those at Cleveland nuary 29 and 30 there have been any at which the out-of-town attend-ce was larger and still more at which e exhibition contained more blooms, t there have been few at which the neral sense of satisfaction with exist-g conditions was more apparent: Un-pected but none the less welcome pros-erity has come to the growers this sea-n. The convention would have been unqualified success had there been ly two growers present, to felicitate ch other on the happy turn of events. s a matter of fact where last year, war, the out-of-town attendance at oston did not exceed a score, this year, peace, at Cleveland it exceeded 100, e exact number being unknown be-ause of the failure of many to register.

The Business Sessions.

The first business session opened at :30 p. m., January 29, all officers being resent except F. E. Dorner, treasurer, f Lafayette, Ind., during which the omination of officers occurred. There eing only one nominee for each office, uring the morning session of the second ay the secretary cast one ballot for resident, vice-president and treasurer, hile the president cast one ballot for e secretary. The officers for 1920, as eported in The Review for January 30, re as follows:

President—Theo. Dorner, of Lafay-te, Ind.

Vice-president—C. W. Johnson, Mor-an Park, Ill.

Secretary—A. F. J. Baur, Indianapo-s, Ind.

Treasurer—F. E. Dorner, Lafayette, nd.

Carl Hagenburger, Mentor, O., and . D. Howard, Milford, Mass., were ominated for director, the ballots giv-g Mr. Howard the office by one vote. udges elected for three years were D. Ward, Queens, N. Y., and C. W. John-n, Morgan Park, Ill.

Fred Lautenschlager, speaking for e Chicago Florists' Club, Chicago Re-il Florists' Association, Chicago holesale Cut Flower Association, Hor-cultural Society of Chicago and the hicago Association of Commerce, in-ited the society to Chicago in 1920. F. Ammann, president of the S. A. F. nd secretary of the Illinois State Flo sts' Association, in the name of his ate also extended an invitation for hicago. They had opposition from incinnati, but E. G. Gillett was asked withdraw his city's invitations in avor of Chicago, where the society's reatest convention is expected in 1920.

Miscellaneous Matters.

The annual address and reports of the officers were read, all of which appeared in last week's issue of The Review. The president's paper was referred to a committee composed of C. W. Johnson, Morgan Park, Ill.; Fred Lemon, Richmond, Ind., and E. Saunders, of Lewiston, Me., who approved his suggestions in a detailed report.

A report was made on the judging, which also appeared in last week's issue of The Review. The special award offered by Fred Burki for the vase holding in best condition until the end of the exhibition went to S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, Mass., for his 100 Laddie.

R. C. Kerr, of Houston, Tex., offered a prize of $25 to be awarded at the 1920 convention to the best keeping vase, the judges to take into consideration the distance from which the carnations came and also that the blooms must have received first award in the class in which they are entered. This offer brought out a discussion on the condition of carnations shipped a long distance this season. Mr. Kerr said that his loss on carnations shipped from northern markets to Texas is about three per cent, compared to twelve per cent a year ago. He attributed it to stock being better grown. Someone in the audience raised a laugh by remarking that the smaller waste might, perhaps, be one result of higher prices.

A discussion followed on the relative keeping quality of stock grown in high and low altitudes. The westerner said it is not the altitude, but the continual sunshine, that makes the western flowers keep.

A letter from C. Engelmann, the carnation grower of Saffron Walden, England, was read, in which he expressed his regret at not being able to attend the convention and in which he gave an idea of the hardships British growers have experienced during the war. The society appointed a committee, consisting of I. Bertermann, Indianapolis; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., and John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont., to coöperate in the name of the American Carnation Society with the carnation growers of England, France and Belgium and to help in every way possible to get cuttings to them for reconstruction. The society also went on record as opposing the Federal Horticultural Board's quarantine.

Coöperation and Prices.

During the morning session of the second day J. F. Ammann addressed the meeting on coöperation among the growers, asserting that when stock is not fit for the market, the grower should dump it and not send it to the wholesaler. Mr. Ammann is a great believer in sending surplus stock to the poor, to institutions and to hospitals, where it will do more good than in the waste box.

George Asmus spoke on organization. It is the view of Mr. Asmus that if the growers had been organized prices of carnations never would have gone so high as they did at Christmas; he said that the demand was on the wholesalers and they, in order to get stock, offered a competitor's grower more money for his flowers, with the result that the first house, to satisfy the grower, would raise its price again, thus making stock unusually high and almost out of reach. Organization among growers, he said, would remedy this trouble.

The average price of carnations in various parts of the country was discussed. Adam Kohankie said that at Denver it was 3 cents. E. Saunders, of Lewiston, Me., said that in his section it was about 6 cents. J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, gave his figures at 3 to 3½ cents, and around Knoxville, Tenn., Karl P. Baum said it is 5 cents. Neither Chicago, New York nor Philadelphia was heard from.

Henry Penn, chairman of the publicity committee of the S. A. F., was a late arrival, but came in time to speak on S. A. F. advertising and "Say It with Flowers."

Following the close of the meeting the directors of the society met.

Brief Mentions.

All convention business was finished by noon of January 30, giving the visitors the afternoon to see Cleveland. Many took advantage of the time and visited the retail and wholesale establishments. The J. M. Gasser Co., of which F. C. W. Brown is the head, took many visitors by automobile to the greenhouses at Rocky River.

In addition to the new varieties noted last week in The Review, there were Donald, a crimson, shown by Charles S. Strout, of Biddeford, Me.; Edna, a red shown by N. Zweifel, of Milwaukee; Bernice, a crimson, staged by W. D. Howard, of Milford, Mass., who will disseminate it next season, and Denver, pink, by George Brenkert, Denver. A late exhibit was a large vase of the new

An interesting feature of the meeting was a talk by Lieut. D. S. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., who has recently been discharged from military service after being one of the first to go over. He told of his experience as an American officer with the French anti-aircraft batteries. The society will draw up a set of patriotic resolutions for the men of the trade who have so bravely served their country.

During the convention S. A. F. committees were active. Those holding closed meetings were those on credit and collections bureau, publicity and publicity finance.

The people of Cleveland attended the show in large numbers, on cards of invitation distributed by the local florists.

August Poehlmann, Chicago; H. G. Berning, St. Louis; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; Chas. Grakelow, Philadelphia; Henry Penn, Boston; W. D. Howard, Milford, Mass.; P. F. O'Keefe, Boston; E. N. Kroninger, Utica, N. Y.; W. A. Rowlands, Utica, N. Y.; Charles Schwake, New York city; A. J. Stahelin, Redford, Mich., and F. A. Zenke, Chicago, were some of the late arrivals.

The Banquet.

In the beautifully decorated ballroom of the Hollenden hotel the annual banquet of the society was held in the evening of January 30. It was not merely a banquet, but a largely attended dinner dance. The ballroom was decorated with hundreds of flags of the Allied nations and this, combined with the tables lavishly decorated with the show's best carnations, made the scene a picture long to be remembered. There was good music and entertainers amused the diners while not dancing. At the end of the dinner the famous Cleveland C. T. D. film was projected, showing our many Cleveland friends in action. Herman "Publicity" Knoble acted as toastmaster and began by calling upon President Charles S. Strout. Mr. Strout's speech was short but warm in appreciation for the Clevelanders who so successfully made the convention one that will be long remembered by the society. President-elect Theo. Dorner confined his remarks to thanking the members for bestowing the honor on him, which office he promised to fill to the best of his ability.

Carl Hagenburger reminded the Clevelanders that he was responsible for Cleveland getting the 1919 meeting and felt proud of the success achieved.

A. F. J. Baur was taken suddenly ill at the start of the dinner and had to be assisted to his room, thus being unable to make his annual speech. Mr. Baur left a sick bed to attend the meeting and was missed at the dinner.

President Ammann, of the S. A. F., spoke on "Peace," a speech that will long be remembered. He told of his troubles while on a local exemption board during the war and narrated both the serious and funny sides of this work. Mr. Ammann closed by saying that prohibition is the greatest thing that ever happened for the florists' business.

George Asmus spoke on the "Past, Present and Future of the Retail Business." William W. Gammage's topic was "Our Friends and Neighbors."

Charles Grakelow's speech was so well liked that he was recalled and recited the famous poem, "Your Flag and My Flag." Henry Penn, as all expected, spoke on publicity, his favorite topic.

The reading of the final resolutions by John H. Dunlop closed the American Carnation Society's twenty-eighth convention.

Dancing followed, at which the Clevelanders and visitors enjoyed themselves the rest of the evening, with thoughts turned toward Chicago for 1920.

TENNESSEEANS MEET

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION

Officers Elected.

At the fourth annual convention of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, held January 28 in the Hotel Hermitage, Nashville, Tenn., the following officers were elected for 1919-20:

President—H. G. Bramm, Bristol.

Vice-president—A. J. McNutt, Knoxville.

Secretary—Prof. G. M. Bentley, state entomologist, reëlected.

County vice-presidents and other officers of the association will be appointed by the elected officers. The latter were made delegates to represent the association at the meetings of the S. A. F.

The program of the convention proved to be interesting and beneficial, while the displays were exceptionally numerous and beautiful. Members of the association were of the opinion that the meeting was the most successful thus far held.

Several florists from other states were present, as well as a number of nurserymen from points in Tennessee.

Considerable interest was manifest in the future of the trade, and the almost universal opinion was that the outlook is bright for better and bigger business, not only this year, but in the years immediately following.

Address of President.

In his address, Leo Geny, the retiring president of the association, outlined the work of the last year. He said the failure of foreign stock to reach this country, with the poor condition of the small quantity that did arrive, had been a hardship for the florist. Conditions had been made worse, he declared, by the shortage of fuel and the necessary government regulations. These curtailed the amount of space used, he stated, and brought about a shortage of flowers. Prices were so high, according to Mr. Geny, as to check both consumer and dealer. If florists are able to produce flowers to sell at reasonable prices, it is Mr. Geny's opinion that 1919 will be a year for the trade to remember, as he sees an increased demand as certain. Mr. Geny mentioned the restrictions about to be imposed upon the trade by the Federal Horticultural Board and said he feared there was little chance of having them modified.

Domestic Growing Successful.

A general discussion followed Mr. Geny's address, and turned to the subject of what the florists of the United States may be expected to produce in this country to take the place of stock heretofore imported. Several reports of experiments along these lines seemed to prove that there are many places in the south where most of such stock can be grown successfully.

Results of forcing home-grown stock of various kinds were outlined by several members and, while some of these were not altogether successful, on the whole they were encouraging.

A committee was appointed to draft a protest against the drastic features of the new federal quarantine and forward it to Washington, not only to the Federal Horticultural Board, but to the senators and congressmen representing Tennessee at the capital. General opinion was that while more stringent inspection regulations than are now in force may be required, the new quarantine is not for the best interests of either the trade or the country in general.

R. C. Kerr, of Houston, Tex., former president of the S. A. F., attended all sessions of the convention and aroused considerable enthusiasm for the general advertising campaign of the society. He obtained several generous subscriptions to the fund which he is helping to raise to push the campaign.

Suggests Wild Flowers.

It was suggested by Mr. Kerr that there undoubtedly are many wild flowers in this country which could be used as substitutes for the stock heretofore imported, if only they were known to the trade. In this connection Floyd Bralliar made the suggestion that florists experiment with Mertensia virginica as a forcing subject, saying that it forces easily and successfully.

The value of coöperative buying and selling was discussed at length.

A novel idea on the question of holding efficient employees was the subject of considerable discussion. The idea as expressed by a member of the association was that the employer should consider the wages of his employees as part of the capital of the business and divide the profits accordingly. Several who had tried this system praised it highly.

Irrigation in the south was the subject of a talk by a representative of the Skinner Irrigation Co. He said that trusting rainfall for growing a profitable outdoor crop of flowers and vegetables is a thing of the past. He pointed out that no crop that florists grow requires less than an inch of rainfall in thirty days to give best results. There is not a state in the Union where it is certain that this amount will materialize during the growing season, according to the Skinner representative.

While a number of florists at the convention were familiar with the Skinner system, the idea of using it extensively was a new one for many. However, as an evidence of the success of this system in outdoor growing, it was said by the irrigation expert that the R. M. Kellogg Co., of Three Rivers, Mich., now has 320 acres watered by the Skinner system.

Numerous Exhibits.

Local florists were on hand with a good showing of cut flowers in the loggia of the hotel and a number of the florists' supply houses were represented also.

The feature of the Joy Floral Co. exhibit was a collection of seedling carnations, some twenty-five in number. One large display vase of deep flesh pink was especially fine. R. F. Smith, connected with the company, attended the convention in Cleveland and had charge of a display sent there by the Joys. Large vases of Ophelia, Russell and Columbia roses also were shown by this concern.

McIntyre Bros. showed some unusually good vases of Russell and Columbia roses and, what was more unusual, a dozen excellent azaleas grown in this country. These did not show so large a number of flowers as imported plants, but the individual flowers were larger and finer.

A fine showing of ferns was made by C. H. Tritchler, who also had other pot plants on display. The feature of this display was Mr. Tritchler's new fern, Liberty, which is a sport of Verona, with all of its foliage advantages, combined with the freedom of growth and hardiness of the older Boston. Many favorable comments were heard on this fern.

Several vases of good carnations, besides a display of primulas, cinerarias and ferns, was the contribution of Geny Bros. Unfortunately, this firm's new rose crop was off, and it could not be shown.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

ROSES IN THE SOUTH.

General Care.

With the last of the holiday crop cut out and the plants well started on their new growth, they will require extra attention. The beds should be thoroughly cleared of all dead leaves and rubbish of every description and any of the old mulch that is left should be smoothed over. This smoothing should be done with the palm of the hand, so as not to disturb the young feeding roots that are running over the surfaces of the beds. Then apply a mulch of good, fresh cow manure at least two inches thick, placing it in the center of each row rather than spreading it evenly all over. Keep the plants neatly tied up, but avoid any crowding of the shoots. The days are lengthening and the sun rapidly gaining in power, so that water may be applied a little more freely. The coming crop is generally the best one, so be particular to see that all the little points that go to make up good cultivation are observed. Perhaps the most important of these is the handling of the ventilators. Mildew is ever ready to take advantage of the least slip. As a precaution use a little sulphur paint on some of the pipes each week, and see that the air is left sweet and moving at all times.

Brides and Bridesmaids.

These varieties, since the advent of Killarneys and other new ones, e become so much of a back number to have gone almost completely out the list of forcing roses. This year tried a bed of each and the results e been more than gratifying. They w amazingly, making fine flowers on stems, which could be shipped anyere with confidence, and, what is more the point, they sold on sight. Prices the holidays were extremely high and the most common remark by customers was, "Well, if I have to pay such a big price, I want you to send me those big ones," pointing to the Brides or Bridesmaids.

The returns from these two beds have been so good that the planting for next year probably will be much larger. They seem to do better than any of the newer varieties, without being so exacting in requiring special treatment. A night temperature of 56 degrees is their modest requirement. L.

Two Busy Days.

The real work of the society is done the annual meeting of the directors l two busy days were put in, the only ersion being a dinner given in the ening, January 31, at the Detroit Athic Club, by Philip Breitmeyer.

The directors voted to transfer $5,000 m the general fund to the publicity d again this year.

Rules were laid down, under legal ade, for the guidance of the credits and lections committee and the affiliated reau.

F. T. D. DIRECTORS.

Held Busy Meeting at Detroit.

The board of directors of the F. T. D. d a meeting at the Hotel Statler, Deit, January 31. The meeting was called to order by President William F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., and at intervals during the session Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, assisted in presiding. The following were in attendance: William F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; Albert Pochelon, secretary, Detroit; Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia; William L. Rock, treasurer, Kansas City; Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis; H. G. Dillemuth, Toronto; W. J. Palmer, Buffalo; Henry Penn, Boston; Karl P. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., and George Asmus, Chicago.

Among the details of business transacted the following were noted: It was decided to put a representative on the road to solicit membership for the F. T. D. and explain its methods and policies to prospective members.

It was voted to turn over $1,500 from the F. T. D. treasury to the national publicity fund of the S. A. F.

Memberships Increase Rapidly.

Reports from the secretary and from the treasurer showed that the membership was increasing by leaps and bounds, being now in the neighborhood of 675, and the treasury and finances in the pink of condition. New members have recently been received in England and members from others of the allied countries are expected soon.

The treasurer was authorized to invest $700 of the permanent fund, the character and kind of investment to be at his discretion.

The dates of the next annual convention were fixed as October 7 and 8 next, the convention to be held at Buffalo.

Charles H. Grakelow is going abroad within a few months and was authorized to represent the F. T. D. in Europe and look after new members there. Secretary Pochelon was instructed to write F. C. W. Brown, of Cleveland, chairman of the committee on emblem design, requesting that all designs sent in for the recent competition be submitted at the next annual meeting at Buffalo, so that they can be passed on at that time finally by the members with a view toward selecting one of them as a permanent design.

Seek Divorce from S. A. F.

By action started it may no longer be a requisite to membership in the F. T. D. that an applicant be a member of the S. A. F. This action was taken pursuant to the recommendation of a special committee consisting of Messrs. Asmus, Breitmeyer and Bertermann, which was concurred in by the board and which will be submitted in the form of an amendment to the F. T. D. constitution at the convention in October.

An appropriation of $200 was authorized for the purchase of Mothers' day stamps, same to be distributed to the F. T. D. members.

It is confidently believed by the board that its action in putting a representative on the road to solicit new members who are eligible under the constitution will result in a speedy increase of membership to 1,500 and make the F. T. D. financially one of the strongest florists' organizations in the country. A special committee consisting of S. A. Anderson and W. J. Palmer was appointed to prepare an exhibition for the next convention, this committee to have power to add to its membership the entire F. T. D. fraternity in Buffalo. H. T.

DO YOU PACK WELL?

PLAN SERVICE IMPROVEMENT.

Express Company in Campaign.

An announcement of considerable interest to the trade was made this week, when the American Railway Express Co., through its better service committee, issued a statement describing a campaign for better marking and packing of express shipments, to begin February 10. The company is the government organization now handling the business of all express companies throughout the United States.

It is hoped to reduce the amount of loss and damage to the lowest possible minimum by conducting an educational campaign for company employees, especially drivers and receiving clerks in the cities and agents in the smaller points, and through these reach the shippers.

No new packing or marking rules will go into effect for the campaign, but an effort will be made to impress upon the minds of shippers the necessity of marking their packages clearly and packing in a substantial manner.

Describe Express Evils.

A folder issued by the committee points out that the express business has four attendant evils, two of them lying with the shipper and two with the company, as follows: First, accepting shipments not properly marked; second, accepting shipments not properly packed; third, rough handling en route, and, fourth, stealing.

A plea is made to the shipper to assist in remedying the evils which come under his control and careful supervision of the shipping room is advised. The company pledges itself to do its own "housecleaning."

A set of rules for packing is given, as well as instructions for marking. These warn against the use of second-hand packing cases, and admonish the shipper to place two tags on his shipment, one outside the package and one inside.

Many Lost Packages.

A determined effort will be made during the campaign to eradicate the "No Mark" evil. In this connection the committee points out that from July 1 to November 30, 1918, 127,859 shipments, an average of 25,500 a month, were turned over to the "No Mark" bureau because no mark was found either inside or outside the packages, to indicate the shipper or the consignee.

The committee admits that the fault which causes lost packages does not exist only in the shipper, but that the company employees also are in many cases to blame. During the coming campaign a systematic effort will be made to educate the employees along the lines desired. There will be closer supervision of the work of employees in all express offices and terminals.

A series of weekly meetings of the expressmen in every city will give the supervising officers an opportunity to impress upon their local forces the purposes of the drive. Local campaign committees will be appointed to keep before their co-workers the ideals of service and to secure the coöperation and interests of shippers by explaining to them how they can, in their own particular lines, aid in the improvement of the express service.

INTERESTING MEETING

PITTSBURGH GARDENERS.

District Conference.

The Pittsburgh District Gardeners' Conference, under the auspices of the National Association of Gardeners, was held January 30, at the Chatham hotel, Pittsburgh, Pa., with fifty gardeners, most of them local men, in attendance. Robert Weeks, of Cleveland, O., president of the National Association of Gardeners, and M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., secretary, were present. David Fraser, of Pittsburgh, was chairman, and John Barnet, of Sewickley, secretary of the conference.

In his address President Weeks urged the development of a more friendly feeling between the gardeners and their employers. To inspire this, the gardener himself should show a pleasant disposition and do his level best both in the management of his charge and for the interest of his employers.

Value of Association.

Secretary Ebel dwelt strongly on the advantages of the National Association of Gardeners to the gardeners. A register of the gardeners belonging to the association, showing who they are, what they are, and the positions they are fitted for, should be kept, so that when an employer looking for a gardener applies to the association to recommend one, the association will be in a position to answer at once, with full particulars. A recommend from the association would be something tangible and highly desirable. Sometimes a gardener will ask, "What has the association done for me?" It may be asked in reply, "What have you done for the association? If you are in a good, permanent position, where your services are appreciated, you may not need the help of the association now in getting another place, but a time may come when you will need it." Besides this function of the association, the bringing together of the gardeners of the country into one great affiliation, making them acquainted with one another, and enabling them to learn through this acquaintance of the gardens of the country, are surely objects worth while. Further, the practical and social benefits accruing from this happy association are profitable and delightful and should be appreciated by all of us.

A representative of Beckert's Seed Store, Pittsburgh, reported a vigorous protest made by this firm against the plant exclusion act.

Advantages of Membership.

William Falconer advised a closer unity among the gardeners, local as well as national, suggesting that they form clubs and make a point of attending club meetings with their families, thus bringing their wives and children into closer contact, making the whole community of gardeners a happy family circle. He mentioned instances of cities sending their park superintendents and superintendents of cemeteries to their respective national conventions, paying all of their expenses. He advised that employers of gardeners, if shown the practical information their gardeners would absorb while attending the conventions of the national association, which would be of advantage to them in their own charges at home, doubtless would send their gardeners to these conventions, paying their expenses. He gave the names of several gardeners of national fame, also of apprentice-trained, practical gardeners who had launched into scientific, professional and commercial fields, in each case with pronounced success. The wide field of horticulture offers scope to suit the taste, inclination and ambition of all the gardeners of America.

AMERICAN PRODUCTS.

Many American growers have begun the production, more or less extensively, of the bulbs and plants heretofore imported from Holland and Belgium. It will take some time, just as it did with the gladiolus, to develop any considerable output, but it will come in time.

"We will soon grow tulips, narcissi, etc., in America despite the help question," says C. Betscher, Dover, O. "We feel that the income from the blooms will equalize wages, so that tulips, narcissi and other items will be grown in the central west. We have about one-fourth of an acre of narcissi and some tulips, to see what can be done practically. American-grown bulbs will bloom as well as those from Holland.

"With the war over, plant growing and plant breeding will put America to the fore. American-bred roses will set the pace for European breeders. In the near future we shall see great advances in rose breeding in America."

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

TROUBLE WITH LETTUCE.

Can you tell me why my lettuce does not do well? I used to grow lettuce as nearly perfect as possible, but last two seasons I have had trouble. I have a bed of lettuce in an old house which has been in lettuce for ten years. The lettuce in this house is all right, but the trouble is with a new house, built four years ago. My lettuce seems to start all right, but by the time it reaches the point where it ought to begin to shade the ground, it stops. All the beds are solid. The ground looks dry at times, but no amount of water seems to do any good. I use stable manure, well rotted.

E. G. B.—O.

You do not state what temperatures you are giving your lettuce, nor what varieties you are growing. There is no reason why lettuce should not succeed in the same soil year after year, if it receives a generous application of stable manure before each crop is planted. You do not state whether you have a summer crop, such as tomatoes or cucumbers, in your houses to follow the lettuce. My experience has been, and it is not exceptional, that much better results are to be had with lettuce if some other crop is grown part of the year than where lettuce alone is grown and the houses remain dormant during the hot months. In the case of winter crops of lettuce in solid beds, a good soaking of water applied when the plants are set out should carry them to maturity. If you grow head lettuce, you cannot secure as good heads in midwinter as in spring. This is not to be expected, but your plants should not stand still. The night temperature should not be below 45 degrees and 48 degrees would be better. Ventilate freely on every possible occasion, but avoid a rush of air or leaving the ventilators open too long. If your plants are really dry at the roots, water must be given to assist development. Select a clear day for the operation of watering and be sure to soak the plants thoroughly. Use a heavy brass rose on the end of the hose. This process of watering may cause some damping off, but it will be preferable to having an undeveloped and unsalable crop.

CARNATIONS

EXPERIMENTS IN HYBRIDIZING.

[Interest was aroused in the seedling carnations produced by the Joy Floral Co., of Nashville, Tenn., when a vase of the flowers was awarded honorable mention at the Cleveland convention. The story of how these seedlings were raised was told in a paper read by R. F. Smith, the grower, at the convention of the Tennessee Florists' Association, at Nashville, January 28.]

As a rule I have made crosses with the idea of combining certain good qualities of the two varieties selected, though I will admit that I have made some haphazard crosses, taking "pot luck" chances.

The first thing I want to emphasize is this: In the selection of flowers to be used in crossing, select only well formed flowers from the healthiest and most robust plants. From my experience, I firmly believe that a certain amount of stigmonose and other diseases is carried into the new generation through the seeds, as well as through the cuttings, and, though not at first so pronounced, they will finally show up.

There are about six things we need to get in a carnation to make it a thing of commercial value. They are: (1) substance, (2) productiveness, (3) form, (4) size, (5) color and (6) stem. Some of these qualities can be obtained by careful crossing, though some come by accident. It is an easy matter to get one or two of these qualities in a plant, but it is a Chinese puzzle to get them all at once. Substance is the greatest essential. A carnation may have all the other qualities except substance and be of no commercial value. Often our finest specimens lack this quality and must be discarded.

Flowers Must Keep.

I want to say here that the carnation is not so popular today as it should be on account of its being grown so that it will not stand the grind of long shipments. To put the carnation back where it belongs, we must have varieties that will keep.

We must have productiveness. A plant may have the other essentials, but if it is not a producer, commercially it is no good. Form, size and color are things that go to make the flower beautiful to behold. Of these we have the least control of color in breeding. I will give you a few examples of my humble experiences and you may judge how much or how little control we have over these things.

In 1915, my first year of serious crosses, with which I am working now, I made two crosses, one of Champion, red, on Enchantress, pink, and the other of Champion on St. Nicholas, red. Most of the Enchantress crosses came red and most of the St. Nicholas crosses, red on red, came pink. In my last year's crosses I obtained various shades of yellow, though we never had a yellow carnation in the place before. All of these either came from Matchless or Nebraska crosses, evidently reverting back to some former yellow parent.

The same thing has occurred this year, one generation further on. By crossing a red seedling, one of whose parents was Matchless, with another seedling, a pink, with neither Matchless nor Nebraska parentage, I got yellow again. This shows that we have not much control of color, as every carnation takes much of its color from the crosses of former parents, the seedling being liable to revert to any one of these, or a blend of the two. While there is a certain trend of coloring in certain crosses, there is no fixed rule we can follow.

Results Are Varied.

I will say that in almost any cross you make you will get a range from white through the various shades of pink to deep red. We will say, cross two carnations, one salmon pink and one deep pink. Out of this cross one is likely to get a magenta and a red that is a brick red, while in the lighter pink crosses one is likely to get magentas, but the reds he gets are apt to be bright red. Again, it is not necessary to cross the large-flowered varieties to get large flowers. In crosses this year in which Morning Glory, a very small-flowered variety was used, I got a plant with flowers that measure four inches in diameter.

I will say in conclusion that the biggest job is not in hybridizing, but in culling out the seedlings. The real test is in being able to select the plants that are good out of a lot that are just ordinary.

PHOTINIA SERRULATA.

Will you please tell me the name of the evergreen of which I enclose a specimen? It is a nice hardy shrub and I would like to get stock of it.

C. C.—Tex.

Photinia serrulata is the name of this evergreen and it is a native of China, introduced into England by Captain Kirkpatrick of the East India Co., in 1804. It grows well in Cornwall, England, where some of the plants are now thirty-five feet high. It is highly desirable for growing in the southern states.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

AN ABNORMAL MARKET.

Use of Substitutes.

In The Review of January 23, under the caption "Perplexed Questions," it is stated by a grower that artificial flowers are being used extensively in funeral work and the question is asked if florists are going to encourage the increased use of them, thereby depreciating the value of natural flowers.

As the article is written by a grower, we are going to include magnolia and cycas leaves under the classification of artificial goods, because in funeral work they have been largely sold instead of natural flowers.

December 6, 1918, our stock of flowers was so low that we phoned and wired commission firms and growers in Guthrie, Okla., Kansas City, St. Joseph and St. Louis, Mo., Lincoln and Chicago, Ill., to send us flowers. We were told that they were sold out. We then wired a friend in the trade in Chicago to buy for us flowers at market prices. Because the prices were so high this friend did not buy but wired us if we wanted long roses at 50 cents and medium roses at 30 cents, to reorder. Instead of buying natural flowers at these prices, at which we could not resell profitably, we, like other florists, filled our larger orders with standing wreaths of magnolia and cycas leaves, with a spray or cluster of natural flowers to finish the piece. Supply and demand at that time ruled the market and we think the situation was properly handled. We wonder, however, if the prices could possibly have gone higher had the demand not been relieved to some extent by the use of cycas and magnolia leaves.

High Prices Broke Market.

It was regrettable, however, that the high prices caused many customers to order for funeral purposes wreaths of magnolia leaves and artificial flowers such as florists keep on display and "encourage the general use of" for cemetery purposes.

However, we do not believe that there will be any detrimental effect upon the sale of cut flowers as a result; at least none is apparent here and conditions are normal again.

We believe, however, that the prices growers and commission firms were able to get during those times caused them to charge prices at Christmas not justified by the ratio of supply and demand and, because the prices quoted were so high, the use of flowers for Christmas gifts was largely eliminated. Advance orders were not placed with the retail stores and the market broke. The Chicago notes in The Review stated that prices went up until flowers stopped selling and then prices went down, which was a fact.

If any grower can justify the price of carnations at $20 per hundred as a good thing for him, when it reduced the sale of them more than fifty per cent and caused our daily papers to take our national slogan in vain, saying, "Talk is cheap, if you don't say it with flowers," we would like to hear from him. Repetitions of the prices of last Christmas will cause many customers to say it with something besides flowers, even when prices are low.

Live and Let Live.

This season has taught many in our trade that there is a limit to which demand for flowers will consume them at high prices. We market the bulk of our stock to the middle classes. The millionaire clientele does not constitute the volume of our trade.

The supply of flowers is limited, but so is the demand, and when retailers order flowers for shipment at market prices and the supply is only half equal to the demand, the wholesaler is not serving himself best if he doubles the price, putting it where the customer will not consume from the retailer then or later, killing the hen that lays the golden eggs.

Substitutes for flowers are not limited to artificial flowers, but candy, gloves, etc., may be used. Growers will live by letting the consumers' patronage live, so do not let us have a repetition of the conditions of last Christmas, when wholesale prices were not quoted and strangling prices were charged the shipping trade, which had no redress.

The Stiles Floral Co.

SAY IT WITH NATURAL FLOWERS.

We enjoyed Mr. Furrow's opening shot in the campaign against rag and paper flowers in The Review of January 23, under the caption, "Perplexed Questions." We believe it is the florist's duty, unless he is interested in the manufacture of artificial flowers, to discourage the use of this artificial trash in every possible way. We give our customers to understand that it is wrong to use artificial doorpieces. The undertaker might as well use old rags for a doorpiece as artificial flowers over and over again, for all the message they carry. The florists should instruct their customers against this practice before it gains greater vogue.

We should bear in mind that cut flowers will never be so scarce again, in all probability, as they have been this winter. The retail florist who is in favor of the use of artificial flowers might as well open a second-hand clothes shop.

Raymond J. Preisach.

OMAHA, NEB.

The Market.

Weather conditions remain the same as for the last six weeks. It is just 76 degrees warmer than a year ago.

All cut stock is scarce and prices high. Business in all lines is good and the only complaints are heard when some retailer receives a large funeral order and then tries to get enough stock to fill it.

Coal is plentiful and the florists who shut down their greenhouses on account of the shortage of fuel last fall are now wishing they had continued to operate them. Screenings and, in fact, any coal can be bought practically at the buyer's price.

Various Notes.

Parker the Florist has enjoyed good business during the week, many brides' bouquets and accessories having been made up for the weddings of returning soldiers.

As his is one of the best located stores in Omaha, L. Rogers is enjoying good transient trade.

Included in the many robberies of the last two weeks were the stores of John Bath, of Nineteenth and Farnham streets, and Lee Larmon, of the Fontenelle hotel. At the Bath store, $11 was taken from the cash register. The robbers did little damage there, but Mr. Larmon suffered more. He was relieved of $50 and considerable damage was done to his store.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Wilcox and Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, have just returned from the carnation show at Cleveland. They feel they were well repaid for the trip. Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Lainson have also just returned from the carnation show and visits to eastern points.

J. F. Wilcox & Sons are going to plant many Columbia roses this season. Fine young plants already are started.

Mr. Hiltner, of Hiltner Bros., of Lincoln, made a visit to Omaha and Council Bluffs recently and reports this to have been one of the busiest seasons they ever had. William Bomberger, of Harlan, Ia., was in the city February 1 and 2 on business and he also reports heavy business throughout the year.

F. R. S.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

While the general supply of flowers has perceptibly increased, the demand easily absorbs the increase. Carnations are coming in heavier supply and sweet peas show signs of cropping conditions. With bulbous flowers in better supply as well, an easier feeling is apparent in the market. There are few tulips to be had, however, and even Paper White narcissus is scant in supply, in comparison with the avalanches of previous years.

Roses are still on the short side; consequently prices remain firm. Yellow varieties are particularly scarce. The quality of arrivals continues good, with a preponderance of high grade flowers.

Carnations continue to bring top prices in the fancy grades. Benora and Mrs. C. W. Ward are in the 12-cent grade, with one or two other varieties when of exceptional quality. Culls and splits move well at 6 cents.

Orchids are dragging. Cattleyas have been arriving in quantity, and were hard to move at prices lower than have been customary of late. Many of the flowers are small, and consequently bring less than 20 cents. The best bring 50 cents, but fine flowers are to be had for 30 to 40 cents. Spray orchids are not plentiful, but the demand for them is not at all heavy, so there are enough to go around.

Sweet peas are much heavier in supply than they have been for some time, and prices have taken a tumble. Average quality flowers command only 2 cents, and the best not more than 3 cents.

Lilies are plentiful, but there is no abatement in prices, which are from 25 cents up. Fine callas are arriving, the best bringing $4 per dozen.

There is a good deal of funeral work. Often, in fact, without the demand from this source, business in general would be small indeed.

Various Notes.

W. N. Rudd, of Chicago, was a visitor in the wholesale district January 31. The prime object of his visit to New York was to meet his daughter, who has been prominent in Red Cross work at the front since the United States entered the war. She was due to arrive that date with her husband, an officer in the medical corps, and a month-old baby, both to be introduced to grandpa as additions to his family.

Another Chicago visitor was Private Clemenson, son of Christian Clemenson, florist, of 7801 South Shore avenue, of that city. He is located at the base hospital, in the old Greenhut building, at Sixth avenue and Eighteenth street, New York, in executive service.

The many friends of John Donaldson, Patchogue, L. I., were pleased to see him in town last week after a long absence. He has fully recovered from his recent illness.

Posters are distributed throughout the wholesale district announcing the twelfth annual entertainment of the Greek-American Florists' Association, at the Palm Garden, Fifty-eighth street and Lexington avenue, the evening of February 27.

Joseph H. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was in town January 28, and left the same evening with the party going to the Carnation Society's convention.

The new Hotel Commodore, opened last week at Lexington avenue and Forty-second street, adjoining the Grand Central Terminal, has established a flower stand. The foyer of the hotel is lavishly decorated with palms and plants; indeed, in the opinion of all who have seen it, it is the finest example of hotel decoration ever seen in New York. It is understood that the work was carried out under the direction of F. R. Heaton, the florist of the Hotel Biltmore.

J. Howard Thompson, the sweet pea grower of Kennett Square, Pa., was a recent visitor.

Secretary John Young and Philip F. Kessler returned February 2, from the meeting of the executive board of the S. A. F. held January 31 and February 1 in Detroit.

W. L. Rock, of Kansas City, was a visitor in New York following the Cleveland and Detroit meetings last week.

Many expressions of sympathy have reached Joseph H. Fenrich because of the death of his mother February 2.

Richard Wenham had the decoration for Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's dinner for the Belgian minister at her Fifth avenue residence January 26. The color scheme was gold, and Sunburst and Mrs. Aaron Ward roses only were used, in connection with the gold table service of the hostess. Cornucopias were prominent in the decoration.

Jasper R. Lewis, for the last two and one-half years with Ralph M. Ward & Co., announces the severance of his connection with that house this month. He has not yet made definite plans for the future.

Columbus, O.—J. R. Hellenthal is preparing another batch of calceolarias. He says that he sold last season 1,500 plants, ranging in price from 50 cents to $2 each. The colors are beautiful. Some customers purchased several, in order to have an assortment. This year, however, he is not going in so strongly on them, but the plants he has look well. There is a layer of tobacco stems between the rows of pots to keep down insects in the early stages. Later on they are dusted with an insecticide.

IN KHAKI AND BLUE

OUR WAR RECORD.

Florists Following the Flag.

The war page of The Review is de-oted to recording the movements of embers of the trade in the service of eir country, the exploits, adventures, chievements and honors of the many ho have left the pursuits of peace at eir country's call to enter the training amps or naval stations and later to llow the flag to foreign shores to par-cipate in actual engagements. Now at the great war has been won by em and their comrades, and the proc-sses of demobilization are bringing ack the boys in khaki and blue to take eir places once more in the industrial fe of the nation, opportunities to learn f their experiences abroad will be af-rded the readers of these columns from eek to week. Former members of the ade now in the Army of Occupation lso will be represented. Altogether, fact, these notes show that the trade as responded nobly to the call of Uncle am in the hour of need and that our en have had representation in every anch of the service, in practically very section in which the stern busi-ess of warfare has been carried on.

A Brilliant War Record.

A member of the trade who has par-cipated in the most important engage-ents of the war in a company every ember of which is entitled to wear the roix de Guerre, has just returned from broad to his home in Lexington, Ky., await orders to report at Quantico, a., for discharge from the service. unnery Sergeant Theodore Keller, 47th ompany, Fifth Marine Corps, is a rother of John A. Keller, of that city, nd before his enlistment in July, 1914, as engaged with the latter in the flo-sts' business there. Sergeant Keller ad seen service in Mexico and Santo omingo before he went overseas with e troops who were in the drive on hateau Thierry, where he went over e top for the first time. It was after is engagement, while in the Belleau oods, that he received a shrapnel ound. After a month in a hospital in rance, he rejoined his regiment to en-age in the St. Mihiel drive. He was action also in the Meuse-Argonne rive. The four-year term of his en-stment having expired, he was expect-g his discharge when his regiment was rdered, upon the signing of the armis-ce, to advance with the Army of Oc-pation and he marched with the troops the allied armies through northern rance, Belgium and into Luxemburg. st before reaching the Rhine, orders me for his return to this country.

For exceptionally heroic conduct in tion, the entire personnel of the Fifth arines was given permission to wear e Croix de Guerre.

Transferred to Panama.

Captain James W. Anderson, son of lliam Anderson, South Lancaster, ss., has been transferred from Fort Greble, Newport, R. I., to Panama, for duty. Captain Anderson is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has made rapid progress since joining the service. W. N. C.

Oscar W. Eklund.

A Florist's War Record.

Oscar W. Eklund has returned to his old position with the Sterling Floral Co., Sterling, Ill., after sixteen months' service in the army. Mr. Eklund left Sterling for Camp Grant September 19, 1917, where he was made a private in Company I, 342d Infantry. He was transferred from there to Company G, 131st Infantry, 33d Division, at Camp Logan, Tex., April 3, 1918. May 23 his division sailed from New York on the Leviathan, formerly the German liner Vaterland, arriving in Brest, France, Decoration day.

Private Eklund was in active service at the front for six weeks, being wounded August 9 by a machine-gun bullet in the battle of the Somme. He was sent to a French hospital and later removed to United States base hospital No. 37, at Dartford, England. He arrived in New York aboard the hospital ship Saxonia December 26, where he was assigned to the American Red Cross hospital at Grand Central Palace. From here he was transferred to Camp Merritt, N. J., and later to Camp Grant, where he was mustered out January 19.

Mr. Eklund considers it a wonderful experience and particularly exciting for a florist, but does not consider that, from what he saw of France, it is entitled to its appellation of "Sunny France," as he never saw weather conditions suitable for growing flowers and on one occasion the whole camp had to move, as they were knee-deep in water.

Visits French Florist.

Private Karl K. Witthuhn, with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, writes his father, F. C. Witthuhn, whose range is on Schaaf road, at South Brooklyn, near Cleveland, O., a detailed account of his experiences in the city of Angers, France, located 225 miles southwest of Paris on the River Maine, in the department of Maine-et-Loire, with a population of 85,000. Private Witthuhn has not acquired a speaking knowledge of French and therefore enjoyed especially a visit with a French florist who speaks English. The florist's shop is in the heart of the city, and he reports trade much the same as before the war. If this statement was due to optimism, the place nevertheless presented an inviting appearance, with its many handsome plants and large stock of jardinieres, fern dishes, etc. Cut flowers were conspicuous by their absence, as the trade seemed to be chiefly in designs made of tin ornamented with painted artificial flowers, which are largely used in funeral and cemetery work in France. The plants were chiefly chrysanthemums in different varieties about the size of Bonnaffon.

Private Witthuhn is at a base hospital recovering from illness.

Two Florist-Fighters.

Albert J. Diserens, of the firm of A. J. Diserens & Co., florists and landscape architects, Cedar Rapids, Ia., was a son of Frederick L. Diserens, Cedar Rapids, whose death is chronicled in this issue. The range of A. J. Diserens & Co. comprised 10,000 feet of glass and was looked after by members of the Diserens family when Albert J. Diserens was called to the colors in July, 1918. He was in training at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., until December, when he returned to his home in Cedar Rapids just before the beginning of the last illness of his father. Frederick L. Diserens II, his brother, is a horticulturist. He is a member of Company M, 32nd Engineers, Fourth Battalion, A. E. F.

Woodruff Coming Home.

Sergt. Stiles D. Woodruff, of the 302nd Feld Artillery, son of Watson S. Woodruff, seedsman, of Orange, Conn., is reported as en route from the Verdun front to a port of embarkation for the United States.

Twenty-two additional pounds in weight is in itself ample compensation for having helped Uncle Sam out in his task of squelching the Potsdam gang, in the opinion of Private Harry P. Langhans, Pittsburgh, Pa., who has returned recently from a sixteen days' demobilization period at Camp Sherman, O. His military training began September 4, 1918, at Camp Forest, Ga., where he was identified with the Fourth Provisional Regiment Engineers. Home again, Mr. Langhans is delighted with Uncle Sam's treatment of the boys in khaki. He also says he cannot give enough praise to that wonderful institution, the Y. M. C. A., as a military coöperative. He is junior member of the firm of McGrath & Langhans and is a cousin of Secretary Theodore P. Langhans, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. E. E. S.

BOSTON.

The Market.

With the exception of roses there is a better supply of flowers available now. Roses remain in short supply, but a few days will see larger arrivals. Prices hold well up compared with recent quotations. Carnations have averaged $6 per hundred for a week past, but now show signs of weakening, with heavier arrivals. The quality is superior. Violets remain scarce. Pansies are coming in more abundantly. Sweet peas are in heavier supply and prices have declined. There is a good supply of lilies and they are cheaper; the same is true of callas.

Freesia is in good supply and of exceptional quality. Guernsey Golden Spurs, Paper Whites and Iris tingitana complete the bulbous offerings. Iris has sold at $6 to $8 per dozen. Calendulas are more abundant and nice snapdragons are arriving. There is a good supply of Cattleya Trianæ and Oncidium splendidum. Some nice gardenias are seen. Asparagus is in only moderate demand. Flowering plants continue in short supply.

Various Notes.

Leonard Barron, of Garden City, N. Y., was the lecturer at Horticultural hall February 1. His subject was "Gardening Conditions After the War." He spoke thoughtfully and with a spirit of optimism. He made reference to the quarantine on plants from abroad and this brought out considerable discussion, all the speakers being antagonistic to the action of the Federal Horticultural Board. Among those taking part in the discussion were J. K. M. L. Farquhar, W. H. Elliott, C. Van der Voet, Robert Cameron, George N. Smith, W. N. Craig and Arthur E. Horton. February 8 Mr. Horton will lecture on "Land Drainage, Its History, Problems and Possibilities."

Every gardener and commercial grower should plan to attend the lecture at Horticultural hall February 15 by Dr. B. T. Galloway, of Washington, on "Protecting American Crop Plants Against Alien Enemies." The lecturer stands close to the Federal Horticultural Board and will unquestionably receive a warm welcome.

The flower show to be given under the auspices of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club in Horticultural hall February 18, the only exhibition of its kind scheduled for Boston this season, promises to be a fine one. Carnations will be a prominent feature, but there will be groups of choice orchids and other attractive exhibits. The judges will be William Anderson, W. H. Judd and Henry Penn.

Peter Anderson, one of James Wheeler's employees, was awarded the first prize of $25 in the Boston American competition for war garden reports.

Iris tingitana from Frank P. Putnam, of Tewksbury, and J. K. Chandler & Son has been in the local market since January 15. The latter firm also has excellent sweet peas and freesias.

L. J. Reuter, late of Westerly, R. I., and now of Waltham, Mass., is doing an excellent business as a plant broker and is much gratified at the success of his venture.

January proved to be an abnormally warm month here. There was an excess of 363 degrees in temperature over the same month in 1918. The lowest temperature was 2 degrees above zero. Rainfall amounted to 3.66 inches, which is below normal. Ground hog day, February 2, was clear and brilliant and, if this adage holds good, there should still be winter weather ahead.

B. A. Snyder & Co. report increased business since moving to their present commodious quarters. They will make the manufacturing of wire frames a special feature.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, are having excellent success with the Columbia rose.

The death of Mrs. E. M. Gill removes a familiar figure from local horticultural circles. The writer remembers Mrs. Gill as an exhibitor for some twenty-five years. She was undoubtedly one of the most active and intelligent lady florists in the United States and until the last two or three years visited all of our local exhibitions.

Duncan Finlayson showed a finely flowered plant of cymbidium, a cross of Queen Alexandra, at Horticultural hall January 25, which received a silver medal.

Prof. A. G. Hecht, of Amherst, has been discharged from the service and is busily engaged in his floricultural duties. He is now arranging the horticultural program for Farmers' week, commencing March 17.

As illustrating the open nature of the winter here, snowdrops are blooming in warm localities and other spring bulbs are well advanced. W. N. C.

Herbert Sloane, who is widely known in the east as a salesman for florists' supplies, has joined the Boston Florists' Supply Co., permanently, he says.

Thomas Galvin has spent thirty-three consecutive summers at Nantucket. He says there has never been a day when he was there that he has missed going into the water for his daily swim. He has had some exciting experiences, also. During the big storm of 1898, when a heavy sea was running, he caught sight of a man in the water, a long distance from the shore, in distress. Mr. Galvin rescued the distressed swimmer in this instance, and in other cases he has saved the lives of bathers who were in danger. Sconset, the part of the coast where Mr. Galvin's cottage is located, has one of the roughest beaches on the New England coast, moreover.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"The problem of the future for the grower," observed John Bertermann, of Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, "will be the most complex in our whole experience. Fortunately, the popularity of the basket in funeral work provides opportunity to grow a larger assortment of stock than otherwise would be expedient." Our veteran confrere was hurrying out to keep an appointment and was caught on the wing, so to speak. He springs a surprise on the boys when he drops in at the store now and then. A stranger would not recognize him as the head, in view of his youthful appearance.

John V. Laver, of Erie, Pa., deplores the shortage in roses and is undecided as to adding a couple of houses, each to be 235 feet long, for their culture. When he reads the following we feel positive he will decide to go ahead and build. The story is told of a soldier, home from France, having faced German bullets and gas unflinchingly. On his way over he decided he would propose to the girl of his choice as soon as he was discharged. But when he arrived at the home of his charmer, with a box of candy under his arm and a rose in his buttonhole, he almost repented of his resolve. The young woman, noting his embarrassment, divined the cause and decided to help him out. "I'll give you a kiss for that rose," said she softly. The exchange was quickly made. Then the returned soldier dashed for the door. The girl reached him as he opened it and tearfully inquired the cause of his haste. "I am going for more roses," he answered firmly.

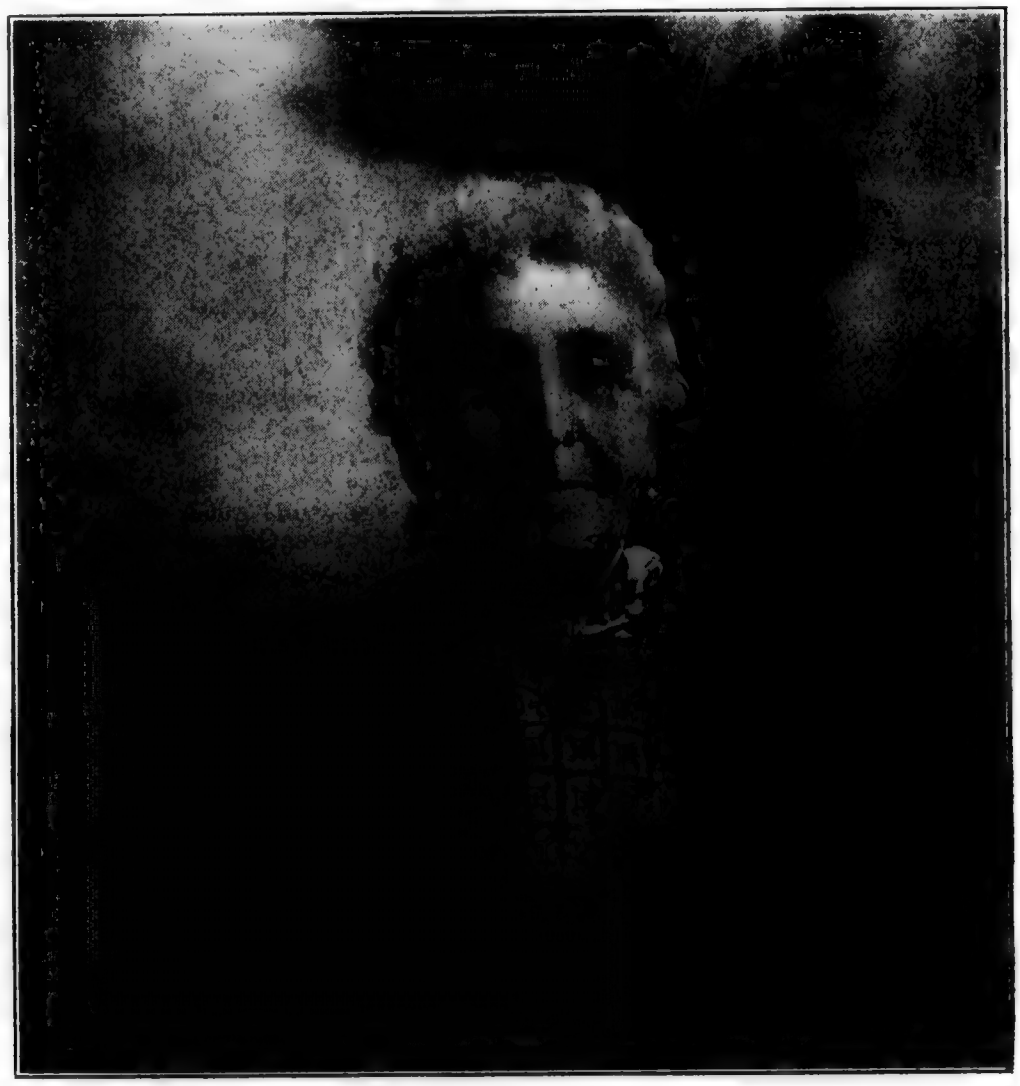
Anthony Wiegand's Sons Co., of Indianapolis, conceived the idea of forming a subtropical scene in part of the show house. George Wiegand had a number of alligators sent up from his home in the Everglades, and undoubtedly the collection is the finest of its kind ever shown under similar conditions. All have names, from Big Anthony, a hoary old saurian of uncertain age, to Tiny Tim, the pet of the crowds of youngsters who spend hours watching their antics. As Homer Wiegand observed, "while the names of some of them are as Greek to the uninitiated, it is the effect that is sought, and that is accomplished." This season, owing to the phenomenal rush of business, all hands will keep closely at work and not allow time, even, to be slack—a firm resolution.

* * * *

W. W. Horlacher, Dayton, O., has a bed 3x54 feet of Eucharis amazonica, which is believed to be the largest size known commercially on this continent. Three crops of the waxy, ivory-white blooms are cut in the year, the crop at Christmas being the heaviest. The plants have not been disturbed for several years; just dried off and mulched after starting up, following a short period of rest. Mealy bug is their only enemy, and it is kept down easily. Stephanotis floribunda growing in the same house recalls the time when this plant was seen in every conservatory. With other revivals, it will again be popular in these days when the public taste is tending toward the choicer flowers. W. M.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Ellen M. Gill.



The pioneer among women florists, as well as the most famous woman florist, Mrs. Ellen M. Gill of Medford, Mass., is dead at the age of 88 years. Mrs. Gill grew flowers for the Boston market for fifty years and her interest in the florists' business continued after the infirmities of increasing years compelled her retirement.

Of Puritan ancestry, Mrs. Gill numbered John Alden and Richard Warren among her forbears. At the age of 19 she was married to George Gill and the first home of the couple was at Melrose, Mass. In 1854 they removed to Medford and it was at the Medford home that Mrs. Gill's opportunity came, when her husband purchased the property which became the family home, together with a range of greenhouses. It was not only the greenhouse stock which interested Mrs. Gill, but the outdoor flowers as well, and within a few months the flowers grown by her were noted throughout the region roundabout. In 1865 Mrs. Gill was admitted to membership in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. In 1870 she built the first of four greenhouses upon her grounds and embarked upon her career as a commercial grower. She specialized in roses, carnations and callas. She was one of the first florists to grow violets for the market. Marechal Niel was the first hybrid rose grown indoors at her range, but other varieties were added later.

It was her great love of flowers which inspired Mrs. Gill's activities in their culture and enabled her to achieve such distinguished success. Her interest in the trade's activities continued up to the last years of her life and she was a familiar figure at the various shows and exhibitions of Boston and vicinity.

Mrs. Gill was noted also for her benefactions to the sick, to whom her gifts of flowers were generous and frequent. Twice each week, during the active years of her career, she sent large donations to the Flower Mission of Boston. Veteran florists recall Mrs. Gill as a grower, designer and exhibitor of exceptional ability, and as one whose fine character inspired the highest esteem and the warmest friendship.

Mrs. Gill some years ago was elected to honorary membership in the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston. Funeral services were held at her late home in Medford, February 1, when there was a large attendance, including a number connected with the trade. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

Mrs. Ellen M. Gill.

Michael Kronis.

Michael Kronis, proprietor of Pittsburgh's Pennsylvania railroad station's flower shops and the shop in Penn avenue, East Liberty, of the Alpha Floral Co., died January 28 in Mercy hospital, after a lingering illness. Mr. Kronis, who was 53 years of age, was born in Sparta, Greece, and came to America in 1880. He first located in Chicago, removing to Pittsburgh fourteen years ago and immediately opening a flower shop in the Union station. This enterprise proved so successful that a year later he started a similar one in the corridor of the East Liberty station. Less than a year ago Mr. Kronis inaugurated the Alpha Floral Co., with a large and beautifully equipped store nearby on Penn avenue. His health began to fail three years ago, but he continued active in business until last summer, which he spent on the Atlantic coast.

Mr. Kronis was a member of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club. He is survived by two brothers, Nicholas and John Kronis, who will succeed him in business. Mr. Kronis was highly esteemed in the trade. E. E. S.

Milton Alexander.

The many friends among the florists of Milton Alexander, who traveled for Lion & Co., New York city, will regret to learn of his death, which occurred last week in New York. His illness began while he was calling on the trade in Detroit, but he was able to reach home before the end came. Mr. Alexander's itinerary gave him a wide acquaintance among the florists and his kindly greeting and welcome presence will be missed by all who knew him.

John T. Milliken.

John T. Milliken, 66 years old, millionaire chemical manufacturer, mining and oil operator, died at his home at St. Louis January 31, following an illness of two weeks. He contracted a severe cold, which developed into pneumonia.

Mr. Milliken was probably one of the wealthiest of St. Louisans. His wealth was estimated at between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000. In addition to his large chemical investments, he was interested in mine and oil properties in Oklahoma and Texas. In 1915 he sold his interests in the Golden Cycle Mine in the Cripple Creek district in Colorado for $4,500,000 to an English syndicate. He also was interested heavily in oil promotions in Oklahoma and Texas. He disposed of a part of his oil holdings in April, 1916, to the Sinclair Oil & Refining Co., at an enormous profit.

After disposing of most of his large holdings Mr. Milliken became interested in the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. On his country estate at Crescent, Mo., one of the picture places of the middle west, he built greenhouses containing 200,000 feet of glass. They were devoted entirely to roses.

The business of the wholesale florist company will go on without change. Although Mr. Milliken financed the concern at its inception and held a majority of the stock, he left the management to a board of directors composed of well-known St. Louis florists, who chose David Geddis as president.

W. J. Meldrum.

W. J. Meldrum, dealer in seeds and plants, at Sacramento, Cal., whose death occurred December 27, formerly was connected with the East Lawn Conservatories, located on Kay street, in that city, of which Moore Bros. are proprietors now, operating this establishment in their own name. Mr. Meldrum bought the Sellers Floral Co. after the sale of the conservatories.

Columbus, O.—Herman W. Kropp, of the Cottage Rose Gardens, is again at the front with a fine lot of calceolarias and cinerarias, amid a general assortment of plants for the retail trade. He observed that a salesman for a pottery concern mentioned that he could more easily sell geraniums than pots, as the former are so scarce that everyone is inquiring where they may be found.

The Review brings results.

THE ground hog always sees his shadow, but winter is on its last lap.

EXCEPT for the war taxes this is rapidly becoming again a free country.

THE man who complains about low prices usually is the one whose policy is to ask just a little less than his competitors.

QUALITY is what is most needed. It will not take long to again crowd the markets with low grade stock. Grow it good.

THE growers wear a smile of content and an air of satisfaction; the season many feared would be their undoing is turning out the best on record.

FOR a quality carnation there was nothing at last week's Cleveland convention which could challenge Laddie, a Dorner product. It also has made the highest average prices in the market this season.

THE trade this season is paying its bills with a promptness never before known; the slow pay man has had to mend his financial ways or get no goods. Let's not backslide when conditions become easier.

ONE of the students has figured it out that only one family in fifteen in the United States buys flowers. Suppose we all go to it to make it only two; the result, according to the War Industries Board's census figures, recently published in The Review, would be to add more than $46,000,000 to the volume of a year's business.

PROTESTS against the plant quarantine are the order of the day, if we are to judge by reports of conventions and club meetings, letters, circulars and various expressions which reach the offices of The Review in increasing volume, as the seriousness of the effects of the measure become more apparent and the date of its going into effect draws nearer.

ANOTHER movement has been started to organize a society of florists to include all the southern states.

HELP was so short that the peony specialists, as a class, did not divide the usual number of plants in the last two years. The result may be an unusual quantity of cut blooms next May and June.

THE florist who is critical as to his own work at length finds people praise it, whereas the florist who says of the stuff that goes out, "It is good enough," eventually finds most of the customers trading elsewhere.

IN a funeral notice, "Please omit flowers" does not mean no flowers will be used, but that the family wishes to provide its own flowers. If florists will so explain it to the public a misconception will be removed.

IT is said that the Hills, of Richmond, have made a new world's record in the dissemination of Rose Premier. Orders run nearly to 400,000 and, with a little more advertising, might easily be carried considerably higher were it possible to secure the Manetti to make the grafts.

ON the work bench in a certain flower store stands a glass flower bowl, though if the bench is out of sight a tin pan would do as well. The bowl is nearly full of wet sphagnum moss. Into it goes every broken-stemmed flower and in the making of designs many a penny is saved.

EVERYONE who holds a stock of high cost merchandise or material is doing his best to hold prices up until he can unload, but as soon as that person turns buyer he joins the ranks of those who are calling for lower prices. Everyone is buying only for immediate needs and general business is not brisk.

CURIOUSLY, it is those who use the public utilities, and not the owners of them, who demand that the government take its hands off the railroads, the express and wire companies at the earliest possible date. In the experience of florists, the government has made no gain in the operation of these utilities except by doing things the same government forbade private owners to do.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

A large New York bank, with connections all over the country, sizes up the general business situation as follows:

"The tendency of prices to fall would indicate that the readjustment of industry to a peace basis is proceeding somewhat more rapidly than the more conservative prophets of two months ago would have admitted was possible. This tendency has spread out from the basic industries and is now being felt in the textile markets. Such reductions were inevitable. Their immediate effect is to curtail the orders of those who hope for still lower levels soon and to stimulate the efforts of those who have large stocks on hand to dispose of them in foreign markets. Examples of heroic treatment of the situation are not wanting and many producers and merchants are scaling down their inventories and pocketing their losses, hoping to offset them somewhat through a resulting earlier revival of business. There is considerable idleness throughout the country, especially in the industrial states, where cancellation of war contracts and the return of soldiers is creating a serious situation."

NOW EXPLAINING TO CONGRESS.

The trade's protests are being heard in Washington, as witness the following newspaper dispatch, which shows we have got the Federal Horticultural Board into the position of having to explain its acts to the power which created the board:

"Congressmen are receiving many letters from nurserymen and florists protesting against the quarantine against foreign plants announced by the Federal Horticultural Board to take effect June 1 next. A letter from C. L. Mallatt, chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, was read to the House. The letter defended the order as necessary for protection of fruit and agricultural interests. Representative Mann said the quarantine would affect a great many florists and nurserymen disastrously."

IS IT A KNOCK OR A BOOST?

Our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," has pull in it as well as sentiment. The publicity campaign has not been in vain if it makes this suggestion familiar to the people, even if it is used at times in ways the committee had not looked for. One of the press syndicates has sent to newspapers all over the country a cartoon featuring a nondescript figure, of whom a legend below affirms that "Lafe Bud has dropped out o' th' Red Cross an' is savin' up fer a floor lamp. Talk is cheap unless you 'say it with flowers.'" Anyway, the dear public is becoming familiar with our slogan to the extent that it has got into the funny column. Let's wait and see what the movies do with it.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Shipping is keeping up beyond all expectations, with city business running neck and neck. There is, however, a change in the supply of stock reaching the market. Orders for St. Valentine's day are coming in heavily, and from present indications there may not be enough roses to go around; that is, in the short and medium lengths. There is, however, enough of the long-stemmed stock to answer immediate needs and no shortage is looked for. Prices hold up. Beauties continue on the short side.

The carnation situation is changed, there being enough to go around on account of a decreased demand. Prices remain satisfactory. Orchids are in request for St. Valentine's day and, fortunately for the retailer, there is and will be a large cut. Violets continue to come in heavily and, like the orchids, there are more than enough for immediate needs and there probably will be plenty of them for St. Valentine's day. Valley remains scarce, with no change in the situation looked for. There are plenty of sweet peas in all lengths of stem. The quality is good and the prices satisfactory.

Easter lilies continue short, also callas. Yellow narcissi are extremely scarce and are almost entirely off the market, while Paper Whites are fairly abundant. Tulips are arriving more plentifully, but as the supply increases the demand also grows and there are not enough to go around. There are more jonquils, but Roman hyacinths are on the short side. Freesia continues in good supply. Calendulas still are scarce.

There is no change in the green goods market; everything is plentiful.

January Business.

January has made a new record in this market, giving most of the wholesalers the largest total of sales ever rung up in the first month of the year; at least double the record for January, 1918, which was the heatless month, and considerably exceeding January, 1917, which was unusually good. Stock was not so scarce as was expected; indeed, there have been many Januaries during which the market has been tighter, but the demand was strong enough to hold prices steadily above those of other years.

Weather in January.

The first few days of January were seasonable, but the following three weeks were the best January weather the trade ever experienced and particularly helpful in view of the trade's urgent need for flowers. The mean temperature for the month was 31 degrees, compared to 13 degrees last January and 23 degrees as the normal. The percentage of sunshine was sixty, against forty-two per cent of the possible as normal. It made a wonderful difference, not only in the drain on the coal pile, but in the production of stock.

Dropped Trade's Representatives.

R. R. McCormick, of the Tribune, and Victor F. Lawson, of the News, have been appointed members of the Forest Preserve Commission in place of William A. Peterson and J. C. Vaughan, in spite of the fact that there probably are not in all Chicago two men better qualified than are the nurseryman and seedsman to advise and direct the development of the great outer park belt. Shelving these two is thought to have been a part of the campaign in the board of county commissioners to cut the power of President Peter Reinberg, by whom they had been selected at the time the Forest Preserve Commission was organized.

Various Notes.

Many friends in the trade mourn the passing of Irene Schouten, wife of Joseph T. Schouten, designer at the Elm street store of the E. Wienhoeber Co., which occurred January 31. She died after only three days' illness with pneumonia. Funeral services were held Sunday at the chapel at 810 North Clark street and interment, which was private, took place February 3. Besides her husband, Mrs. Schouten is survived by two daughters, Marie St. Louis and Florence Oswald.

C. A. Samuelson is on another of his trips to his Idaho orchard.

On a recent trip to Richmond and Terre Haute, E. Wienhoeber and Emil Buettner felt well repaid. Both were pleased with the growth of Rose Premier as seen at the originator's. Mr. Wienhoeber thinks it will be a best seller in every first-class flower store and Mr. Buettner, who had procrastinated, offered to take 10,000 grafted plants, if so many can be supplied. The pair were the guests of Fred Heinl at Terre Haute. One of the places visited was Davis Gardens, which they say turned out to be even better than they had expected, in every respect a model place.

January set a new record for the quantity of funeral work turned out at the W. J. Smyth store. Mr. Smyth started February by remaining at home, ill.

Twenty-eight years in the flower business is quite a while, but F. R. Weissgerber, 3451-57 North Hamilton avenue, has been at it since 1891. He is not one of those who are content to wait for business; he keeps something doing to stir up the demand. His latest is a folder entitled "Where Skill Is Required in the Floral Art," which seems like skillful advertising of funeral work except that the minimum prices, wreaths from $2 up and sprays from $1.25 up, look a little low for these times.

The A. L. Randall Co. recently increased its capital $50,000, to $350,000, for the purpose of extending its operations, in connection with some new lines.

John T. Muir spent several days of last week on a trip in Michigan. January was an exceptionally good month at his store on Grand boulevard, much of the funeral work being of an unusually elaborate character. He says he made wreaths up to $250, a sum which should command a pretty fair article even in these times.

The Lombard Floral Co., Lombard, Ill., has given the Moninger Co. an order for another house 42x246, to go up at once.

T. E. Waters says the use of brown dyed toothpicks saves much stock. There's an idea for you.

C. J. Michelsen says the January sales of the E. C. Amling Co. not only were more than double those of the heatless January of last year, but that they exceeded the record of January, 1917, by almost thirty per cent.

A. T. Pyfer was pleased to receive a visit February 3 from two former employees who had gone to war. One was Harry Gardner, who was recently discharged from a base hospital unit at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., and the other was Louis Ancarola, who has returned from overseas, being with the 108th Engineers. Mr. Ancarola was wounded by shrapnel in September and carries gold chevrons on both sleeves. Neither of them looks any the worse for his experiences.

Spending a fortnight on a trip east, Frank M. Johnson is investigating sources of supply in the various lines handled by the A. L. Randall Co. During the war many factories went into government work, but these now are resuming peace production and many items florists use promise soon to become more plentiful than they have been for a year and a half.

August Juergens, Jr., of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is confined to his home with pneumonia.

Visitors.

On his way to Richmond, Ind., after attending trade gatherings at Nashville, Cleveland and Detroit, Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, Tex., was a visitor here February 1. Mr. Kerr is chairman of the S. A. F. committee on credits and collections, of which C. L. Washburn and Fred Lautenschlager are members, and conferences on the work of the committee and the bureau were held during the day. Widely as Mr. Kerr has traveled, February 2 was his first visit to Richmond.

George Valker, of Minot, N. D., was here this week on one of his frequent visits to keep in touch with the world's greatest flower market.

J. J. Hess was in town February 3, on his way home to Omaha from the S. A. F. directors' meeting at Detroit. He had Sundayed at Delafield, Wis., where he has relatives.

J. L. Johnson, of De Kalb, one of the prosperous Illinois cities where business always is good, was in town last week on a buying trip.

Harry Taylor, of the Breitmeyer staff, Detroit, spent February 4 in the market.

Two Canadian visitors in the market were W. W. Gammage, of London, Ont.,

The Market.

The unusually fine, warm weather of the last two weeks has been favorable to the florists. It was feared that a serious shortage would develop here the latter part of January, but, while there has never been any surplus stock, there has been enough. The demand continues heavy, though there is not so much funeral work as there was earlier in the winter.

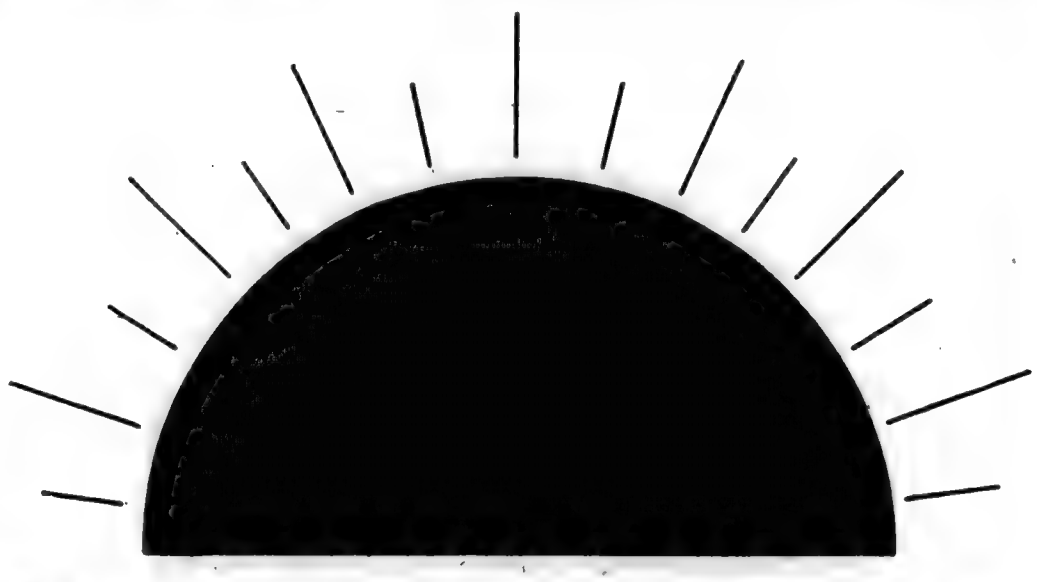
Valley is a thing of the past and sweet peas are scarce. For some reason our growers did not plant many sweet peas this year. There are no Roman hyacinths. Our growers simply refused to pay the prices asked for the bulbs. They have scarcely missed them, either.

As to Dutch bulbous stock, we have seen few hyacinths thus far. The bulbs arrived too late to be in bloom yet. Daffodils, especially those from home-grown bulbs, are fine. Again this year Jonquil odorus rugulosus is proving its worth. It multiplies wonderfully in the open and our home-grown bulbs force admirably and are always in demand. Home-grown Narcissus Golden Spur also is in evidence at present. In the open the fragrant bush honeysuckles are in bloom and the first forsythia and Spiræa prunifolia are showing color. It will be ten days before they are in full bloom, however. In sheltered places snowdrops and Southern Queen daffodils are showing bloom and hyacinths are well budded.

Various Notes.

A new company was organized in the city last week to carry on the business of planting and ornamenting home grounds. It consists of a landscape gardener, an interior decorator, a tree surgeon and an expert in grading and planting. We do not know the official name of the concern as yet.



The growers are working overtime now to get a good stock of spring bedding plants ready. An immense demand is looked for, as it is reported that real estate companies have let contracts for the erection of 700 bungalows this spring and there is a heavy building program in prospect for the summer. This means a demand for bedding and hardy stock this summer and fall.

The florists attending the convention visited the greenhouses in this vicinity January 28. The houses were all in first-class condition and the guests expressed great interest in the growing done here. This annual visit of the florists has become a feature of the convention, as it affords opportunity for an exchange of ideas among the florists of the state.

It is clear that fewer of the older roses will be grown in Tennessee next year than ever before and that probably ninety per cent of the space will be divided among Russell, Ophelia and Columbia. What we need besides is a red rose and a white rose of the class of these three. In this connection it may be of interest to note that Harold Joy has a seedling that showed its first bloom this week. It is a fine red and, being a cross between Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty, is at least bred in the blue. Of course it is too early to judge of its value.

Oscar Geny is ill. He was not able to attend the meetings of the Tennessee florists.

Mrs. Frank Goetz, of Joy's Chattanooga store, attended the meeting of the Florists' Association. Frank Wright, PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market is easier. That is the way the traders describe the decline in prices that was necessary to sell the flowers. It was not much of a decline, two points each on carnations, Romans, freesia and Paper White narcissi and a little less anxiety to secure the expensive grades of roses. It was not apparent at the beginning of the week and it was hardly noticeable at the close of the week, but in the middle of the week it could be seen readily. The traders summed it up by saying that there were more flowers and less business, adding that a change from the favorable weather that we have been enjoying would cut down the supply of flowers and liven things up. Experts on the market assert that the thing to do is to watch the supply. That is the important part. The demand is always there. (N. B. I give this statement as I got it and do not fully indorse it.)

The supply of carnations has been heavier, also that of sweet peas and of bulbous flowers. The latter have been reinforced by daffodils, a few French Trumpets and Golden Spurs. Roses are not more plentiful. The heavy crop of cattleyas is passing. Easter lilies continue scarce, high in price and with something to be desired in the quality of many of them. Valley is poor. There is a steady supply of fine lilac. This market seems to prefer fancy single violets to double violets in the ratio of two to one. All the Asparagus plumosus sprays, both southern and local, that come to market find ready sale.

The Florists' Club.

The notice given out last week in this column about the club members dining together at the Adelphia before the meeting February 4 was an error, yet it came from headquarters.

Max Schling, of New York, was the attraction of the evening at the club meeting, with a talk and demonstration on color combinations in the arrangement of flowers that proved an attraction to the members and their friends who gathered in the roof garden of the hotel.

Mr. Schling said he had spent $42,000 on advertising in one year. He believes in the F. T. D.

Edward Reid put up six vases of wonderful orchid sweet peas for J. Howard Thompson, of Kennett. S. S. Pennock Co. displayed a fine vase of Freesia Purity.

The Girls Have Come.

The girls have come so quietly that there has been little comment on their arrival, yet what startling strides they have made, when one compares the present with a year ago! Then they were here and there; today they are everywhere. In the offices, at the telephones, behind the counters, in the warehouses, in the commission houses, in the factories, in the greenhouses, in the packing rooms, in the shipping rooms, in the sorting rooms, at the potting benches, on the delivery cars. There is not one single department of our business where girls have not made their appearance as workers, and, in most cases, they are doing well, so well, in fact, that it seems more than likely that they will hold their own even after the men have come back from "over there."

Hose.

Some years ago J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, came out to talk begonias. When he had finished, he looked over the place and, while doing so, asked why 50-foot sections of hose were used. He said that 50-foot sections were extravagant, that 25-foot sections were much better. Mr. Peterson supported this assertion logically. He asked the price of 2-inch water pipe, the price of ¾-inch hose and the life of each.

The lesson was learned. It has been put into practice since and it has saved money.

Reminiscences.

Few business men are more alert today than Harry Bayersdorfer. He took a few moments from a busy day to go into the past. It occurred when Mr. Bayersdorfer heard of the death of Charles Fox, Sr. "I knew him well," he said, "he was a man to be trusted. His word was his bond. Charles Fox was foreman for Hugh Graham, at Eighteenth and Thompson streets. When I was selling for M. M. Bayersdorfer & Co., in those days, I walked, carrying a box from North Fourth street to Eighteenth and Thompson. The first stop was at Wolff's, in Ridge road; then I went on out to Ferguson's and Alburger's, then to Rising Sun, and so on. Car fare then was 7 cents, four tickets for a quarter. When we asked for our fare we were told if we did not want to walk they would get someone else; so we walked. Dinner was 15 cents and we tipped the waiter once a week, maybe. Pennock Bros. were in the cellar on Twelfth street in those days. When we went in, it was, 'Hello, Thomas,' to Thomas Cartledge, and 'Hello, Johnnie,' to John Westcott. They liked us little shavers to be chummy with them." Here the present came back with a jump as a runner from one of the stores claimed Mr. Bayersdorfer's attention.

Hugh Graham was a high-class man; he held a big position in John Wanamaker's store.

The Weather.

The weather during the month of January has been extraordinarily favorable to production. This is not nearly so apparent in the crops now as it is likely to be in those to follow. It is hardly possible to imagine a midwinter month with so much sunshine and so little severity.

The character of the growth of all plants under glass has been vastly improved and cultural operations, often delayed for a month or six weeks from lack of good weather, have been pushed through. Good spring crops should result.

Various Notes.

The Century Flower Shop reopened January 28, with a beautiful display of baskets of flowers with price tags attached to each, always a feature at the Century. Ophelia roses and Purity freesia were freely used.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer thinks there must be more sweethearts than usual this year, to judge from the large orders for valentines. Most of them are for the higher grades, also. The little vase to hold a few choice roses or other flow-rists. Already there has been a considerable diminution in the demand for cut flowers, as the people have not so much money to spend as when receiving the highly inflated wages of the war period.

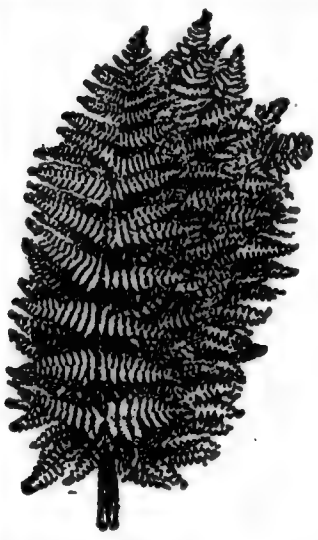
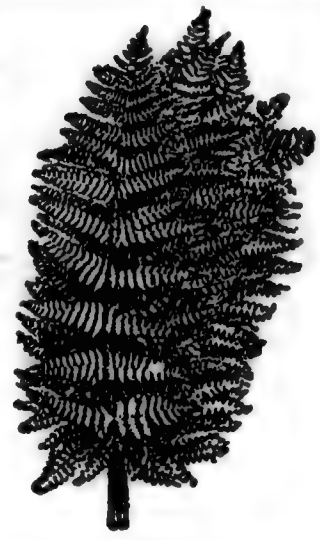
The growers, however, are approaching the spring season with higher hopes than a year ago. Then there was nothing but uncertainty and doubt because of fuel conditions and many greenhousemen closed a third or half of their ranges. Now everybody is looking forward to recuperating from last year's conditions and it is expected that there will be the largest amount of benching this spring ever known here. Meanwhile roses are scarce and prices remain above normal for first-grade stock. The supply of carnations is increasing as the days grow brighter and longer, though there has been no oversupply as yet. Bulbous stock is coming along more plentifully.



Various Notes.

Michael Calabrere was arrested a few nights ago at the range of the Budlong Rose Co., Auburn, on a charge of stealing cut roses. Mr. Budlong said that he had been suspicious of the man for nearly a year. In the District court the following morning, Calabrere pleaded guilty to the charge and was fined $20 and costs.



John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., was a visitor in Boston last week.

William Cohen had a narrow escape from serious injury February 3. He was operating an automobile when another vehicle crashed into him, damaging his machine and inflicting minor injuries.

The Market.

Market conditions during the week were good. Stock arriving has been cleaning up daily, with the exception of narcissi and violets, but narcissi still hold up and bring good prices. Jonquils also have been clearing well. Tulips are coming with longer stems than the first arrivals carried. They, too, are in good demand. Roses are still on the short side. Long American Beauties are scarce. Sweet peas are arriving in limited supply. There are few calendulas. The supply of carnations continues to furnish the bulk of stock. Single and double violets are not selling well. Wallflowers are in good demand. The shortage of greens continues. Adiantum is in good demand.

Various Notes.

George Harris has returned from a trip to Pittsburgh, Pa., where he attended the funeral of a relative.

Cleveland gave the first of its soldiers to return from overseas duty a happy and noisy welcome when the 331st company passed through the city on its way to Camp Sherman. The 331st was made up largely of boys from this city. Frank Ritzenthaler also returned with this regiment. The union depot hill, over which the boys passed, was covered with carnations and each soldier carried a carnation in his gun barrel when they paraded through the streets to Gray's Armory, where they met their relatives. The carnations were from the carnation show.

Joseph Kalinsky has returned to the city after receiving his discharge. Mr. Kalinsky was formerly with the Taylor Flower Shop.

HOW TO USE PARCELS POST

SUCCESSFUL SHIPPING.

Quick and Safe.

"We do not recommend parcels post shipments and will not be responsible for same."—A San Francisco Florist.

"We do not recommend parcels post shipments and will not be responsible for them, but will use every precaution in packing."—A St. Paul Florist.

"All flowers shipped by express."—A Nashville Florist.

"We ship flowers by express. Orders sent by parcels post at your own risk."—A Toronto Florist.

These expressions stand out in some of the advertisements that have reached Rosemont Gardens, of Montgomery, Ala., and it always has seemed to me as if the parcels post shipments have not been rightly made or have not been given a sufficient trial.

Has Been Successful.

Rosemont Gardens has used the parcels post ever since the system was established. We will admit at first there was some trouble, but this was before the system was perfected. Now all small cut flower shipments are made by parcels post and there is no fear that any shipment will be delayed. Our delays and the complaints of mishandling of shipments have been reduced to a minimum.

Ordinary parcels post matter is classed as fourth-class mail and is handled in the following manner: A parcel is mailed and usually is sent into the parcels post terminal and is routed to the parcels post terminal nearest the consignee. Finally the parcel reaches the post-office of the consignee and either is sent out by the parcels post carrier or a card is sent to the consignee asking him to call for a package at the general delivery window.

Prompt Delivery

Ordinary parcels post service is about the slowest of all mail service.

Use Special Delivery.

Now let us consider the special delivery parcels post, which is the service employed by Rosemont Gardens. This is the way to send all cut flowers, for quick service. Every box that goes out of this place by parcels post has a special delivery stamp on it. With this stamp on the box it receives the same treatment and handling that a first-class letter would get. In other words, the special delivery stamp makes a first-class package out of fourth-class matter. A package which is mailed at the post-office is sent on the first trip to the depot and makes the first train out. There is absolutely no delay.

The delivery of express packages is limited to a prescribed zone in each city, although in some small places there is no delivery at all. Parcels post special delivery packages are delivered to a much wider zone in cities having carrier service, and in smaller places, where there is no carrier service, delivery will be made within a half mile of the post-office. Even on rural routes, consignees living within a mile of the post-office and within a half-mile of the rural route may have their packages delivered to their doors.

The majority of express packages are delivered twelve to twenty-four hours after reaching consignee's express office. Packages arriving at night are not delivered until the next day. When the consignee lives outside the delivery zone a card is sent by mail, notifying him that a package is held at the express office subject to call. A package arriving Saturday after 3 p. m. usually awaits the morning delivery Monday. On the other hand, special delivery parcels post packages arriving before midnight are delivered the same night by special delivery messenger service. Packages are delivered Sundays and holidays.

Low Cost and Reliability.

The minimum express charge is 26 cents and it usually costs from 30 to 40 cents for a small box, whereas parcels post packages mailed to points within

MR. JOHN T. MUIR,
4647 Grand Blvd., City.

Dear Mr. Muir:

It might be of interest to you to know how much the officers of this bank appreciated the admirable taste which you displayed in the arrangement of the design and the beautiful flowers used in the floral piece furnished by you at the time of Mr. Lampert's funeral.

It was an occasion on which we felt that the best was none too good and we were very much gratified at your efforts in that direction. It was also spoken of by Mrs. Lampert afterwards as being the most wonderful assemblage of flowers that she had ever seen.

Feeling confident that you would be pleased to know of these favorable comments, I have taken the liberty of writing you this letter.

Very sincerely,

H. R. KENT, V. P.

the first, second and third zones usually cost less than 25 cents. That is up to five pounds and the 25 cents includes the cost of the special delivery stamp. Rosemont Gardens charges the customer 25 cents postage on each package delivered in the first and second zones and 10 cents extra for each additional zone. This covers the entire cost of delivery and leaves a few odd cents to apply on the cost of boxing. However, this charge to the customer is a good bit cheaper than express charges would be.

As to the reliability of the parcels post service, where the flowers are packed properly and the addresses of the shipper and of the consignee appear plainly on the package, there is hardly a chance of nondelivery or delay.

Every florist should get the post-office literature on the parcels post system and study the matter. Then give it a thorough try-out. Have a good, tested pair of scales and put the proper amount of postage on the package and it can be mailed at any time day or night, or on holidays.

During Christmas and Easter week, also Mothers' day week, Rosemont Gardens sends out between 300 and 400 parcels post packages, and it is a rare occurrence to have a complaint. The postal authorities have been most courteous in working with Rosemont Gardens to give us the best of service and the smoothness with which deliveries are made is most remarkable.

Other Advantages.

Ignorance of the working of the special delivery parcels post system is the cause of most shippers shunning it. Once they find out how easy and safe it is, they never think of going back to express shipments on small packages.

You can mail cut flower boxes up to the following limits: Limit on design boxes, 24x24x8 inches; limit on long cut flower boxes, 14x8x36 inches.

Parcels post packages may not only be sent special delivery, but may be sent collect on delivery, or insured, or in any combination desired.

Within the first and second zones fifty pounds may be sent and twenty pounds may be sent into all other zones.

Cards may be placed in parcels post packages bearing the inscriptions, "Merry Christmas," "Happy New Year," or any similar greeting, also bearing the name of the sender. An invoice may be placed in a shipment, giving price, number and quality of goods shipped, the shipper and the salesman,

Try It Out.

Having seen such quotations as the ones at the beginning of this article, I have been tempted more than once to write an article on the advantages of the parcels post, in the hope that fellow florists would again try the method and see if it would not make out-of-town delivery troubles lighter. Rosemont Gardens has certainly made its burdens lighter by the use of parcels post delivery.

Don't try the special delivery parcels post in an offhand manner, but take the trouble to get a small booklet from the post-office, called "Postal Information for Free Distribution," and study the contents. Sending shipments by parcels post is not an experiment, but is an efficient way of doing business.

The Market.

The market this week is short on practically all lines of stock. Roses especially are scarce; carnations barely equal the demand; freesias are coming in good supply, but are sold up well, as this flower can be used either in making up a box or in funeral work. Callas are not overplentiful, and Easter lilies are not on the market at all. There are a few violets, but not enough to equal the demand and sweet peas are in the same case. Orchids are in fair supply and sell up well each day. In fact, this is the case with all lines of stock. The wholesale houses make a practice of closing at noon, as there is no market to speak of after 10 a. m.

There is a good deal of influenza in the city again and, while it is far from being an epidemic, yet the death rate is abnormally high, thus making the demand for funeral work heavy. Then, since peace has been assured, the public is fast getting down to normal conditions and smaller entertainments, such as teas, receptions, etc., are more in evidence. While there is not the lavish use of flowers of former years, yet there are some decorations. An entertainment of this kind without flowers would be much the same for these people as "Hamlet with Hamlet left out."

This question affects everyone who grows an azalea, for example. The important thing is to be present at this meeting and let these men see by your presence that this is a vital question with the florists of Maryland, as well as of the whole country.

Various Notes.

Everyone will be sorry to hear that George Talbot, so well known among the trade, is desperately ill with pneumonia. Mr. Talbot has been for years financial secretary of the club. At the beginning of the war he met with the misfortune of having his boiler blow up one night when the thermometer was zero and his whole range was frozen up. Camp Meade was just starting up at the time and he was offered a position with one of the largest lumber companies of the city at the camp, which he accepted, and he has held this position ever since.

Another on the sick list today was John J. Perry, of the S. S. Pennock Co. Mr. Perry has been in bed for two days, but no serious symptoms have developed and it is hoped he will be about again in a few days. William J. Johnston was also laid up the latter part of last week with a heavy cold, but he may be listed among the convalescents.

There has been a persistent rumor on the street for the last two weeks that Baltimore was to have another wholesale house and it appears to be a fact. George J. Muhly, formerly manager for the Baltimore Wholesale Florist & Supply Co., has for a long time had a vision of an up-to-date wholesale house that would handle everything used by florists. Recently several good opportunities have presented themselves to him and he now has launched this new enterprise. His show rooms, at 512 St. Paul street, are in the heart of the wholesale district. Mr. Muhly is a young man and a hustler. Baltimore has room for such a business; in fact, it needs just such a house, so there is no good reason why this new venture should not be a success.

James L. Towner, for years a salesman with the Griffith & Turner Co., has succeeded Mr. Muhly with the Baltimore Wholesale Florist & Supply Co. Mr. Towner has but one ambition; that is, to make his concern up-to-the-minute in every respect. Mr. Towner has had a lot of experience in salesmanship and should be able to deliver the goods. He will be ably assisted in his new undertaking by Robert Gladman, formerly with the S. S. Pennock Co., who is an old-timer in the wholesale end of the business. With a team like this at its head, the Baltimore Wholesale Florist & Supply Co. should take on new life.

CURTIS THE FLORIST

ing. To make that day a flower day should be the aim of everyone in the trade. There is no reason why it should not be a great day for the trade, with Christmas well past and Easter not yet in sight. There is no reason, moreover, why the trade should not advertise, urging the people to make St. Valentine's day a day of delightful surprises, by "saying it with flowers" to their loved ones. The last month's trade, with prevailing high prices, has proven that there is no telling to what extent American people will buy flowers. When one thinks of the amount of money spent for tobacco to be sent up in smoke, and for booze, to get a sore head, what will be the limit for a product that brings only happiness?

The public will buy flowers to the extent of its love for humanity. This is the reason why our country is leading the world. It has learned to "Say It with Flowers."

In order to establish the right sort of flower market, the trade should not revert to past faults. Demanding outrageous prices because stock is scarce is indeed harmful and one can see the effects of this error every time he steps up to wait on a customer. But then, selling carnations at 25 cents a dozen makes many buyers believe that carnations are as common as clovers. However, this condition is not likely to recur this year. Ferns and paper are high enough to make themselves remembered and, besides, some of the retailers have not made the profits they should have made during the months of high prices, so these same ones, who in former years cheapened carnations, are in hopes of getting their share of profits now that flowers are more plentiful. Present conditions show no reason for selling carnations at less than $1 per dozen at any time or place and, where the majority of the orders go out in boxes at $1.50 per dozen, this is little enough.

The Market.

The weather in this vicinity has continued mild during the week. There is a shortage of stock in most varieties. Roses are extremely scarce, especially Columbia and Ophelia. The quality of the stock is good, however. Carnations are more plentiful, but there is no surplus and the cut continues to move at from $4 to $6 per hundred, with first-class stock bringing $6 straight. Violets are still scarce, but sweet peas are coming in heavier supply. They should be a factor in the market for St. Valentine's day.

The supply of orchids is still good and the quality is extra fine and the florists are using more of them than usual. Prices on Cattleya Trianæ range from $6 to $7.50 per dozen. Naturally preparations are going forward for St. Valentine's day and the local advertising club will do its usual bit to boost the sales for that time.

Various Notes.

The Milwaukee Florists' Advertising Club has operated under its present system for a year. February 1 it will enter on its second year of progressive effort. February 10 is the date set for its annual meeting, which will be held at the Republican House at 7 p. m., when dinner will be served to the entire membership. Reports of officers will be made at that time and a new directorate will be elected for the year. A number of reservations already have been made, inasmuch as there will be several important matters considered at the meeting. The last year has been eminently successful in the opinion of the directors and plans are being formulated for even greater effort during the year to come. There also will be a speaker at this meeting who will talk on a timely subject.

Among those who went to Cleveland from Milwaukee were N. Zweifel, H. V. Hunkel, William R. Schroeder and C. C. Pollworth. H. J. S.

SPRINGFIELD, O.

That there will be a quarter of a million more roses grown this winter for the mailing trade is the opinion of the Schmidt & Botley Co., Inc., one of the many who found it impossible to take advantage of the fuel commissioner's permit to enable them to run their range as usual. A general assortment of stock is grown here.

The George H. Mellen Co., admitting that lemons instead of melons are being handed out in the threatened embargo, has faith that the authorities will see their error in time to permit fall importations. Meanwhile, every means to increase home production will be taken advantage of.

The Good & Reese Co. opines that the demand for good stock will be exceptional, in spite of the mild winter.

The McGregor Bros. Co., having a large southern clientele, believes that the day of shaded prices has passed and customers will be content with 100 cents' worth for $1. Stock looks mighty fine here.

The Leedle Floral Co. grows both plants and cut flowers, specializing in roses. This concern was, it is believed, the first to put up stock in the wrapped bunch form, now generally adopted.

The Market.

Throughout the week the wholesale market has been active, with increasing supplies arriving and good demand. Shipping business also was exceptionally good.

Select Russell and Columbia roses made $35 per hundred and Ophelia, $20. These varieties have the call. The Killarneys are not in oversupply and the demand is for short-stemmed stock. The bright weather has brought the carnations out faster than was expected. All fancy stock brought $8 per hundred, while the lower grades realized from $4 to $6. The demand cleaned up all the good stock daily. There was a big supply of sweet peas of all grades and the price was forced down as low as $7.50 per thousand for fancy, long-stemmed stock, while inferior grades were down to $5. Violets, too, suffered, owing to heavy arrivals, but none sold lower than $5 per thousand. A great crop is expected for the next two weeks and especially for St. Valentine's day, when violets are the one flower most sought after.

Bulbous stock is coming in large supply and Paper Whites have suffered a cut to $3 per hundred. Extra fine lilies were consigned to this market last week. They brought $20 per hundred. Tulips are beginning to arrive, but not, as yet, in large lots. Freesia of fine quality is abundant. Callas and valley sell well, also cattleyas. The market affords a splendid supply of calendulas and mignonette. In greens, flat ferns have been scarce, while there is plenty of galax, asparagus, leucothoe and smilax.

Club Meetings.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular meeting January 27, with a large attendance. Owing to the absence of President Windler and Secretary F. C. Weber, Jr., little business could be transacted. The most important business was laid over for the next meeting which takes place February 10, at which a good attendance is looked for.

The meeting of the County Growers' Association set for February 5 and that of the St. Louis Association of Gardeners, for the same date, were postponed, as members of both associations had planned to attend the florists' Victory banquet that evening.

Various Notes.

C. Young & Sons Co. have had a big week in funeral work. Several large designs, "Billy" Dee stated, were telegraph orders from the east. Charles Young, head of the firm, has just returned from a trip through the western part of Missouri.

The many friends of Henry Ostertag were glad to see him in the wholesale district last week, fully recovered.

J. William Patton, better known in the trade as "Paddy," has leased a store in the wholesale district at 1300 Pine street, and his sign will contain the legend, "Wholesale & Retail Florist." He expects to be open for business February 15.

The St. Louis Florists' Club meets February 6 at C. A. Kuehn's wholesale house. An exhibition of old and new varieties of carnations is the attraction.

Dr. George T. Moore, head of the Missouri Botanical Garden, Dr. B. M. Duggar and Dr. J. M. Greenman, also of the garden staff, have returned home from a recent meeting of the Botanical Society of America, held at Baltimore, Md.

Social affairs will be frequent from now on until Lent, as there are many announcements of weddings, dinners and receptions, which should create a lively trade in flowers, especially among the west end florists. As far as St. Louis is concerned, the winter is over, as old Sol, after being on the job for the last ten days, took a day off February 2 and the ground hog concluded not to return to his winter quarters.

John McAna, of the H. G. Berning force, and Tony Bova, of the Red Bud Floral Co., have received honorable discharge from the army and are back in their old positions.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Berning have returned from a trip through Ohio. They took in the meeting of the Carnation Society, and report a most enjoyable visit at Cleveland.

The St. Louis Seed Co. has mailed out its spring catalogue. The springlike weather last week kept the force busy here.

W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood, is consigning to this market an abundance of fine bulbous stock, especially of Paper Whites.

Nelson Conliff, park commissioner, was elected head of the War Camp Community Service Board, at a meeting of the board last week.

J. F. Ammann, president of the S. A. F., and August H. Hummert, president of the Florists' Club, attended the S. A. F. executive board meeting at Detroit last week. They have returned home much pleased with their trip.

Miss Margaret Kuehn, daughter of C. A. Kuehn, has just graduated from the McKinley high school with high honors. She was the only young lady out of a large class to win a scholarship in Washington University.

John T. Milliken, head of the rose-growing establishment, at Crescent, Mo., known as Mosgiel Gardens, died January 31 at his home at 35 Portland place, St. Louis, of pneumonia following an attack of influenza, at the age of 64 years. He was one of the wealthiest men in St. Louis. The funeral took place February 2. J. J. B.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Conditions in the wholesale market have not changed materially since the last report. It is the general opinion of the retailers that the demand is not so brisk as it should be and that the high prices are considerably to blame for this slack condition. During the last week many of the schools and conservatories have held graduation exercises, but even these did not bring the usual amount of work. It is chiefly funeral work that is keeping the stores busy. Stock is not the least bit plentiful and little is left in the flower market after the morning sales, there being absolutely no oversupply.

Arrivals of roses are not at all large, while prices continue to be high. However, they continue to be of good quality, with splendid foliage. Ophelia, Russell, September Morn, Prima Donna, Ward, Sunburst and Columbia sold well throughout the week. In red varieties few were received, most of them being off crop.

The supply of sweet peas continues to be small, not more than a few hundred arriving each week. The supply of violets is equal to the present demand, which for the last month has been small.

Easter lilies are not plentiful, but meet the demand. Callas are of good quality and sell freely. Paper Whites have been quite plentiful, but toward the last of the week were about all cleaned up. Jonquils are in limited supply and sell readily, bringing $8 per hundred. Carnations, which should be in good supply, are arriving in small quantities. They are of fine quality. Good snapdragon is seen in yellow, white and pink, chiefly the latter.

A small quantity of white lilac is seen occasionally and sells well. Quantities of pussy willow are seen, in which all grades are included. Good orchids are on the market and have sold better the last week. Cypripediums also are of good quality and sell fairly well. Calendulas are seen, but in small supply. Freesia is not plentiful. The market is well supplied with bronze galax, leucothoe and fern leaves. The market is solely dependent on locally grown asparagus, which is inadequate for the demand.

A good selection of blooming plants is seen in all of the stores and includes fine bulbous stock, which sells well. Cyclamens, begonias, primulas and marguerites are included.

Various Notes.

Milton Selinka, of Schloss Bros., Ribbons, Inc., who has just returned from a southern trip, called on the trade in this city during the last few days.

Two of Uncle Sam's boys, both of whom were in the employ of Salter Bros. previous to their enlistment, have returned to this city, both having been honorably discharged. They are William Filby, who saw active service in France, and Edward Veltz, who, for the last twelve months, has been stationed in Boston.

It is interesting to note that during the present winter there has been a decidedly heavier demand for Paper White narcissus bulbs than in previous years among the flower lovers.

St. Valentine's day prospects look good as far as cut bulbous stock is concerned. Several of the growers have benches of daffodils and tulips which will be in fine condition at that time.

Charles W. Curtis has commenced cutting sweet peas, for which he finds a ready market. He has been storing a large collection of cattleyas for a private grower and has been cutting a large number of blooms from them.

Hugo Teute is bringing in some good potted hyacinths, as well as single daffodils. His cut of carnations this winter is not large. He reports excellent business this season.

Cushman & Co., located on Exchange street, report good prospects for the coming season. Good orders and inquiries reach them daily and they say there is every encouragement for them this year.

Albert Rayton, of the Ridge road, Irondequoit, reports good business. During the "flu" epidemic he was particularly rushed with funeral work. He also had charge of the cemetery, at which a number of burials took place within a short period.

For the policemen's ball to be held in the New York state armory early this month, George T. Boucher, besides having charge of the decorations, is to supply nearly 200 corsages of violets, 100 flowers to each bunch, to be distributed among the patronesses. There also will be a number of corsages of roses.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE War Trade Board, January 27, removed all seeds from the export conservation list, with the single exception of red clover.

C. A. NOBIS and J. B. Hughes, Barry, Ill., will open a seed store to be known as the Barry Seed Co. They will deal in farm and vegetable seeds.

THE Food Administration, as of February 1, canceled its price and profit restriction orders on all seeds and with it the licensing regulations. Seedsmen need not turn in their licenses; they may put them in the waste basket or frame them as souvenirs, as suits their fancy.

WATSON S. WOODRUFF, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn., senator from the Fourteenth Senatorial District, in the Connecticut legislature has been made senate chairman of the agricultural committee. This committee has much to do with the development of agricultural matters in his state.

DURING the war exchange steadily went farther and farther against the Hollander. At one time a dollar paid in the United States had shrunk to 80 cents when it got to Holland. Prices had to go up accordingly. Recently exchange has fallen to a point where prices can be reduced to an appreciable extent.

ROBERT NICHOLSON, wholesale dealer in garden and field seeds, Dallas, Tex., has leased for a period of ten years a building to which he intends to add a new story. With the quarters he now occupies, his storage space will total 50,000 square feet. There is trackage for six cars, required for the heavy field seed business of this concern. New equipment will include a seed laboratory, automatic receiving and sacking scales, seed cleaners, etc., at a cost of $10,000.

AT the January meeting of the Blue Earth County Seed Growers' Association, held at Mankato, Minn., plans for a seed show to be held at Mapleton, Minn., in connection with the Mapleton Farmers' Institute, were discussed. It was the sense of the meeting that seed shows should be encouraged for each of the towns of the county in the early part of the winter, these to be followed by a county show at Mankato each year.

NEW SEED BILL AT ALBANY.

Marshal H. Duryea, of the Nungesser-Dickinson Seed Co., calls the attention of the seed trade in New York that a bill has been introduced in the state legislature at Albany entitled "An act to amend the agricultural law, in relation to agricultural seeds and the sale thereof."

"On examining this bill," says Mr. Duryea, "you will note it calls for an absolute percentage of purity and germination, but this, as you no doubt know, is an impossibility, as a margin of tolerance is always necessary. We have, therefore, asked that where the word 'percentage' is used, the word 'approximate' be inserted before 'percentage.'

"Would also call your attention to that part of Section 344 which deals with the exemptions from the provisions of the act, reading: 'When seeds are not sold from a place of business where agricultural seeds are kept for sale, as such, it shall be presumptive evidence that such seeds were not sold or exposed for sale for seeding purposes.'

"This exemption would permit the farmers to buy seeds from other people and sell them, which would act as a discrimination against the seed dealer, and we have asked that this clause be eliminated.

"Have written Mr. Witter, author of the bill, calling his attention to these objections, and think if we secure the desired modifications, a hearing would not be necessary and the bill could be adopted."

ONION SETS TO ENGLAND.

Everette R. Peacock Co., Chicago, has made a number of successful shipments of onion sets to England, amounting in all to several carloads. A specially made ventilated octagon container is used, the sets are packed in excelsior and the boxes reinforced with metal bands. The foreigners have in every case reported satisfactory arrival and an extensive export has now developed in onion sets to Europe.

Mr. Peacock states that seed stocks to cover five times the business of last season have already been received and at present over thirty employees are busy in the actual handling of seed orders and filling packets. The company has estimated its small seed packet requirements at over one million packets. Of this amount half are put up.

PACIFIC COAST SEED NOTES.

The early planting of radish in the Sacramento river seed-growing section of California was damaged to a considerable extent by prolonged cold weather. Much of the acreage had to be replanted. The frost coming at this early date, the yield of seed probably will not be affected, however.

A pure seed bill has been introduced in the present session of the California state legislature. It provides for a division of seed inspection within the office of State Commissioner of Horticulture, the appointment of a botanist to take charge thereof and an appropriation to carry out the provisions of the act.

TERMS OF AGREEMENT.

Should Be Written.

A special reason why the terms of every business transaction should be stated in writing, when practicable, appears in a decision handed down lately by the Minnesota Supreme court in the case of the Caldwell Milling & Elevator Co. vs. L. L. May & Co., Inc., 169 Northwestern Reporter, 797.

The plaintiff sued to recover the agreed price of a quantity of onion seed sold and delivered to defendant. Liability was resisted on the ground that the plaintiff was guilty of a breach of warranty as to the quality of the seed, it being claimed that the goods were sold on a verbal warranty that at least ninety-five per cent of the seed would grow, whereas less than fifty per cent germinated.

At the trial, the plaintiff's salesman

Statute Rules Out Evidence.

To refute this version of the contract, the defendant presented as a witness its present president, who stated that he heard the negotiations, and who attempted to testify that the deceased president of the company exacted from the salesman a warranty of the seed's germinating power. This testimony, the court holds, was properly ruled out by the trial judge, under a statute common to many of the states which provides that no party to a suit and no person interested in its outcome shall give evidence concerning any conversation with a deceased person bearing on the controversy, except as the conversation may have been so preserved as to be subject to production by the other party to the suit.

It was not expressly shown that the witness was interested personally in the outcome of the suit within the meaning of the statute referred to, but the court found that, in the absence of direct evidence to the contrary, it must be presumed that he was so interested as a stockholder. As the laws of the state required that the president be a director and that the directors be stockholders of the defendant corporation, it must be inferred that the witness, being president of the company, was also a stockholder.

Purpose of the Statute.

The purpose of the statute which forbids one party to offer testimony against his adversary based on what some deceased person has said is to prevent a tendency to perjury which would exist were a living person permitted to declare in his own interest that something had been said by a person whose lips have been sealed by death.

Considered from another angle, it may seem an unjust result that the plaintiff's salesman was permitted to state what passed between him and the defendant's deceased president, while a surviving representative of the defendant is denied the right to testify to what he heard pass between the two. But the law has seen fit to accord more credit to the veracity of a salesman who has no pecuniary interest in the result of a suit than to the statements of an adverse or interested party or witness, as an abstract proposition, without any specific reflection upon the truthfulness of the latter.

Written Contract Safeguard.

Therefore the possibility of the early death of one who negotiates an important business contract suggests the desirability of committing all such agreements to writing. Apart from such contingency, a written contract is always a valuable safeguard against controversies as to the terms of an understanding, for it is a matter of daily occurrence that negotiators of sales disagree as to the terms of a verbal agreement. S.

WHEN THE GROWER IS HELD.

Seedsmen and canners have much in common, including many experiences when, as the result of a rising market, a grower will disregard his contract to deliver the crop and sell the crop at a higher price in the open market. Consequently the following report on a canner's case in Delaware will be of interest to seedsmen:

"Canners are much encouraged as to the enforcibility of their acreage contracts with farmers by the outcome of a suit in the Superior court of Wilmington, Del., December 9, when a verdict of $412.50 damages was given by the jury in a suit of the Liberty Brand Canning Co. against Joseph Denby, a farmer, for breach of contract.

"The Liberty company brought suit against Denby on a contract whereby he agreed to deliver to it the products of four acres of tomatoes. Denby failed to make deliveries as per contract and disposed of 1,100 baskets of tomatoes.

"The Liberty company sued for the difference in the contract price, which was 25 cents a basket, and the market price at which Denby was said to have sold, according to experts brought into court, 75 cents a basket.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The exceedingly mild weather is still with us and business has continued fairly brisk. Plenty of good stock is on the market, with the exception of roses, which are good, but not plentiful. Carnations are in their prime. Quantities can be had. This also is true of violets.

Sweet peas are making a good showing, and sell readily. Calendulas seem to be off crop for a week or so. Some good tulips and daffodils are making their appearance, as is freesia, which is the forerunner of a large crop.

The last mums of the season were cut last week. Cyclamens, primroses and cinerarias are plentiful. Asparagus is scarce and there is practically no smilax.

Various Notes.

The Michigan Florists' Association held its regular meeting at the office of the Wealthy Avenue Floral Co., January 30. Twenty-two members were present and an interesting discussion was held regarding the "gluts." That they should be eliminated, so as not to fall into the hands of the department stores, was advocated by the majority. A paper by F. Hockstra, on growing cyclamens, was enjoyed. The meeting was one of the best held this season.

S. Kunst has a fine crop of freesia, and some nice cinerarias.

L. Bruin Slot has some fine violets, and is picking several thousand every day. A. F. C.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Prices on stock remain firm, although there has been a drop in some lines since the middle of January, due to the increase in production. Carnations are quoted at $6, $8 and $10 per hundred. Roses are selling at $8 to $15 per hundred, with the exception of Russell and Columbia, which are bringing $20 and $25 per hundred. Miniature roses also sell well. Tulips and Golden Spur narcissi are bringing $5 to $6 per dozen and Easter lilies 25 cents each. Paper

White narcissi and freesias wholesale for $5 and $6 per hundred. There is a plentiful supply of callas. Cattleyas in several varieties are abundant and bring 50 and 75 cents each. There is a good supply of oncidiums and cypripediums. Blooming plants are confined to bulbous stock. Roman hyacinths were offered last week and exceptionally fine tulips in pots found a ready market. The supply of greens is increasing.

Various Notes.

In spite of high prices, flowers and plants were in greater demand in January than in the same month of any previous year. The shortage of flowers was a handicap to the florists, many of whom would have had larger receipts under normal conditions.

All hands have been kept busy at the store of A. J. Lanternier & Sons with funeral work. This concern is showing fine bulbous stock, both cut and in pots. The slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is in evidence in its advertising and is featured on its new Overland delivery car.

F. J. Knecht & Co. have been having heavy cuts of Shawyer, Killarney and Russell roses. R. F. B.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SOME CALIFORNIA CYCLAMENS.

The cyclamens seen in the illustration were not only grown in California, but their California lineage probably extended back two or three generations—plant generations, that is—as they were produced from a strain of California seeds. The plants were genuine Native Sons—a fact which in itself constitutes high praise for the plants, as all Californians and many other people will testify. The growers of the plants, the firm heretofore known as H. Hayashi & Co., of Oakland, Cal., state that nearly all their cyclamens, since the beginning of the world war, have been grown from their own seeds, "preserved from the best European strains, such as are notable for their heavy stems and profuse flowering."

The name H. Hayashi & Co. has become so familiar to many in the trade as to seem almost an essential part of the firm, but, according to a recent announcement, the business will hereafter be conducted under the name of Hayashi Bros.' Nursery. The Hayashi brothers are wholesale growers and make a specialty of such plants as cyclamens, poinsettias, ferns, rambler roses and Easter lilies for the holiday trade.

Cyclamens unquestionably are among the most popular of winter-blooming plants—deservedly popular, on account of their abundant and persistent blooming, their beauty of both foliage and flower, their variety of rich coloring and their remarkable lasting qualities in the ordinary home. It is not surprising, then, that the Hayashi brothers devote a good proportion of their greenhouse space to cyclamens. The house here shown contained 2,000 8-inch to 10-inch pots of cyclamens, grown for last Christmas, and three other houses of cyclamens were ready for the same holiday. Much larger quantities of the plants are being prepared for next season.

It is an interesting fact that the many excellent commercial strains of cyclamens are all derived from one species, the Persian cyclamen, or Cyclamen persicum. Most of the other species—the botanists name from thirty to forty of them—are essentially outdoor plants, but are not well suited to an outside life in the climate of the greater part of the United States, though some of them probably would thrive finely on the Pacific slope.

The Market.

The arrival of good freesias changed the aspect of the market this week. This popular and useful flower always is acceptable. Other bulbous flowers, such as daffodils, are not coming along freely, the lack of rain and consequent dry atmosphere being unfavorable to them. Carnations are not up to standard, either, for quantity or quality, and roses are still far behind the demand. Yet there is a slightly easier market and growers are not holding out for such high prices as have been the rule of late.

The principal demand is still for funeral work, though there is an increase in decorations and the box trade, according to the reports of the retailers. Double and single peach and cherry blossoms in various colors are attractively displayed in the stores and sell freely for decorative work. Acacia Baileyana is in and sells better than the earlier-flowering varieties of acacias, which for some reason do not suit the popular taste. A good assortment of sweet peas helps out the average of flowers. Orchids are high in price and Cecile Brunner roses are scarce. Violets are plentiful and there is no lack of greens, though the prices keep up well.

Various Notes.

James McGillivray, superintendent of Lincoln park, is in the Pacific hospital, where he has been operated on for appendicitis. The operation was entirely

COCOS PLUMOSA

I have several hundred exceptionally fine specimens of Cocos Plumosa for disposal the coming spring. They are growing on my own place in the frostless section of Montebello, and have had constant care from the seedling stage up. Planted wide apart they have fine ample fronds quite distinct from the closely planted nursery palms known all over Southern California. They range from eight to fifteen feet high and can be safely balled and shipped to the east in April or May. If preferred I will arrange to have them placed in new green tubs and established before shipping. Low price for a quick deal. If interested, write successful and Mr. McGillivray is making a good recovery.

Gustave Teufel, wholesale grower of Portland, Ore., has been making a southern tour looking up stock and getting a line on futures to take care of the shortage in Portland and vicinity.

John Gordon, of the Darling Flower Shop, has just returned to business after a severe attack of ptomaine poisoning. Mr. Gordon, it will be recalled, has only recently recovered from influenza and this second illness has reduced him considerably.

Among the unusual orchids at F. Lichtenberg's store this week are several elegant spikes of the violet-scented oncidium, O. tigrinum. This variety is so distinct that its appearance calls out a good many inquiries as to its identity, making it a good advertisement. Other orchids shown here, outside of the cattleyas, include fine dendrobiums, phalænopsis and several of the Mexican lælias. The store force is busy all the time, largely with funeral work.

C. Gutting, of the Superior Nursery Co., is taking a trip south for duck.

A note of progress has been sounded by W. Armacost & Co. The ground already is staked out and several carloads of lumber are ordered for an addition to his already large growing range at Sawtelle. Mr. Armacost as yet is incommunicative as to the area that will be covered this year, or rather, he says that it will depend more or less upon prices of pipe, glass and other commodities that enter into construction. But that there will be a big addition is assured. Large temporary sheds are being erected for carpenters, painters and other mechanics to work in and gravel is being hauled for concrete work. The entire new addition is to be devoted to roses for cut flowers. One does not have to be much of a prophet to see an immense business in Sawtelle. Its beginning was small, but every move has been carefully considered and already this branch has scored heavily.

A. F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., reports his whole family recovered from influenza. Peter Nilson, a former employee of this company, has returned, making the third man added to the staff in the last six weeks.

A. Knopf is cheerful, in spite of a loss of $500 worth of stock from his lemon grove at Santa Ana, due to frost. Mr. Knopf speaks highly of the heather now being used so freely and says there will be a much greater demand for it next year. C. Lewis is recovering from the slight operation on his throat.

Mr. and Mrs. Terwilliger, of Minneapolis, have been staying at Long Beach and are occasional callers in the flower market here.

Polder Bros. report a wonderful season's trade in rooted cuttings. John Polder says that with every mail this concern receives orders on items on which it is short. Another case of success following the right treatment of customers.

Max Tefillossy, of the staff of S. Murata & Co., has been laying off, due to a severe attack of lumbago.

Fred Sperry, manager of the L. A. Floral Co., reports a bigger shipping demand than usual for various shrub branches, not only flowering but foliage.

Angelo Tassano has bought out the entire business of Tassano Bros., but when asked if this was going to be a permanent arrangement, was incommunicative. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

For the first time since the holidays the supply of flowers is equal to the demand. Roses are still on the short side of the market, but there are enough to go around, especially with carnations plentiful, and daffodils, freesias and other spring stock beginning to arrive in steadily increasing quantities. Prices have eased, also, and $1 a bunch is now a top price for carnations and a good many leave the market for 75 cents a bunch. With the heavy cut of carnations coming now, a surplus is threatened for the near future. There is talk about the Japanese growers pooling their left-overs in order to prevent further recessions in prices. The heavy cut of freesias does not show signs of abatement, which is accounted for by the fact that bulbs were cheap last year, so growers planted more than usual. The quality is excellent, all the freesias arriving now being indoor-grown. Outside stock does not come on here until later in the year. The daily offerings clean up readily at 50 cents per bunch. Outside daffodils have been held back by the cold weather, but two or three warm days would bring on quantities of them. They bring 50 cents per dozen. Paper Whites are plentiful and good. Roses have dropped in price in the last few days, but not noticeably. Spring blossoms and acacias have put in an appearance at this early date, which is hard to account for in view of the prolonged cold weather. They are welcome additions to the daily offerings, helping out nicely in decorative work. Orchids and gardenias are sufficient for requirements. Violets have improved both in quality and quantity as a result of the recent showers. From present indications there will be plenty to supply the St. Valentine's day trade.

Funeral work dropped off considerably in the last week, but the difference has been made up by a more liberal call for cut flowers for home adornment and social purposes.

Various Notes.

Though it has not been many months since the Art Floral Co. enlarged its quarters in Powell street to three times the former size, further additions are found necessary now to care for the needs of this growing business. To meet these requirements additional basement floor space, amounting to 1,800 square feet, has been secured adjoining the present workrooms. Partitions are now being removed and the place entirely renovated to suit the requirements of the florists' business. Part of the new space will be fitted up as a show room for baskets and other stock, and the remainder will be utilized for storage and workroom purposes. P. V. Matraia, head of this concern, reports business excellent for this season.

Fred Bertrand, who took over the management of the MacRorie-McLaren store on Powell street recently, is getting the work well in hand. He also has charge of the stand in the Palace hotel and is completely reorganizing both establishments. Joseph Thomas is the latest addition to the staff of the Powell street store. He is an experienced florist, just released from the army. Before entering the service of his country, he was manager of the Sanborn store, Oakland, Cal., for some time.

The many friends of Patrick Orr, who holds a responsible position with Albert O. Stein, regret to learn that he was taken to a hospital a few days ago for an operation. His speedy recovery is hoped for. As another of the Stein boys is sick with the "flu," and business is brisk, there is a rush to get out the work. Mr. Stein executed a nice wedding decoration January 21.

Charles Shellgrain, of Shellgrain & Ritter, says this new firm has done 100 per cent more business to date than was anticipated. Starting just before Christmas, holiday orders far exceeded expectations and sales have held up remarkably well throughout January.

B. M. Joseph is gratified over having had the opportunity to demonstrate that orders for flowers not only can be placed in San Francisco for delivery in New York, but they can be handled at even a greater distance than that. Before Thanksgiving a lady placed an order at the Joseph store here for a box of orchids to be delivered Thanksgiving day to her husband, a lieutenant colonel serving in France. She recently received word that the box of flowers was delivered from Tours, France, Thanksgiving eve, just as the recipient was going into battle. In the box was his wife's card, in a Joseph envelope, which he was accustomed to seeing in San Francisco. This came as a great surprise and he was at a loss to know how the envelope got there. The explanation is that it was enclosed with the order, mailed to the French florist's establishment.

Mrs. Bianchinni, wife of John Bianchinni, manager for B. M. Joseph, who is also a member of that staff, has been in the hospital for three weeks with influenza, but is now able to return to her home.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee is much relieved to have her force all back again, practically all the employees having had the influenza at once during the last month.

Julius Eppstein, the St. Francis hotel florist, says the wearing of "flu" masks has had a tendency to check festivities calling for floral decorations at the hotel, but funeral work and bouquets for the sick room have kept his staff busy.

Daniel MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., has just returned from the southern part of the state. Walter Hoff has been out of town a good part of the time lately in connection with landscape work.

J. A. Axell, manager of the E. W. McLellan Co., says his firm is cutting more roses than for several weeks, but still not enough to meet the requirements of the trade.

The front of the florists' supply house of the C. Kooyman Co. on Bush street is being entirely remodeled in such a way as to improve the appearance of the place noticeably.

Mr. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., reports a big shipping demand for violets for St. Valentine's day. M. M.

The Market.

Stock is scarce, although there is enough to meet the demand, which has fallen off considerably in the last week, due to a certain extent to the big shipyards' strike, which has thrown some 35,000 men out of employment and cut down the immense pay-roll, part of which flows into the florists' cash registers. This, along with a normal death rate, which is low in Seattle, tends to make business slack. If the present labor situation reaches the looked-for crisis, which is that of a general strike, business of all kinds will be tied up.

Various Notes.

The floods in the White river valley, brought on by the heavy rains, did damage to the Thomas Floral Co. and the Kent Greenhouse Co. Fires were put out and the plants were without heat for a couple of days. The last night of the high water was frosty and the young growth in the rose houses of the Thomas Floral Co. was affected somewhat. The Kent Greenhouse Co., which is repairing its range, suffered the loss of an electric motor which drives the automatic stoker. The boiler, which is in a pit, was entirely submerged and water was over the top of the benches.

Louis Segal, who worked for Rosaia Bros. before the war, is back on the job, having been seven months overseas, although he was not in action, being in France only three days before the armistice was signed.

The death of Frank Quillan, which has already been noted, was followed by the death of his daughter.

A. E. Buxton has been laid up in bed with a bad leg, caused by a bump on one of the water taps at the Stuber-Richardson range.

Ray Daschbach, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, has left for the south. He reports business excellent.

W. S. G.

Woonsocket, S. D.—The Woonsocket Greenhouse still is the property of H. E. Richardson, but the family is at Yucaipa, Cal., and will sell the establishment.

Nampa, Ida.—Mrs. Lewis S. Hicks, 615 South Seventeenth street, has grown outdoor stock for sale, obtaining greenhouse stock on a commission. Her business has grown to the point that, with a large hospital being built a block away, a greenhouse seems a necessity and probably will be built in the spring.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.

JANUARY was a wonderful month for the nurserymen. As an example, in the vicinity of Chicago planting continued every working day of the month, whereas last year not a day's work was done out of doors. There are those who say sales exceeded the total for the first two months of 1918.

ILLINOIS CONVENTION OPENS.

Nurserymen Gather in Chicago.

It was an optimistic crowd of men that gathered in the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, February 5, for the second annual convention of the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association. Almost without exception the growers predicted better and bigger business for this year. None was downhearted over the prospects.

Thirty-two members and visitors were present at the opening session of the convention, presided over by Guy A. Bryant, of Princeton, Ill., president of the association. An address of welcome was delivered by J. E. Duffield, of the Association of Commerce and Rotary Club, Chicago.

In his address Mr. Bryant described the growth of the nursery business in Illinois since the admission of the state into the Union 100 years ago and predicted a bright future for the trade.

Numerous Addresses.

Other addresses scheduled for the first day's sessions were by A. H. Hill, of Dundee, Ill.; William Peterson, of Chicago, Ill.; Hon. Charles Adkins, director of agriculture, of Springfield, Ill.; J. A. Young, of Aurora, Ill.; F. S. Webb, secretary of the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association, and Thomas A. McBeth, of Springfield, O.

Discussions of the topics dwelt upon by the speakers were led by George Klehm, of Arlington Heights, Ill.; B. J. Vandervort, of Bloomington, Ill., and L. F. Dintelmann, of Belleville, Ill.

The convention will be a two-day affair, concluding the afternoon of February 6 with a round table discussion of subjects of interest to nurserymen.

Those Who Registered.

A list of those registered for the convention up to noon February 5 follows:

OHIO NURSERYMEN MEET.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Ohio Nurserymen's Association was held at the Deshler hotel, Columbus, January 29. Following is a list of the officers elected for the ensuing year: President, H. S. Day, Fremont, O.; secretary, W. N. Scarff, New Carlisle, O.; treasurer, A. R. Pickett, Clyde, O.

NEW ENGLAND NURSERYMEN.

Eighth Annual Convention.

The eighth annual convention of the New England Nurserymen's Association opened at the New American House, Boston, Mass., January 28, with President Albert E. Robinson in the chair. The attendance was the largest in the history of the association and business was carried on with vim and snap. After a short address from the president, the reports of Secretary R. M. Wyman and Treasurer V. A. Vanicek were read and accepted, also reports from Messrs. E. W. Breed, A. P. Horne, J. P. McManmon and W. H. Wyman for the membership, executive, legislative and publicity committees.

A Story for Flower Lovers

A description of the Flower Plantation of Willis E. Fryer, one of Minnesota's best known flower growers.

By CLARENCE WEDGE

NO one who knows much about the horticulturists of Minnesota will dispute the right of Mr. Willis E. Fryer, of Mantorville, to the title: "King of Flower Growers of the State." Of all the outdoor flower enthusiasts that I know of in this part of the world, Mr. Fryer has brought together and compared the merits of more phlox, iris, gladioli, dahlias and peonies and such other perennial flowers than any other man of my acquaintance. He has not done this merely as the whim and fancy of a rich man, but has managed to do it so as to make them bring a profit.

Phlox with a Future.

I had made up my mind this year that, come what might, I would take a day in iris season and again in phlox season to improve my education in the new and old things in these lines, by making a visit to the Fryer establishment. But when every day as you reach it is full of new work, it is hard to get the time and abide by it. And so I found the thirteenth of June, 1916. I had to make two close connections to make the sixty miles and back in one day, getting up in the small hours of the morning. And when I woke up it was about to rain and my wife said, "What's the use?" I thought so myself, but if you make plans and don't live up to them you never get anywhere, and so I made myself go.

I have never in my life seen a more interesting plot of flowers than Mr. Fryer's patch of seedling iris in full bloom June 13. No show of named varieties that I have ever seen together could begin to compare with it.

Phlox Mrs. W. E. Fryer.

As I took my first view within the shelter of young evergreens that enclosed it, the first thing that caught my eye, towering above all, was the stately variety that he has named for his wife, Mrs. Willis E. Fryer. It is a flower of the largest size, carried on strong stems thirty-four inches high, the standards of very light blue, giving at a distance the impression of white, the falls of the richest purple, veined at the base and bordered or shaded at the edge with a lighter purple. The health and vigor of the plant gives every promise of putting this variety among the really useful sorts for general planting. I do not recall any of the standard varieties of its color equal to it. If Mr. Fryer had accomplished nothing more in all his experiments with the iris in the past twenty years than the production of this one variety, it would have been well worth his time.

He has named two varieties after his children, W. J. and Kathryn Fryer, that may prove to be the most valuable of all his seedlings. They are both yellows of the largest size—the standards not quite so rich as the Honorabilis, but fully double the size and carried higher up, with falls of the deepest, velvety mahogany bordered with yellow. A bouquet of either one of them would cause a sensation anywhere they might be exhibited.

"Red" Irises!

I have sometimes had inquiries for a red iris, which is so far from the natural color of this flower that it would seem like trifling with descriptive terms to suggest the possibility of there being any such thing. However, we found among Mr. Fryer's seedling collection two or three varieties of rich mahogany red that it would be hard to describe without some mention of red. It is impossible to give anything like an adequate idea of the richness and beauty of this collection of hundreds of seedlings, so diverse and interesting that it requires more than one visit to properly place the many good things that demand our attention.

Timely Topics.

The first speaker of the session was Charles Adams, of Springfield, whose subject was "Transportation," which brought out some discussion. Transportation conditions were said to be steadily improving.

F. S. Baker, of Cheshire, Conn., formally opened the debate on the new quarantine regulations. W. H. Wyman handled the Federal Horticultural Board without gloves, as, in fact, did all succeeding speakers. Mr. Wyman said the action of the board was arbitrary in the extreme. He criticised the attitude of the board in failing to consider the position of the nurserymen as affected by this ruling. He said that the most recently introduced pest, the corn borer, did not come on any plants or nursery stock, but on jute, hemp or rope. He compared the method of dealing with this problem with that of the man who thought there might be fleas on his dog and therefore killed the dog. He asked every one to demand the repeal of this injurious measure.

Curtis Nye Smith, counsel for the American Association of Nurserymen and the American Seed Trade Association, said the board went beyond the authority vested in it in making this ruling; that, moreover, the measure assumed that every country except our own harbored dangerous pests. It was up to the board to prove that such pests exist. J. Horace McFarland strongly condemned the quarantine. Peter F. Koster spoke of conditions in Europe, particularly in Holland and Belgium. He stated that certain interested nurserymen here insisted on rose and fruit tree stocks being allowed to come in, as they are urgently needed. Mr. Koster said Europe is short of these and European growers will not ship such stocks to anyone here unless other goods were ordered and admitted along with them. After addresses from J. Edward Moon, Robert Pyle, Messrs. Ruck, Kelly and others, it was unanimously voted to appoint a committee to draw up resolutions. The president appointed W. H. Wyman, Curtis Nye Smith and Mr. Evans on this committee. Their report, strongly condemning the quarantine, subsequently was adopted.

Curtis Nye Smith spoke on new laws affecting nurserymen and E. F. Rockwell, of New York, made an interesting address on "Market Development," which brought out considerable discussion.

The annual dinner was well attended and was enlivened by an excellent and humorous address by P. F. Koster. In the evening J. Horace McFarland lectured before a large and enthusiastic audience on "How to Make New England More Fruitful and Beautiful," showing many beautiful pictures to illustrate his remarks.

January 29 E. J. Canning, of Northampton, read an excellent paper. His subject was, "Are we Growing Enough High Grade Ornamentals?" He estimated that the New England growers devoted ninety per cent of their acreage to ornamentals and ten per cent to fruits.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar, who was introduced as a new member of the association, paid his respects to the Federal Horticultural Board.

Ornamentals Introduced.

William H. Judd, of the Arnold Arboretum, presented an able paper on "New Ornamentals of Great Merit for New England." He expressed astonishment at the apathy of nurserymen in taking hold of the many new and beautiful Chinese and other plants introduced through the Arnold Arboretum. An animated discussion followed Mr. Judd's paper, several speakers dwelling on the difficulty experienced in making any money from nursery novelties. J. Edward Moon, referring to these new varieties, said, in part, that the introducers, so to speak, had the manuscript and we were asked to do the publishing, but we could not get a copyright. The manufacturer might patent the article he makes and get protection which would warrant him in erecting a factory and advertising his product, but the nurseryman who put his money into developing trade in a new plant or shrub created a market in which all may share. Mr. Moon warmly praised the work done by the arboretum.

William W. Cotton, of Newton, read an excellent paper on "Living Monuments for Our Soldiers." State Forester F. W. Rane and others spoke in the resultant discussion. Ernest F. Coe, of New Haven, spoke entertainingly on "Should Growers of Ornamentals Specialize More?" and C. H. Greaton, of Providence, gave a splendid humorous talk on "The Nurseryman's Outlook for 1919."

Election of Officers.

Officers for 1919 were elected as follows: President, C. R. Burr, Manchester, Conn.; vice-president, Charles Adams, Springfield, Mass.; secretary, R. M. Wyman, Framingham, Mass.; treasurer, V. A. Vanicek, Newport, R. I. Members of the executive committee were chosen as follows: A. E. Robinson, Lexington, Mass.; E. T. Coe, New Haven, Conn., and C. E. Dow, Bar Harbor, Me.

Boston was chosen as the 1920 meeting place, the convention next year to open the second Tuesday in February.

TENNESSEE NURSERYMEN.

Echoes of the Convention.

In his address before the Tennessee Nurserymen at their annual convention at Nashville, January 30, President Poague called the attention of the members to the importance of incorporating the association and asking the state for an appropriation to enable it to do general work in forwarding the interests of the fruit industry of the state. He spoke of the great work the associations in some of the northern and western states have done and said there was no reason why we might not do as valuable a work here. He advised the nurserymen to recommend a reliable list of fruit trees for home orchards and to give the list wide publicity. He stated that as a result of following such a plan in Alabama last year the sale of nursery stock was more than doubled. Nebraska nurserymen have had a similar experience. He asked that the nurserymen give time and thought at this meeting to making up such a list.

Miss Mary B. McGowan's paper on "How to Make Tennessee More Fruitful and Beautiful" brought out the fact that we are sadly neglecting many of our native shrubs and flowers that are far superior in decorative effect to the many we ship in from other countries, which succeed only fairly here. She said that as a result of this condition many people who pay a good price for plants and fruits not suited to our climate, people or soil are discouraged from trying again.

Her paper was followed by a general discussion on ornamentals. Much interest centered around the red cedar, as it is one of our best native ornamentals, but at the same time it is in great disfavor with the fruit growers as a carrier of rust. The urgent need of the nurserymen of the state increasing their plantings of ornamentals was emphasized in view of the quarantine that is so soon to go into effect.

Much time was spent discussing the question of cutting down the list of varieties of fruits grown by the nurseries. Many varieties are of little value and it is to the interest of no one for these to be listed. It was agreed to cut the lists in 1920.

PETER REINBERG

In view of the incorporation of the society and the legislative work needed, all of the old officers were reëlected.

Plans and Prospects.

Robert Chase, of the Chase Nursery Co., Chase, Ala., gave an interesting discussion of "The Outlook for the Future." He said that as a result of the oversupply of fruit trees for a few years before the war, growers had cut down production. Five or six years ago nurserymen were burning surplus trees by the carload. The last year help has been so scarce that it was impossible to grow much stock. Today he said that he did not believe there was a carload of Japanese plums in the United States and other stock is almost as scarce. Peaches are especially scarce. The spring business faces us with all of our varieties already sold short. As seedlings and cuttings can no longer come in from Europe, and as it will necessarily take time to get things into shape to grow our own propagating stock, prices are sure to be high for some time to come. Perhaps the public may become accustomed to paying more nearly what it is worth to produce good trees and as a result the growers will produce better stock. All will be benefited in the end.

Miss E. B. Drake, whose nursery is at Winchester, gave an interesting paper on "The Salvage of the War." She brought out the fact that hundreds of thousands of our boys are coming home who have seen the wonderful grounds and orchards of France. Many of them never before have known that it was possible to have a country so beautiful, or to grow such an abundance of fruit. When they come home they are sure to demand such things in their own homes. As nurserymen we must prepare for the business that is sure to come.

Professor Harry Clark, of the Tennessee State University, gave one of the best talks we have ever heard on "The Necessity of Coöperation." He showed that most of the trouble in the world today exists because we have not learned to coöperate. Then he spoke of the effects of the lack of coöperation on the nursery business in particular. A spirited discussion followed the talk and it is to be hoped that lasting results may come to at least a part of the nurserymen present. F. B.

FRAT-M

FRATERNAL EMBLEMS

What are they?

They are 4-inch reproductions of Fraternal Emblems embossed in gold and the colors demanded by each Fraternal Order

How are they used?

They are attached to the ribbon or chiffon of any floral offering.

Why are they of such help to the Florist?

They save flowers, as the colors demanded by each Order are embossed on the Frat-M. They save wire designs; for instance, any plain spray with a Frat-M attached becomes a fraternal piece. Think of what this means, with a shortage of wire and flowers as scarce and high as theyare everywhere this winter. They save lettering. Think of that. If attached to door badges alone, they are worth many times their cost.

What do they cost?

They cost 20c each, or $2.00 a dozen cash, and should retail for 50c each, or $6.00 per dozen. An order of two dozen ($4.00 cash) gets the exclusive use of Frat-M's for one year in cities of 25,000 or less. They can be bought from your wholesale supply house, or the

The Market.

Fine bright days with frosty nights were the rule throughout January. It has been just cold enough to keep the trees from budding.

Business continues good, but stock is none too plentiful. Roses are scarce, especially, but carnations are in better supply. There are enough other flowers, such as calendulas, sweet peas and bulbous stock, to make up the funeral pieces called for.

Various Notes.

The Lockyear Floral Co. is preparing for an active spring season.

C. L. Niednagel's roses are making a good growth since the Christmas crop was cut. He doubtless will have a heavy cut soon. He has a batch of Columbia in 2-inch pots.

Karl Zeidler reports orders for a number of blankets of late.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann has difficulty in finding enough stock to fill orders.

GREAT FALLS, MONT.

At a meeting of the Great Falls Florists' Society, January 22, the plant embargo was viewed from a new slant by the leaders of the discussion, who urged that the government should not ask us to contribute alms to aid the Belgians and then permit a committee of five members in Washington to prohibit the importation of plants that are much in demand in this country, cutting off one of the means of livelihood of many in the plant trade in Belgium.

Another topic of interest was relative to cards on floral offerings at funerals at undertaking establishments. The point brought out was that complaints have been received from people whose offerings could not be located because of the removal of cards. The florists decided to advise the undertaking establishments that cards should be left on all floral pieces until after the services.

Officers were elected as follows: President, M. Kranz; vice-president, H. L. Birum; secretary-treasurer, Charles A. Burrell.

Stop Gambling on Field Carnation Results

USE

The Skinner Irrigation System

WATER—that's what you gamble on. Water in right quantities at the right time.

Your fertilizer problem can be solved in several ways.

Your labor problem is flexible.

But this depending entirely on nature to attend to your watering is taking a long gamble.

85% of those carnation plants you will set out in the field is water.

If that 85% falls down to 75%, your plants suffer. Your next winter's profits are hit.

The Skinner System cuts the gamble out of field growing. You can have water in right amounts at the right time, right under your entire control.

At planting time alone, it will pay for itself. At lifting time, you again get valuable service from it. All the season through it will be your surest insurance.

It's the kind of insurance policy that pays for itself the first year, and gives you protection and increased profits for years and years to come.

Send for latest catalogue. It fully describes those new nozzles you have heard about.

Leather Leaf Fern— Polystichum Coriaceum

I think we have the largest stock of this Fern in cultivation. A splendid house plant. The leaves are a dark, lustrous green and will keep for weeks after cutting. Now used in high-grade floral work and commended by many of the best retail florists.

Every retail grower should have plants in some corner of greenhouse for cutting. Once used, you will wonder how you ever "kept house" without it.

For a short time I offer strong divisions, ready for benching, at price asked by others for 2¼-inch pots; $10.00 per 100.

Twenty-five for $3.00, prepaid in U. S.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

ALL COAL RESTRICTIONS OFF.

Maximum prices on anthracite coal, together with all other coal and coke regulations except three, were suspended, effective February 1, in a blanket order issued January 31 by United States Fuel Administrator Harry A. Garfield. The only restrictions not suspended concern those requiring that contracts be made subject to maximum prices if reinstated, subject to cancellation by the Fuel Administration and subject to requisition or diversion of coal by the Fuel Administration, and those prohibiting reconsignments of coal.

The order includes the suspension of price and zone regulations on coke and bituminous coal, which, it was announced January 17, would be effective February 1. As the administration's control of the oil industry has already been suspended, with the exception of certain natural gas regulations, the effect of the latest order was said to be that the Fuel Administration's controls are now relaxed to the present limit of safety, pending the proclamation of peace, when the administration will automatically terminate.

COMPUTING BOILER CAPACITY.

In figuring on the size of a horizontal tubular boiler for steam heating work, how many square feet of radiation do you allow per horsepower? How many square feet for hot water work? Also, will you give the formula for arriving at the rated horsepower of a boiler of this kind, the grate surface and the number and size of flues, the length and diameter of the boiler being known?

L. M. M.—Ill.

In order to secure the best results from a boiler, the various parts must be carefully adjusted. Thus, there should be a certain ratio between the size of the grate and the number of flues. The stack, in area of cross-section as well as in height, should be adapted to the area of the grate, as well as the number and size of the flues. In other words, no matter how carefully you may estimate the capacity of a boiler, even though the size of the grate and the number and length of the flues are properly adjusted, the performance of the boiler will not be up to its rating unless the stack is sufficiently large in area and height.

A simple way of estimating the capacity of a boiler is to consider that if the flues are three inches in diameter and fifteen feet in length, the rating of the boiler in horsepower will be equal to the number of flues. Thus, if a boiler has fifty 3-inch flues, fifteen feet in length, it would be rated at fifty horsepower. If the flues are larger or smaller than 3-inch, or if longer or shorter than fifteen feet, the capacity of the boiler

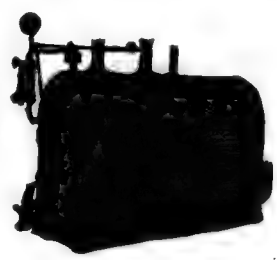
HEATED BY KROESCHELL BOILERS

The Conservatories of the President of the United States and the U. S. Propagating Gardens are located opposite the Washington monument at Washington, D. C. Over forty greenhouses are devoted to the growing of cut flowers, orchids, stove plants, tropical and decorative stock, and all bedding and ornamental plants for the U. S. Government buildings and grounds at Washington.

A No. 11 KROESCHELL BOILER was installed in 1906 for the high temperature houses. This boiler replaced a number of other makes and made a remarkable record for fuel economy.



UNCLE SAM'S IRON FRAME RANGE ERECTED IN 1910 IS HEATED BY KROESCHELL BOILERS.

The Plant Introduction Garden of the United States Department of Agriculture at Chico, California, is heated by No. 2 Kroeschell Boiler and Generator System.

In 1912 two No. 5 KROESCHELL BOILERS were installed for the new range of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, at Garret Park, Md.

The U. S. Government's new establishment, the Northern Great Plains Field Station, at Mandan, N. Dakota, ordered a No. 7 KROESCHELL BOILER for the new greenhouse range erected in 1913.

August, 1914, two more No. 11 KROESCHELL BOILERS were ordered for White House Conservatories and U. S. Propagating Gardens, Washington, D. C.

will be proportionately more or less than the number of tubes. In other words, if there are fifty tubes three inches in diameter and twelve feet long, the boiler would be rated at forty horsepower.

Another way of expressing the same thing is to estimate the horsepower of a boiler as equal to the number of flues, multiplied by the diameter of the flues in inches, multiplied by the length of the flues in feet, divided by 45; thus, 50x3x15 divided by 45 equals 50.

Boilers having flues larger or smaller than three inches in diameter will also have a horsepower larger or smaller than the number of tubes, calculated on the basis of a length of fifteen feet.

For boilers of medium size it is customary to allow one square foot of grate for three horsepower. In larger boilers the grates may be relatively smaller. On the other hand, if the needed capacity is much less than fifty horsepower, it will be advisable to have the grates relatively larger.

For each horsepower there should be from twelve to fifteen square feet of heating surface in the boiler, and under favorable conditions it will provide steam for 100 square feet of radiating surface.

The area of the boiler flues should be from one-ninth to one-sixth the area of the grate, and the chimney flues should be one-seventh to one-tenth of the grate area. In setting a boiler, allow about nine square inches under the boiler and over the bridge for each horsepower.

As already stated, these estimates are for boilers of medium size and should be slightly modified for those of larger or smaller sizes.

Dear Mr. Zenke:

Nothing pleases me more than to acknowledge that you were right when you praised up "New Plant Life" to me, and there couldn't be a better proof of it than my asking you to forward five more gallons just as soon as you can.

The results obtained were most satisfactory to me; stunted, small bedding stock after about ten days began to show new life and kept on improving. With the existing lack of help instead of giving thousands of 3½ inch Geraniums a final shift, three light doses of "New Life" were applied and I am more than pleased with the outcome.

Sincerely yours,
Fritz Bahr.

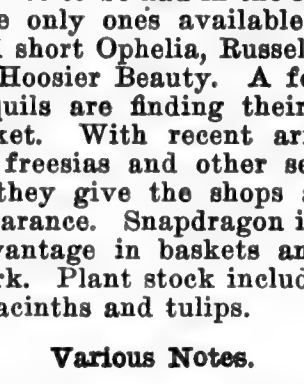
The Market.

Carnations are in heavy crop, while roses and sweet peas still are short of demand, which is large. Long-stemmed roses are not to be had in the local market. The only ones available are medium and short Ophelia, Russell, Columbia and Hoosier Beauty. A few tulips and jonquils are finding their way to the market. With recent arrivals of narcissi, freesias and other seasonable flowers, they give the shops a spring-like appearance. Snapdragon is used to good advantage in baskets and in funeral work. Plant stock includes cyclamens, hyacinths and tulips.

Various Notes.

It was with sorrow that the florists of Detroit learned of the death of Milton Alexander, of Lion & Co., New York, whose illness began while he was making the rounds of the trade in this city.



Charles Frueh, of Saginaw, stopped in Detroit recently while on a visit to points in this vicinity. He reports good business in his locality.

T. Browne, a grower of this city, and Robert Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, have gone to Florida. Henry Rahaley and Norman Sullivan have returned from New York and Philadelphia. In the latter city they visited Ernest Sullivan, formerly of this city.

Frank Dulsky, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, has returned from the service of Uncle Sam.

The annual florists' dancing party, under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Detroit Florists' Club, took place at the Hotel Statler February 5. Always one of the prettiest social affairs of the season, this year's dance surpassed previous standards. The decoration committee included Mesdames Albert Pochelon, George Davis, Robert Jean, Robert Rahaley and Flora Rush, who were assisted by William Dilger and E. A. Fetters. The reception committee comprised Mesdames John Warncke, Albert Stehelin, George Asman, George Doemling, Harry Smith, Theodore Michell, William E. Hielscher and M. Bloy. Mrs. Albert Stehelin was chairman of the ticket committee.

The Market.

Business is good. Everything that comes into the market is cleaning up at good prices. Stock is short and the demand steady and strong. Shipping business is excellent.

The supply of roses is scant. The carnation cut has been shortening up during the week. Easter lilies are not so plentiful as they were for a time. Callas and rubrum lilies sell readily. Sweet peas are plentiful. Bulbous stock includes Paper White narcissi, yellow narcissi, freesias, Dutch hyacinths and daffodils. The last-named were added during the week. Orchids are in good supply and of high quality. Other offerings include snapdragon, lily of the valley, violets, calendulas, forget-me-nots, baby primroses and wallflowers. The supply of asparagus is shortening up, but other greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Cincinnatians, including W. Ray Murphy, J. Charles Murphy, C. Alfred Murphy, R. Witterstaetter and Henry Shepherd, and E. G. Gillett, who attended the meeting of the Carnation Society in Cleveland last week, were greatly impressed with the quality of the exhibits shown and bring back glowing reports of the convention.

C. E. Critchell reports a big demand for hanging baskets and sheet moss during the fortnight.

The William Murphy Co. showed the first daffodils of the season February 3. They cleaned up quickly.

Among recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Berning, of St. Louis, Mo.

C. H. H.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Flowers are still high in price. Carnations sell at $8 per hundred wholesale and $3 up at retail. Violets are $2 and $2.50 per hundred. Sweet peas also are high-priced. Pussy willows are in the market and are found useful for decorative purposes. Local florists are beginning to plan for St. Valentine's day novelties and growers are getting their early bulbous stock into condition to put on the market.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros. report an unusual volume of funeral work of late.

Large numbers of young men are now being discharged from the service and the florists look for increase in business with their return, as young men always are apt to be buyers of flowers.

The Market.

The prospects for St. Valentine's day are more favorable than they were a week or two ago. The smaller flowers, which are always the most popular for this occasion, are more plentiful and comprise a wider variety. Sweet peas and freesias are in good supply, but the prices are holding up well. Other flowers of the corsage type include marguerites, pansies, orchids, Roman hyacinths, forget-me-nots, mignonette, valley and violets. The two latter items are in limited supply and high in price.

The usual line of bulbous stock will be conspicuous by its absence. A few tulips and jonquils will be available, but of high price and meager variety. Dutch hyacinths and lilacs are appearing on price lists.

Carnations are not so abundant and prices have stiffened to from $6 to $10. The quality is good and the demand continues brisk.

Roses are struggling to keep abreast of the demand. The shortage of roses has been felt all winter and, although prices have been soaring, the market has been kept clean.

Various Notes.

Indianapolis received a delegation of visitors from the Cleveland convention, including S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass.; Ernest Saunders, Lewiston, Me.; Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Howard, Milford, Mass.; George Noyes, Boston; Miss Gunterberg, Chicago; John Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; William Gammage, London, Ont.; Theodore Dorner, La Fayette, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Strout, Biddeford, Me., and C. E. Frank, Oklahoma City, Okla. The majority of these guests also visited in Richmond and La Fayette.

Baur & Steinkamp have a promising red sport of Rosalia, also a variegated sport of the same variety.

John Hartje has bought a Ford machine, which he intends to use as his "fisherman's car."

Walter Bertermann is in Dayton, O., on business.

After leaving Cleveland, Irwin Bertermann and Joseph Hill went to Detroit, to attend the meeting of the executive board of the S. A. F.

Bert Hitz has a large crop of poinsettias that will be in full bloom for St. Valentine's day.

A. F. J. Baur is going to Chicago this week to attend the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana met at the headquarters of the Smith & Young Co., February 4.

GLADIOLI—Continued

Gladiolus: "Mrs. Watt" has been grown from Massachusetts to California, and has made good with every florist who has given it a trial. Resembling the American Beauty rose in color, but more brilliant, it will occupy the same place among gladioli as does the American Beauty among roses. Unexcelled for forcing, and because of its distinctive beautiful shade and strong upright growth, it meets the need of every florist.

Homer F. Chase, Wilton, N. H.

Prince of Wales is destined to be the best florists' cut flower Gladiolus ever known. Color a clear, gorgeous, glistening salmon, melting to a throat of the sweetest yellow. Extremely early, large flowered on tall, strong spike and grand multiplier. Every spike a bouquet. Excellent forcer, weeks ahead of America, in short, the one best bet on the Gladiolus horizon. I have sold all the large bulbs and planting stock that I care to dispose of, but having a surplus of bulblets, I will sell a limited quantity at $1.00 per 100, $9.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate and with every order of 500 or more, will include one large bulb free. These prices are away below value and are made for a quick disposal of my surplus. All bulblets have been kept in damp sand and are of high germination. Raymond M. Champe, Walled Lake, Oakland County, Mich.

Surplus of ½-in. planting stock of Panama, the beautiful rose-pink seedling of America, $5.00 per 1000, 5000 for $22.00. Plant these one inch apart in rows 12 inches apart, pinch the buds off next September and you will have bulbs that will give good saleable spikes next year. Raymond M. Champe, Walled Lake, Oakland County, Michigan.

PLANT GLADIOLI FOR BIG MONEY.
With the importation of gladiolus bulbs stopped, next year you will see them ruling very high in price and they can be grown at a big profit when bought at our prices. Act quick, you will not regret it.

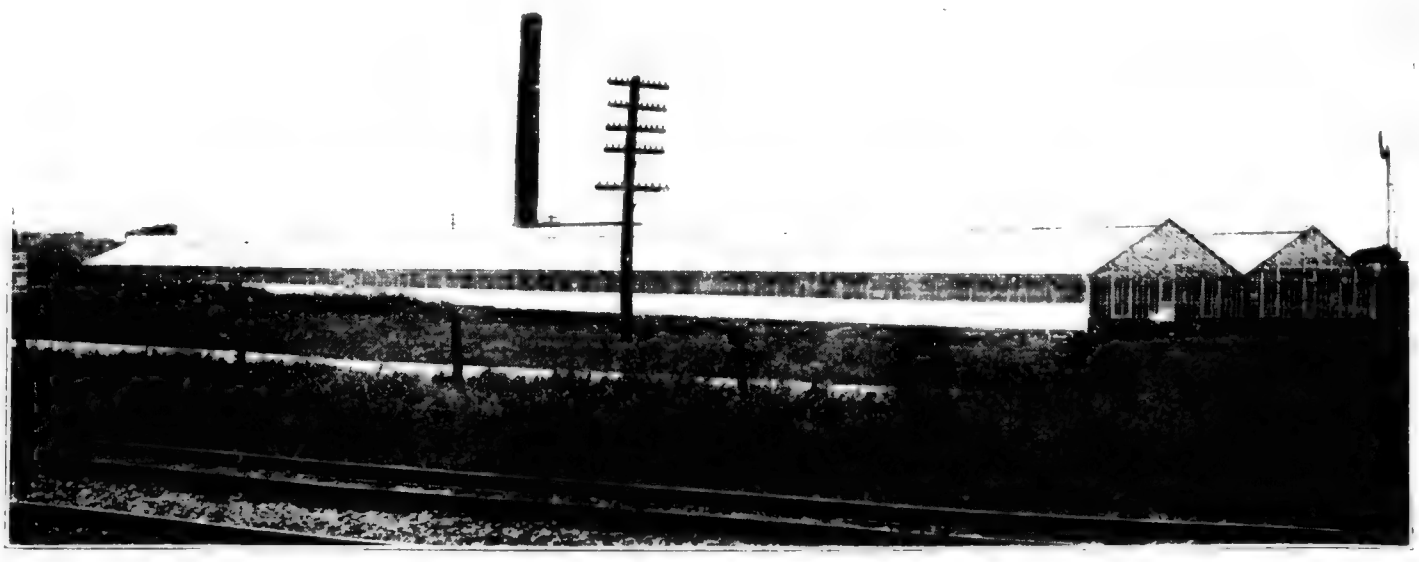
TIME TO BUILD

The normal rate of greenhouse building has not been maintained for two years at least, due to war conditions.

The demand for flowers is greater than ever.



TIME IS SLIPPING BY RAPIDLY

The florists who want to plant roses had better order their greenhouse material right away.

We are receiving orders every day now and if you don't want to be disappointed, better get your order in at once.

A year ago last summer we built the greenhouses shown below, for the Lombard Floral Co., at Lombard, Ill. We have just been given an order to build another house 42x246—work to be started at once.

We have a nation-wide reputation for excellent materials, careful service and honest business dealings, and it will be to your interest to get our estimates.

GLADIOLUS BULBS

We are offering Gladiolus bulbs to florists that, for quality and price have no competition. Our Gladiolus Bulbs are strictly up to size and guaranteed American grown. We contract in advance with large gladiolus growers, who supplied us this season with over 1,000,000 bulbs, which are all delivered to us and in our possession, properly stored, with the best facilities to insure proper curing, which is the essential part of handling Gladiolus Bulbs before planting.

Florists who have visited our place have stated that we have in our possession the largest stock of high quality Gladiolus Bulbs they have ever seen. One western grower, after inspecting our bulbs, purchased from us 78,000. A large Chicago grower was so well pleased to see the high quality we offer that he placed an order with us for 53,000 bulbs, and both these orders have been filled.

We hope, if you are a buyer of Gladiolus Bulbs, that you will send us your orders, and we will guarantee to satisfy you. If not, we will refund your money on return of our goods.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

STOCKING AND STARTING THE IDLE HOUSES

Now that the coal market is unrestricted and the flower market is lively, growers are hurriedly restocking the houses which they were obliged to close last fall. Some of these growers, if in doubt as to what are the best crops for their purpose, may find this article helpful.

A LARGE number of greenhouses were closed last fall. Many of these would have been kept open had the growers known that the great war would end so soon and that fuel conditions would improve so greatly. Now that the growers are realizing much more satisfactory prices for flowers, the probabilities are that the greater number of these vacant houses will soon be started up again. These notes are penned with the idea of helping some of the growers who may be uncertain as to what crops to grow. Where part of the houses have been kept going, this simplifies matters, as stock can be started in them to plant in empty houses. Where an entire range has been closed, much greater consideration must be given and it will usually prove expedient to open up one or two houses at a time, for to heat an entire range will mean heavy fuel consumption, with no possibility of returns for some months.

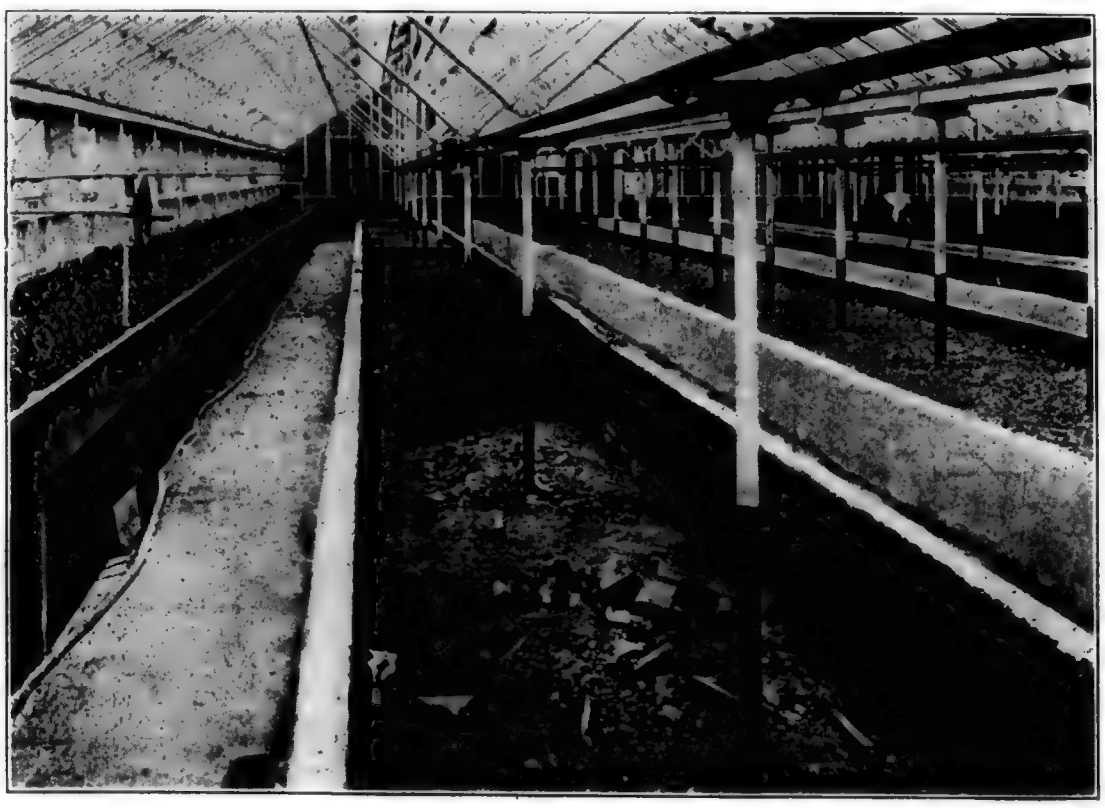
Vegetable Crops.

Vegetable crops will appeal to many greenhousemen, and of these lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers are the most important. Lettuce requires a cool temperature, 45 to 48 degrees at night being ample. For head lettuce, such varieties as May King and Hittinger's Forcing Belmont are good, while for leaf lettuce, a good strain of Grand Rapids can be used. Sow the seeds thinly on a portion of a bench and, after watering, dust a little fine coal ashes over them. The ashes seem to prevent damping off and can be used also in covering seeds of tomatoes, cauliflowers, cabbages and other vegetables, as well as such flowers as stocks, vincas, etc. Lettuce must have a rich soil. In the same temperature as lettuce can be grown beets, radishes, cauliflowers, peas and watercress.

It will scarcely pay to start cucumbers yet, as they need a continuously high temperature. They pay better as a summer crop and are better left to specialists. Tomatoes will prove a satisfactory crop. There is always a good market for them at profitable prices. Those who may have started plants in an occupied house can plant them out when six inches high. Tomatoes like a dry atmosphere and 60 degrees at night, but 10 degrees lower will not hurt them. They set better, however, in an even temperature. It is best to use one of the many forcing varieties at this time, such as Comet, Stirling Castle, Lister's Prolific or Carter's Sunrise. A little later larger-fruited sorts, like Bonny Best and Stone, can be tried.

In a Tomato Temperature.

New Zealand spinach in a tomato temperature proves to be a satisfactory green crop. Rhubarb, asparagus, Witloof chicory and sea kale can all be forced in such a house, where they can be kept dark. String beans are another crop which, at nearby markets, will net good returns. Both green and wax varieties force well.



Probably the majority of country florists will prefer this year to devote most of their space to flower production. A large assortment of forcing flowers is available. Perhaps you have a call for pot plants for the Easter trade. Provided you have such stock as French hydrangeas, roses, deciduous shrubs in variety, spiræas and bulbs of any sort, a vacant house can be filled profitably with these. Allow eight to ten weeks for spiræas, and for such flowering shrubs as lilacs, deutzias, laburnums, etc., from six to eight weeks. Dutch bulbs for Easter, which comes so late this year, will need retarding rather than forcing, and at most a few days in a greenhouse will bring them into bloom. Bedding plants may prove a useful crop. Such plants as geraniums, salvias, verbenas, vincas, petunias, cannas, etc., are always in demand.

By way of flowering plants for beds or benches, an interesting assortment is available and I will mention a few of the more important. Snapdragons, if you can get stock in small pots and plant out in spaces of 8x8 inches, should net splendid returns. The pink varieties have the best call and, by planting them now, you can begin to cut in April and will get a big Memorial day crop.

Stocks and Other Bench Crops.

Stocks also are a first-class crop. The giant ten weeks' is a good strain and anyone able to hit Memorial day with a house of colored varieties will make good money. Plant the colored varieties in preference, as there is a limited call for the white. Another good Memorial day crop is feverfew. If you can get some stock of it now, plant it out at once in a rich compost. Feverfew is malodorous, but proves a fine seller, nevertheless. Then there is candytuft. Buy the best strain you can find of the giant white type, sow it in flats and then pot off the plants singly before benching. Grow the crop cool and, if it seems at all leggy, apply more heat as the flower spikes start to push up, but shade the glass before doing any forcing and always allow sufficient time to cool off the crop before starting to cut.

Sweet peas are the most valuable of all the annuals to start at this time. They must have a generous compost and, while they can be grown of good quality in benches, they come with longer stems and larger flowers in solid beds. The best winter-flowering Spencers should be used, and pink is the most popular color. Next in favor come white and lavender. There is a more limited call for orange, scarlet and purple. Do not plant sweet peas unless you have ample head room. While they are flowering, 48 to 50 degrees at night suits them.

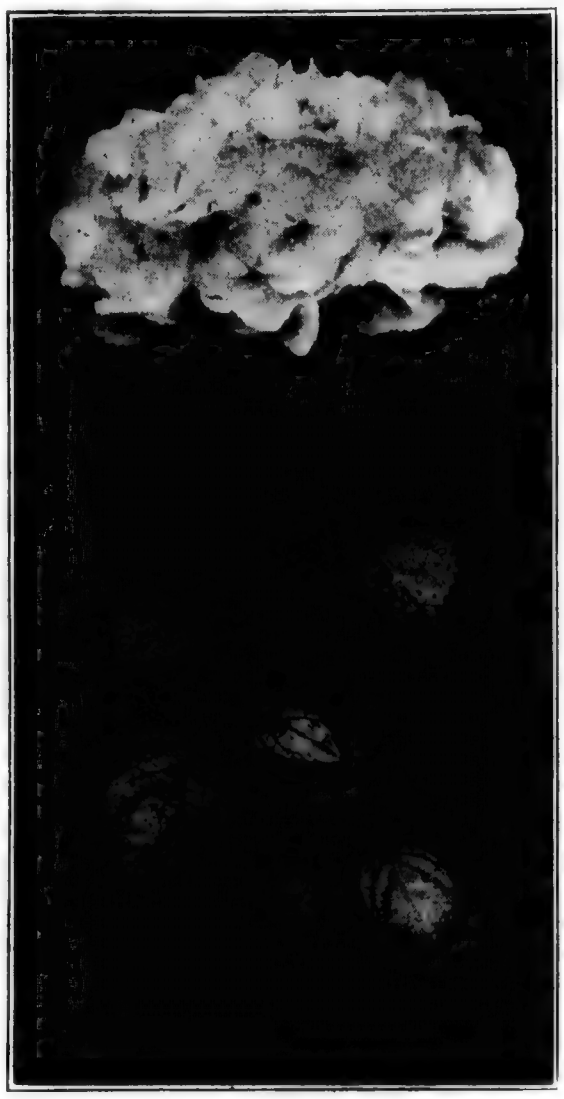
Asters are another valuable greenhouse crop. Flowers produced under glass are always clean and realize better prices than those grown outdoors. Growers who had late asters last fall realized wonderful prices. For an early indoor crop, plant Queen of the Market.

Hunnemannia fumariæfolia, better known as the Mexican poppy, proves an excellent indoor plant. This is not in its native habitat an annual, but it is always treated as such here. Sow the seeds thinly in rows a foot apart. These poppies, when cut, remain fresh for several days, while the Shirley and other poppies are gone in a few hours, beautiful though they may be. The Mexican poppy ships splendidly, also. Gypsophila elegans in flats or benches proves an excellent spring crop. It does well in flats containing five inches of soil and fifty plants can be pricked off in a flat 12x24. On shelves it does remarkably well, but it can also be pricked out in benches. It pays to transplant gypsophilas and several sowings may be made in a season.

Sowing Annuals Indoors.

The annual larkspurs will do much better under glass than outdoors. Sow them in flats, pot them off singly and plant them out 10x10 inches apart. The plants will grow a yard or more in height and will yield quantities of cut flowers. The rosy scarlet, pink and lavender varieties are the best to grow. Mignonette always does best in a low temperature and the sowings made in late winter will not produce the sturdy spikes we get from late summer or fall sowings. Larkspurs prefer a solid bed and can be sown in little patches 10x12 inches apart, leaving two or three seedlings in each patch. When these run up to flower, pinch them back in order to get a nice crop of succulent shoots from near the base. Clarkia Salmon Queen is well worth trying as a forcing annual. It produces large spikes of red-salmon flowers. Sow it in rows a foot apart, thinly. Grow it fairly cool and you will get splendid spikes.



Calendula Orange King is a satisfactory annual under glass and one which flowers early, being a rampant grower. Allow it twenty-four inches between the rows and set the seedlings a foot apart. To secure fancy flowers, some disbudding must be practiced, and the country florist can utilize all the flowers produced.

The centaureas do well under glass. C. imperialis, the sweet sultan, realizes the highest prices, but will not bloom with the freedom of C. Cyanus, the batchelor's button. Each of these varieties can be sown in rows thinly and will do well in any ordinary greenhouse. There is a good market at all times for centaureas.

Other Forcing Stock.

The annual lupines can all be successfully forced and they will produce spikes much superior to outdoor plants. The early pink variety comes first in season. The Hartwegii white and blue sorts come along later. Still another annual which has done extremely well under glass is the scabiosa commonly called Mourning Bride. The pink, scarlet and light blue colors are especially desirable.

If you want to try an annual which makes a splendid pot plant and is also good in benches, sow some Nemesia strumosa. This beautiful annual is fine for cutting and the attractive flowers include such colors as yellow, pink, orange, white and scarlet. This would prove a decided novelty for anyone. Sow in pans, cover lightly with sand, transplant into flats and from them to benches in rows ten inches apart, allowing five to six inches between the plants.

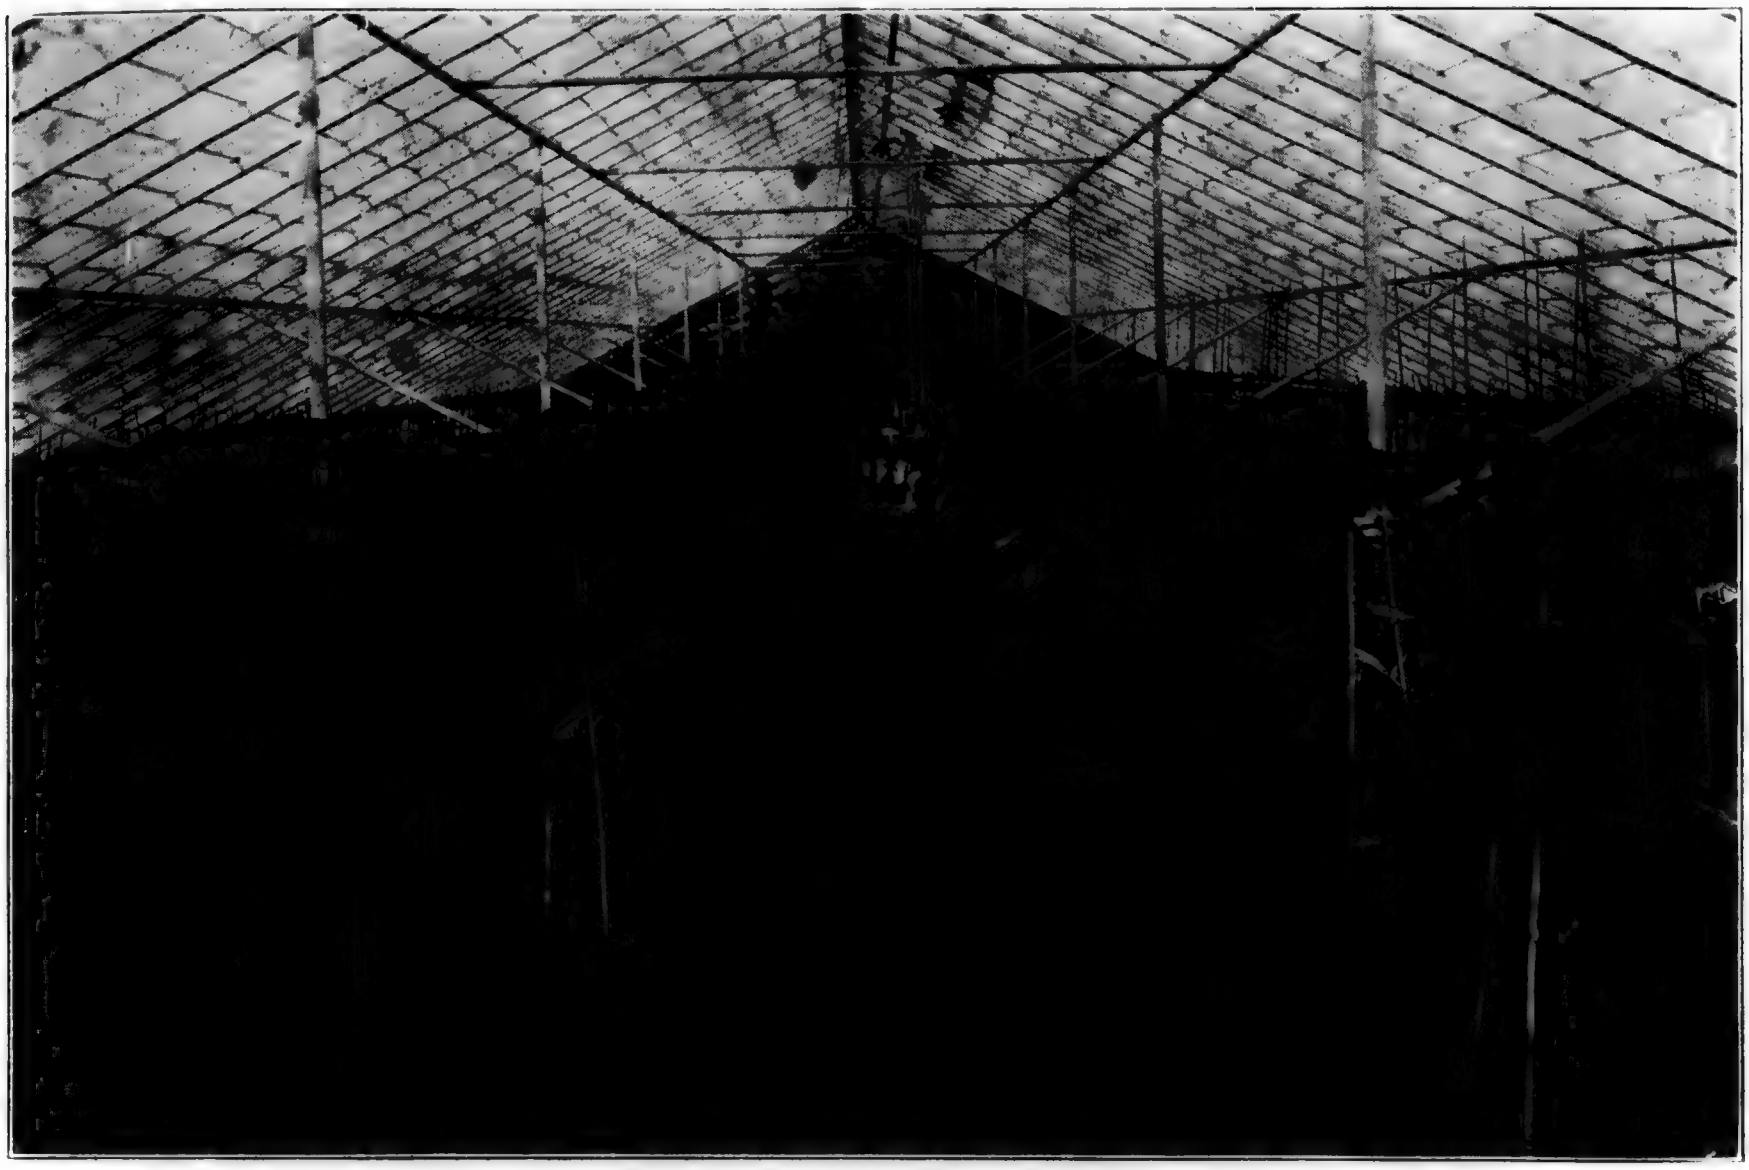
Gladioli make a good crop for a vacant house and can be planted at once, especially such desirable sorts as Panama, Mrs. Francis King, America, Pendleton, Halley, Niagara, Augusta and Peace. You can plant pansies, daisies, polyanthus and forget-me-nots in a cool house and these will not be long in netting you returns. If you chance to have any hardy perennials on hand, such as larkspurs, columbines, Shasta daisies, day lilies, Pyrethrum roseum and Coreopsis grandiflora, plant them in benches and they will bring good returns. Foxgloves, Canterbury bells and rockets can be treated in a similar manner. There is no lack of material for untenanted houses. In some cases it will pay best to grow one or two varieties only, but in many instances a wide assortment may be used to provide available material. Perhaps these hints may prove useful to those who are wondering how best to utilize vacant houses.

FRENCH HYDRANGEAS IN SPRING.



Belgian azaleas are a thing of the past so far as the average American florist is concerned, but French hydrangeas are only on the threshold of their popularity. At least that is the opinion of M. C. Reeser, of the Urbana Floral Co., Urbana, O. The point is that, whereas no one has yet succeeded in growing Belgian azaleas in America in commercial quantities, French hydrangeas may be grown here as one of the easiest subjects for an ordinarily skillful florist to handle. The accompanying illustration shows a plant of La France, one of the newer French hydrangeas, started in a 2½-inch pot, shifted to a 4-inch pot and flowered April 15. Mr. Reeser says that his concern has grown large quantities of these in previous seasons and has found such ready sale for them he expects the production to increase many fold what it has been. Although almost as easy to grow as a geranium, the 4-inch hydrangea easily brings three times the price 4-inch geraniums have brought.

SEEDLINGS DAMPING OFF.

Will you please tell us what to do to prevent vegetable seedlings from damping off? They start to damp off as soon as they come up and this condition keeps up until several dozen are missing from each box after they are transplanted. We plant them in new soil and ventilate as often as we can. If Bordeaux mixture in liquid or dry form will stop it, how strong a solution is required for tomato, cabbage, pepper and eggplant seedlings?

All vegetable seeds started under glass should have a light soil. If your soil is at all retentive, add some light material like leaf-mold to open it up. Old, well decayed manure, such as will crumble in your hand, also is suitable. For such seeds as lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, eggplant, pepper, tomato and celery, prepare a smooth surface, then sow your seeds evenly and not too thickly. Thick sowing causes overcrowded seedlings, which damp off badly unless carefully tended. Water the seeds, using a rose can for the purpose, and then, instead of covering with loam, simply dust a little fine coal ashes over them, and you will have excellent germination. The coal ashes act as a sponge to suck up all superfluous moisture and prevent damping off.

Keep all seedlings well up to the light in order to prevent them from becoming leggy, and transplant them as soon as they make their second pair of leaves. If you allow them to become drawn when transplanting, you will need to bury a considerable part of the stem to keep them firm, and such plants are liable to damp off. Use light soil for all seedlings, and be sure the compost is warm. Water carefully and shade a little for a day or two. Do not use the hose on any pricked off seedlings. Dampen as little as possible on dark days. Select clear mornings for watering. Neither Bordeaux mixture nor any other spray will prevent seedlings damping off. Such seedlings as tomatoes and peppers must have a warm house. Lettuce and cabbage should be in a house 10 degrees cooler. These lines may not

PRIME POINSETTIAS.

To produce first-class poinsettias, not only now and then, but as a regular program, is no small achievement; it is real evidence of the grower's skill. That statement, you say, would be true also of many other kinds of stock. Yes, but it is applicable in a certain peculiar sort of way to poinsettias. They are not exceptionally difficult to grow, but they sometimes have an exceptionally sudden and disconcerting way of expressing their disapproval of ill-treatment. They are prone, in resenting abuse, to act so quickly and decisively as to allow the grower no time for repentance.

Their favorite manner of showing their resentment is to drop their foliage. Let us watch the poinsettias of the careless or inexperienced grower. For many days, perhaps, their big, handsome leaves have been the delight of his eyes. Meanwhile, in his own soul, he has "put forth the tender leaves of hope." (No intentional disrespect to Shakespeare.) But presently, when the grower thinks, "good easy man," full surely his poinsettias are a-ripening for a glorious Christmas harvest, their leaves begin, mayhap, to fade and fall and his "leaves of hope" do likewise.

But many poinsettia growers have reduced their cultural methods to so exact a system that there is scarcely any risk of disappointment. They follow a certain well planned routine and—well, they are not quite so confident about the future results as an expert baker is about his next batch of bread, but they are as confident as growers ever have a right to be.

F. E. Cremer, of Hanover, Pa., whose house of 1,600 poinsettias is here pictured, has been a successful grower of the "true Christmas red variety" for many years. He states that this particular houseful, marketed this season was one of the best lots he ever grew and "the entire crop graded No. 1."

In his brief letter to The Review, Mr. Cremer does not say a word about the precautions that he takes to guard against failure. Still, it is practice rather than theory that counts in such a matter. Most of us are aware that injudicious watering, especially excessive watering in a low temperature, is one of the surest causes of loss of poinsettia foliage. But, then, both experience and discernment are needed in order to determine just what constitutes moderate drinking for poinsettias. We know that poinsettias, since their native home is in tropical Mexico and Central America, prefer a warm atmosphere, around 60 degrees at night. We know, too, that they may remain unharmed in a considerably lower temperature than that, if they are comparatively dry at the roots, but a combination of wetness and coolness is a sure precursor of yellow and falling leaves.

Starvation at the roots also is conducive to leaf trouble. In most cases, therefore, moderate doses of weak liquid manure once in four or five days are necessary in the later stages of poinsettia culture. A small proportion of soot in this liquid has an excellent effect. But, as too generous an allowance of liquid manure may be as injurious as an oversupply of water, it is important to have the compost sufficiently nourishing at the start. Some growers think that top-dressings of cow manure are safer and more efficacious as extra food for poinsettias than are applications of manure water.

COUNTERING DREER'S BARRAGE

FEDERAL BOARD REPLIES.

Defends Its Quarantine Order.

Because of the storm of protest which broke about the Federal Horticultural Board the moment the drastic nature of its quarantine order was realized, Dr. C. L. Marlatt, chairman, has felt impelled to issue a document of some 4,000 words—about eight columns of The Review—explaining and defending its action. The "Memorandum," as Dr. Marlatt calls it, principally is a reply to the "Protest" of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., sent in circular form to many interested and published as a page advertisement in The Review of January 9. This document Dr. Marlatt holds responsible for "practically all" the protest which has arisen.

In his memorandum Dr. Marlatt seeks to refute the charge that the trade has been ignored and seeks to give the impression that a considerable proportion of the trade approves the action of the board. He says:

Steps Leading to the Quarantine.

"The need for additional restrictions on the importation of nursery stock and other plants and seeds has been under careful consideration by the board for several years. This need has been emphasized by numerous requests and resolutions urging greater restrictions on plant importations, received from officials and associations representing state departments of agriculture, state nursery inspectors and official entomologists and plant pathologists of the United States. Similar requests have been received from national and state forestry, horticultural and other allied associations, and from many leading nurserymen and florists. As a basis for such additional restrictions a public hearing was conducted at this department May 28, 1918, and the proposed restrictions were thoroughly discussed with all the interests involved, including both importing nurserymen and seedsmen, as well as leading producing nurserymen and florists.

"Following this hearing and at the request of the board, the subject was given careful study in all of its phases by the plant experts of the Department of Agriculture over a period of several months, in the course of which many of the principal nursery and florist establishments of the United States were visited by these experts and the details of the proposed quarantine were discussed with the persons in charge of these establishments. As a result of this extended inquiry a tentative draft of proposed regulations was formulated and submitted to the principal nurserymen of the country. A final conference was then held in the office of the chairman of the board, October 18, 1918, at which all interested parties were invited to submit criticisms or suggestions either in person or by letter. The quarantine and regulations as promulgated represent, therefore, the best judgment of the plant experts of this department based on this extended consideration of the entire subject.

In the Senate of the United States, February 7, a large part of the day was devoted to debate denunciatory of the order of the British Board of Trade restricting the importation of articles principally manufactured in the United States. But none of the Senators who loudly demanded action by our State Department seemed aware that one of our own governmental agencies, the Federal Horticultural Board, had fired the first shot in commercial warfare by prohibiting imports of plants principally produced in England, France, Belgium and Holland.

It is presumed British nurserymen will seek to prevent the withdrawal of the embargoes of which the United States complains until our government cancels its quarantine against British nursery products.

Objections in Letters of Protest.

"Recently numerous letters have reached the department protesting against the enforcement of the quarantine. Practically all of these letters are in response to a printed circular entitled 'Protest Against the Horticultural Import Prohibition,' signed by Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, and sent to nurserymen all over the country. Most of the letters received simply repeat the statements contained in Mr. Dreer's circular letter.

"In that letter reference is made to what is considered inconsistencies in the regulations in that they permit the entry of rose stocks for propagation and of six varieties of bulbs, while they exclude budded or grafted roses and all bulbs with the exception of the six varieties referred to.

"During the period when the quarantine was under discussion the Federal Horticultural Board was urged very strongly by many advisers, including horticultural and forestry associations and state plant inspectors and their organizations and many American growers, to prohibit the importation of all nursery stock and other plants, on the ground that all such plants are sources of risk of introducing dangerous insects and plant diseases.

"Such dangers do exist. They are greatest in importations from little known countries, many of which do not maintain any system of inspection. The dangers are proportionally greater among the miscellaneous classes of nursery stock and other plants, including bulbs, which are imported in smaller quantities, but which represent numerous genera and species and may bring in a corresponding number of new plant pests.

Why Discriminate?

"While complete exclusion undoubtedly affords the greatest measure of safety, the governing principle in the quarantine is to limit plant introductions to the classes of plants which have been represented by the plant interests concerned in this country as being essential to plant production; in other words, the raw material out of which salable fruit trees, roses, etc., are made. To these were added certain classes of plants, including bulbs and seeds, which could be reasonably safeguarded by inspection and disinfection.

"In the case of rose stocks the distinction between stocks on the one hand and budded or grafted roses on the other was made with a view to limiting importations largely to such stocks as are usually grown in commercial nurseries where special care is exercised to control and eradicate pests. The stocks permitted entry under Item 3 of Regulation 3 are practically always grown in commercial nurseries, while budded and grafted rose plants may, immediately upon their arrival in the United States, be shipped broadcast over the country to consumers who pay little or no attention to the eradication of any insects or diseases the plants may carry. Rose stocks, furthermore, as imported are seldom more than 1 year old, whereas the finished rose plants are 2 years or more old and consequently correspondingly more likely to be the means of introducing pests.

To Admit Novelties.

"With respect to bulbs it was realized that a danger existed and the entry was restricted to classes of bulbs least subject to risk of bringing in new pests and which, from their nature, could be most readily inspected and determined as clean. The excluded bulbs involve the less important and miscellaneous importations coming from widely scattered sources and the entry of which is attended with much greater risk of introduction of plant diseases and insect pests.

"Provision is made in the quarantine for the entry in limited quantities of these prohibited bulbs and other plants through the office of Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction of this department, for the purpose of keeping the country supplied with new varieties and the necessary propagating stock—such entry necessarily being safeguarded by the highly developed inspection and quarantine service now organized by this department. It is impracticable to give this type of inspection to commercial importations. The cost would be prohibitive, especially under conditions which would require very frequent provision for holding the imported material in quarantine for a period of months or years, and the necessity for very high grade and expert inspectors. Furthermore, inspectors with the training required for this critical work are not available for handling importations of these restricted classes of plants on a commercial scale.

Quarantine Was Approved

"Mr. Dreer's letter also conveys the impression that at the hearing and subsequent conference the information given the board was against the advisability of putting the quarantine into effect. On the contrary, at the hearing of May 28, which was largely attended and of which a stenographic record was kept, the argument was strongly in favor of the quarantine and, as indicated in the early part of this statement, the restrictions which have been embodied in this quarantine were strongly urged and endorsed both by many representatives of the nursery trade and unanimously by letters received from officials representing the forest, agricultural and horticultural interests of the nation. The conference on October 18 was especially to give opportunity to the small body of commercial importers to discuss the restrictions provisionally determined upon in the regulations which would directly affect their interests, and this discussion, therefore, naturally brought into prominence these objections. On the other hand, important producing nurserymen and florists, both in person and by letter, strongly supported the restrictions as then presented and finally adopted.

They Began It.

"The argument presented that this quarantine is unjust to European countries, particularly at this time when they are just released from the restrictions on commerce caused by the war, has weight only in the keen sympathy we all feel, especially for Belgium and France. If, however, there are important dangers to be guarded against and therefore a real need for these restrictions, mere sentiment, however strongly warranted, has no place. In point of fact, with respect to the two countries which have suffered most from the war—France and Belgium—the latter is the only one which is seriously affected by this quarantine. The plant exports of France are largely fruit tree stocks which are still permitted entry. Unfortunately, the plant exports of Belgium are largely ornamentals shipped with earth about the roots and are therefore the ones which entail greatest risk to the United States; and, furthermore, the inspection service of Belgium is inferior to that of both France and Holland. In the case of Holland the argument from the war standpoint does not apply to the same extent, and, furthermore, the bulb exports of Holland are not materially interfered with. The potted and balled plants, however, from Holland convey the same dangers that they would from Belgium and other foreign countries, and are accordingly excluded.

"With respect to this action as to European countries, it may properly be noted that this quarantine merely places the United States in more close alignment with (but still behind) the action long since taken by these countries relative to plant imports from the United States. France, Holland, Germany, and to a less extent Belgium, have long maintained practically complete prohibition of plant imports from the United States."

Counters on Dreer.

Dr. Marlatt goes on at length to repeat the old assertions as to the vast monetary losses alleged to have been caused by San Jose scale, brown-tail moth, gypsy moth, peach moth, and many others, citing also records as to the condition of infestation of shipments recently imported, to show that the danger has not passed.

"The Japanese beetle," says Dr. Marlatt, "brought in about the same time as the peach moth, has already obtained such firm foothold that in view of its habits and powers of prolonged flight it is probably incapable of extermination and will no doubt ultimately overspread the United States. It attacks not only practically all fruits, but also many garden vegetables and corn. The amount of damage which it will ultimately cause to American agriculture is undoubtedly tremendous. It is worthy of note that this beetle, in the opinion of the experts of this department and of the state of New Jersey who have investigated the matter, was brought in by the Dreer nursery with importations of iris from Japan. The insect first appeared in the heart of the Dreer nurseries and has spread from this center over an area approximately of 25,000 acres, involving four townships in New Jersey opposite Philadelphia."

"The annual cost to this country of the San Jose scale and the probable ultimate annual cost of these other two more recently introduced oriental pests would probably pay for the total importations since the foundation of this republic of ornamental, nursery and florist stock. The declared value of the importation of such stock for the year 1914 was only $3,606,808, and it should be understood that the plant stocks still permitted entry represent much of this value."

"The experts of this department are convinced that it will be possible very promptly to produce in this country all the plants prohibited by this quarantine and this opinion has been indorsed by leading nurserymen and florists."

Lily Bulbs May Come in Soil.

The memorandum also goes on to record the first modification of the quarantine order, which originally permitted the importation of lily bulbs only when free from soil, a practical impossibility.

"The main lines of this quarantine are undoubtedly justified," says Dr. Marlatt, "but it is entirely proper at

This range was formerly conducted by Charles Dietz, the late mayor of North Bergen, also a florist of high standing. It was in 1890 that Mr. Otte married Miss Marie Dietz, eldest daughter of Mr. Dietz, to whose business he succeeded in 1908. Mr. Otte was born in Union Hill, N. Like his father-in-law, he has been honored by his fellow-townsmen by election to office, for he does not confine his activities to the business in which he has achieved success. He was elected to membership on the township committee of North Bergen and assumed the duties of this position January 1. His initiation into office was made the occasion for a lavish floral display.

The quarantine and regulations as promulgated represent, therefore, the best judgment of the plant experts of this department based on this extended consideration of the entire subject.

In the Senate of the United States, February 7, a large part of the day was devoted to debate denunciatory of the order of the British Board of Trade restricting the importation of articles principally manufactured in the United States. But none of the Senators who loudly demanded action by our State Department seemed aware that one of our own governmental agencies, the Federal Horticultural Board, had fired the first shot in commercial warfare by prohibiting imports of plants principally produced in England, France, Belgium and Holland.

It is presumed British nurserymen will seek to prevent the withdrawal of the embargoes of which the United States complains until our government cancels its quarantine against British nursery products.

Objections in Letters of Protest.

"Recently numerous letters have reached the department protesting against the enforcement of the quarantine. Practically all of these letters are in response to a printed circular entitled 'Protest Against the Horticultural Import Prohibition,' signed by Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, and sent to nurserymen all over the country. Most of the letters received simply repeat the statements contained in Mr. Dreer's circular letter.

"In that letter reference is made to what is considered inconsistencies in the regulations in that they permit the entry of rose stocks for propagation and of six varieties of bulbs, while they exclude budded or grafted roses and all bulbs with the exception of the six varieties referred to.

"During the period when the quarantine was under discussion the Federal Horticultural Board was urged very strongly by many advisers, including horticultural and forestry associations and state plant inspectors and their organizations and many American growers, to prohibit the importation of all nursery stock and other plants, on the ground that all such plants are sources of risk of introducing dangerous insects and plant diseases.

"Such dangers do exist. They are greatest in importations from little known countries, many of which do not maintain any system of inspection. The dangers are proportionally greater among the miscellaneous classes of nursery stock and other plants, including bulbs, which are imported in smaller quantities, but which represent numerous genera and species and may bring in a corresponding number of new plant pests.

Why Discriminate?

"While complete exclusion undoubtedly affords the greatest measure of safety, the governing principle in the quarantine is to limit plant introductions to the classes of plants which have been represented by the plant interests concerned in this country as being essential to plant production; in other words, the raw material out of which salable fruit trees, roses, etc., are made. To these were added certain classes of plants, including bulbs and seeds, which could be reasonably safeguarded by inspection and disinfection.

"In the case of rose stocks the distinction between stocks on the one hand and budded or grafted roses on the other was made with a view to limiting importations largely to such stocks as are usually grown in commercial nurseries where special care is exercised to control and eradicate pests. The stocks permitted entry under Item 3 of Regulation 3 are practically always grown in commercial nurseries, while budded and grafted rose plants may, immediately upon their arrival in the United States, be shipped broadcast over the country to consumers who pay little or no attention to the eradication of any insects or diseases the plants may carry. Rose stocks, furthermore, as imported are seldom more than 1 year old, whereas the finished rose plants are 2 years or more old and consequently correspondingly more likely to be the means of introducing pests.

To Admit Novelties.

"With respect to bulbs it was realized that a danger existed and the entry was restricted to classes of bulbs least subject to risk of bringing in new pests and which, from their nature, could be most readily inspected and determined as clean. The excluded bulbs involve the less important and miscellaneous importations coming from widely scattered sources and the entry of which is attended with much greater risk of introduction of plant diseases and insect pests.

"Provision is made in the quarantine for the entry in limited quantities of these prohibited bulbs and other plants through the office of Foreign Seed and Plant Introduction of this department, for the purpose of keeping the country supplied with new varieties and the necessary propagating stock—such entry necessarily being safeguarded by the highly developed inspection and quarantine service now organized by this department. It is impracticable to give this type of inspection to commercial importations. The cost would be prohibitive, especially under conditions which would require very frequent provision for holding the imported material in quarantine for a period of months or years, and the necessity for very high grade and expert inspectors. Furthermore, inspectors with the training required for this critical work are not available for handling importations of these restricted classes of plants on a commercial scale.

Quarantine Was Approved

"Mr. Dreer's letter also conveys the impression that at the hearing and subsequent conference the information given the board was against the advisability of putting the quarantine into effect. On the contrary, at the hearing of May 28, which was largely attended and of which a stenographic record was kept, the argument was strongly in favor of the quarantine and, as indicated in the early part of this statement, the restrictions which have been embodied in this quarantine were strongly urged and endorsed both by many representatives of the nursery trade and unanimously by letters received from officials representing the forest, agricultural and horticultural interests of the nation. The conference on October 18 was especially to give opportunity to the small body of commercial importers to discuss the restrictions provisionally determined upon in the regulations which would directly affect their interests, and this discussion, therefore, naturally brought into prominence these objections. On the other hand, important producing nurserymen and florists, both in person and by letter, strongly supported the restrictions as then presented and finally adopted.

They Began It.

"The argument presented that this quarantine is unjust to European countries, particularly at this time when they are just released from the restrictions on commerce caused by the war, has weight only in the keen sympathy we all feel, especially for Belgium and France. If, however, there are important dangers to be guarded against and therefore a real need for these restrictions, mere sentiment, however strongly warranted, has no place. In point of fact, with respect to the two countries which have suffered most from the war—France and Belgium—the latter is the only one which is seriously affected by this quarantine. The plant exports of France are largely fruit tree stocks which are still permitted entry. Unfortunately, the plant exports of Belgium are largely ornamentals shipped with earth about the roots and are therefore the ones which entail greatest risk to the United States; and, furthermore, the inspection service of Belgium is inferior to that of both France and Holland. In the case of Holland the argument from the war standpoint does not apply to the same extent, and, furthermore, the bulb exports of Holland are not materially interfered with. The potted and balled plants, however, from Holland convey the same dangers that they would from Belgium and other foreign countries, and are accordingly excluded.

"With respect to this action as to European countries, it may properly be noted that this quarantine merely places the United States in more close alignment with (but still behind) the action long since taken by these countries relative to plant imports from the United States. France, Holland, Germany, and to a less extent Belgium, have long maintained practically complete prohibition of plant imports from the United States."

Counters on Dreer.

Dr. Marlatt goes on at length to repeat the old assertions as to the vast monetary losses alleged to have been caused by San Jose scale, brown-tail moth, gypsy moth, peach moth, and many others, citing also records as to the condition of infestation of shipments recently imported, to show that the danger has not passed.

"The Japanese beetle," says Dr. Marlatt, "brought in about the same time as the peach moth, has already obtained such firm foothold that in view of its habits and powers of prolonged flight it is probably incapable of extermination and will no doubt ultimately overspread the United States. It attacks not only practically all fruits, but also many garden vegetables and corn. The amount of damage which it will ultimately cause to American agriculture is undoubtedly tremendous. It is worthy of note that this beetle, in the opinion of the experts of this department and of the state of New Jersey who have investigated the matter, was brought in by the Dreer nursery with importations of iris from Japan. The insect first appeared in the heart of the Dreer nurseries and has spread from this center over an area approximately of 25,000 acres, involving four townships in New Jersey opposite Philadelphia."

"The annual cost to this country of the San Jose scale and the probable ultimate annual cost of these other two more recently introduced oriental pests would probably pay for the total importations since the foundation of this republic of ornamental, nursery and florist stock. The declared value of the importation of such stock for the year 1914 was only $3,606,808, and it should be understood that the plant stocks still permitted entry represent much of this value."

"The experts of this department are convinced that it will be possible very promptly to produce in this country all the plants prohibited by this quarantine and this opinion has been indorsed by leading nurserymen and florists."

Lily Bulbs May Come in Soil.

The memorandum also goes on to record the first modification of the quarantine order, which originally permitted the importation of lily bulbs only when free from soil, a practical impossibility.

"The main lines of this quarantine are undoubtedly justified," says Dr. Marlatt, "but it is entirely proper at any time for the interests affected to make any suggestion of modification which may appeal to such interests as being warranted to meet essential needs and which can be granted without opening up dangers which Quarantine No. 37 is designed to guard against. Correspondingly, should it develop that the entry of any of the plants or classes of plants now permitted should be accompanied with dangers which cannot be otherwise safeguarded, on such showing the restrictions must necessarily be extended to cover such plants.

WILLIAM OTTE.

OF the many busy florists' establishments in the city of Weehawken, N. J., and its environs, in which North Bergen is located, that of William Otte is famed for the chrysanthemums and geraniums he has made his specialties. This range was formerly conducted by Charles Dietz, the late mayor of North Bergen, also a florist of high standing. It was in 1890 that Mr. Otte married Miss Marie Dietz, eldest daughter of Mr. Dietz, to whose business he succeeded in 1908. Mr. Otte was born in Union Hill, N. J., where he lived for twenty-one years. Like his father-in-law, he has been honored by his fellow-townsmen by election to office, for he does not confine his activities to the business in which he has achieved success. He was elected to membership on the township committee of North Bergen and assumed the duties of this position January 1. His initiation into office was made the occasion for a lavish floral display.

"In this connection the department now has prepared an amendment to Regulation 3 permitting the use of sand, soil or earth in packing the bulbs specified in Item No. 1 of that regulation when such sand, soil or earth has been previously sterilized in accordance with methods prescribed by the Federal Horticultural Board."

S. A. F. FILES PROTEST.

All Day Conference with Board.

Secretary John Young and F. R. Pierson went to Washington February 6 in response to a telegraphic summons from W. F. Gude, chairman of the S. A. F. committee on tariff and legislation, to present the brief of protest which has been in preparation for some weeks, against the embargo on plant importations, established by the Federal Horticultural Board. The Secretary of Agriculture declining to receive the protest, the delegation was referred to the board, with whom it was in session from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. February 7. Dr. Marlatt was present, also Dr. Kellerman. J. D. Eisele, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, and C. B. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., also were of the delegation.

Mr. Pierson acted as spokesman and the conference was of the "heart to heart" kind, with an absence of any ill feeling. There seemed to be a disposition on the part of some members of the board to favor a closer coöperation with the trade interests.

Brief Is Discussed at Length.

The brief as a whole was not presented, but certain parts of it were discussed at length and the document was carefully examined. It was particularly noted that it was signed by the entire directorate of the S. A. F. and its committee, showing that it covered a wide range of territory, thus creating an impression which boded for good. Dr. Marlatt had several direct questions put to him, which, of course, he answered diplomatically, but, nevertheless, must have convinced him that the delegation had strong grounds for argument. J. CHICAGO MAKES A START.

The first coöperative advertisement ever published by the trade in Chicago appeared in the leading morning paper February 10. It is reproduced in somewhat reduced size on page 19 of this issue of The Review.

It is easier, apparently, to organize such coöperative efforts in the smaller cities; neither New York nor Chicago heretofore has succeeded in getting together for this work. Wherever tried, coöperative advertising for special flower days has been successful. The individual expense is small, but the general benefit is large. There are nearly 500 florists in Chicago and only about one out of ten has contributed in any way to the fund for the St. Valentine's day advertising, but each and every one of the total number will receive a benefit.

DOINGS OF THE FLORISTS' CLUBS

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

A Big February Meeting.

A regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the club's rooms, Grand Opera House building, February 10, with an attendance of about 175, which included a few visitors, among whom were George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; Mr. Libby, of Strout's, Biddeford, Me., and Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.

Walter F. Sheridan, for the committee appointed for the purpose, presented a resolution of sympathy with J. K. Allen in the death of his son, George. Charles Schenck presented a resolution of condolence with the family of the late Mrs. Patrick McGovern.

Mr. Schenck, as chairman of the dinner committee, announced that the club's annual dinner will be held at the Hotel Biltmore, Saturday evening, March 15, and that the price of the tickets will be $5.

Protests on Quarantine.

Secretary Young told of the visit made by him and Frank R. Pierson to Washington, February 6. It was pleasing to learn, Mr. Young said, that congressmen were taking an interest in the situation, among them James R. Mann, of Chicago, and it was hoped that pressure would be brought to bear on the authorities sufficient to at least obtain some important modifications in the board's order. He, further, read resolutions passed by the New England Nurserymen's Association and forwarded to the board and stated that a large number of protests from various horticultural bodies had been presented, all of which appeared to have some weight.

Maurice Fuld said that practically all of the garden clubs he knew of had sent protests, clubs composed largely of the wives of men prominent in society and public affairs.

Richard Vincent, Jr., said that the Baltimore Florists' Club was having a big meeting that evening, when the subject was to be discussed, and that several congressmen had promised to be present at the meeting.

New Members.

The following were elected to membership: Hans Schwarz, Riverdale, N. Y.; James Moraio, Rye, N. Y.; Anthony Moraio, Rye, N. Y.; Robert H. Lickman, East Islip, N. Y.; Joseph Lee, Islip, N. Y.; Frank Laban, Matthew Sampson, Jr., Max Lehman, Robert La Bau and Wm. Doyle, New York city, and Isaac Abrams, Brooklyn.

The following were nominated for election at the next meeting: Wm. W. Matthews, Great Neck, N. Y.; John Joyce, Congers, N. Y.; Joseph Schneider, Congers, N. Y.; John Noe, Congers, N. Y.; J. P. Klausner, Wm. T. Iler, E. A. Hartland and Chas. Futterman, New York city; Aug. M. Danernheim, Brooklyn; George Schafer, Maspeth, N. Y.; John M. Niemeyer, Whitestone, N. Y., and E. Fardel, Great Neck, N. Y. The following were announced as having taken out life memberships: George Cotsonas, Costos Sakelos, Marius Matheron, Aubrey S. Nash, Henry Hentz, Jr., and George Asmus.

Resignations were accepted from Sun Fukura, who has moved away, and from A. Dressel, who has embarked in the shipbuilding business.

A. H. Lickman, Jos. Lee, Max Lehman and Clarence R. Ankers, new members, were introduced by the chair, and made graceful acknowledgment of the courtesy.

Publication of the club's annual, with the membership list, was, on motion of W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., ordered to be dispensed with this year.

Miscellaneous Matters.

Secretary Young announced the death of Mrs. Elizabeth Fenrich, mother of Jos. S. Fenrich, and the president appointed a committee, W. H. Duckham, C. H. Totty and John Young, to prepare a resolution of sympathy.

President Kessler, C. H. Totty, J. A. Manda and Secretary Young made reference to the hearty manner in which they were entertained by Philip Breitmeyer and the Detroit Florists' Club during the recent meeting of the S. A. F. executive board in Detroit, and, on motion, the secretary was directed to communicate the thanks of the club to Mr. Breitmeyer and the Detroit club for the hospitality extended the New York members of the board. Mr. Kessler intimated that the Detroit boys had resolved to resume the bowling and sports features at the Detroit convention next August, on an elaborate scale, and that he personally had donated $25 to the prize list. He said he would later appoint a club committee to take up the matter of organizing a team to take part in the bowling contest.

Local Publicity Planned.

C. H. Totty spoke at some length on the publicity campaign and the determination of all concerned to raise a publicity fund of $100,000 this year. Secretary Young also spoke on the subject. Mr. Totty told of the plan of raising money adopted by the Milwaukee florists, under which they arranged to tax all sales on a basis of one per cent on wholesale prices and one-half of one per cent on returns to growers.

"Why could this not be done in New York?" he said, seventy-five per cent of the collection to be expended for local advertising and the remainder turned in to the S. A. F. publicity fund.

The idea seemed to meet the approval of the meeting and, on motion of Mr. Totty, it was resolved that the publicity committee of the club be added to by the appointment of two retailers, two wholesalers and two growers, that it reorganize and formulate a plan whereby a fund for publicity work could be raised on lines similar to those described.

Wallace R. Pierson, as a member of the publicity finance committee, spoke of the work at the joint meeting held recently in Cleveland. He pointed out the enormous benefit to be obtained through a vigorous campaign continued on the lines already laid down. This publicity is bringing those engaged in the florists' industry into "the promised land," he said.

Exhibits.

Several creditable exhibits were staged before the club and the committee on awards reported on them as follows:

Vase of Carnation Lucy, by Floral Gardens, Chatham, N. Y., vote of thanks.

Vases of Carnations Donald, Ward Improved and Sunshine, by Strout's, Biddeford, Me., vote of thanks.

Plant of new bougainvillea, by Emil Savoy, Secaucus, N. J., vote of thanks.

Vase of Carnation Laddie, by S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass., vote of thanks.

Three vases of orchid-flowered sweet peas, by John Weston, Valley Stream, L. I., vote of thanks.

Vase of Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late Pink, by C. H. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., honorable mention.

Vase of Carnation Laddie, by R. Hughes, Flushing, L. I., vote of thanks.

CHICAGO FLORISTS' CLUB.

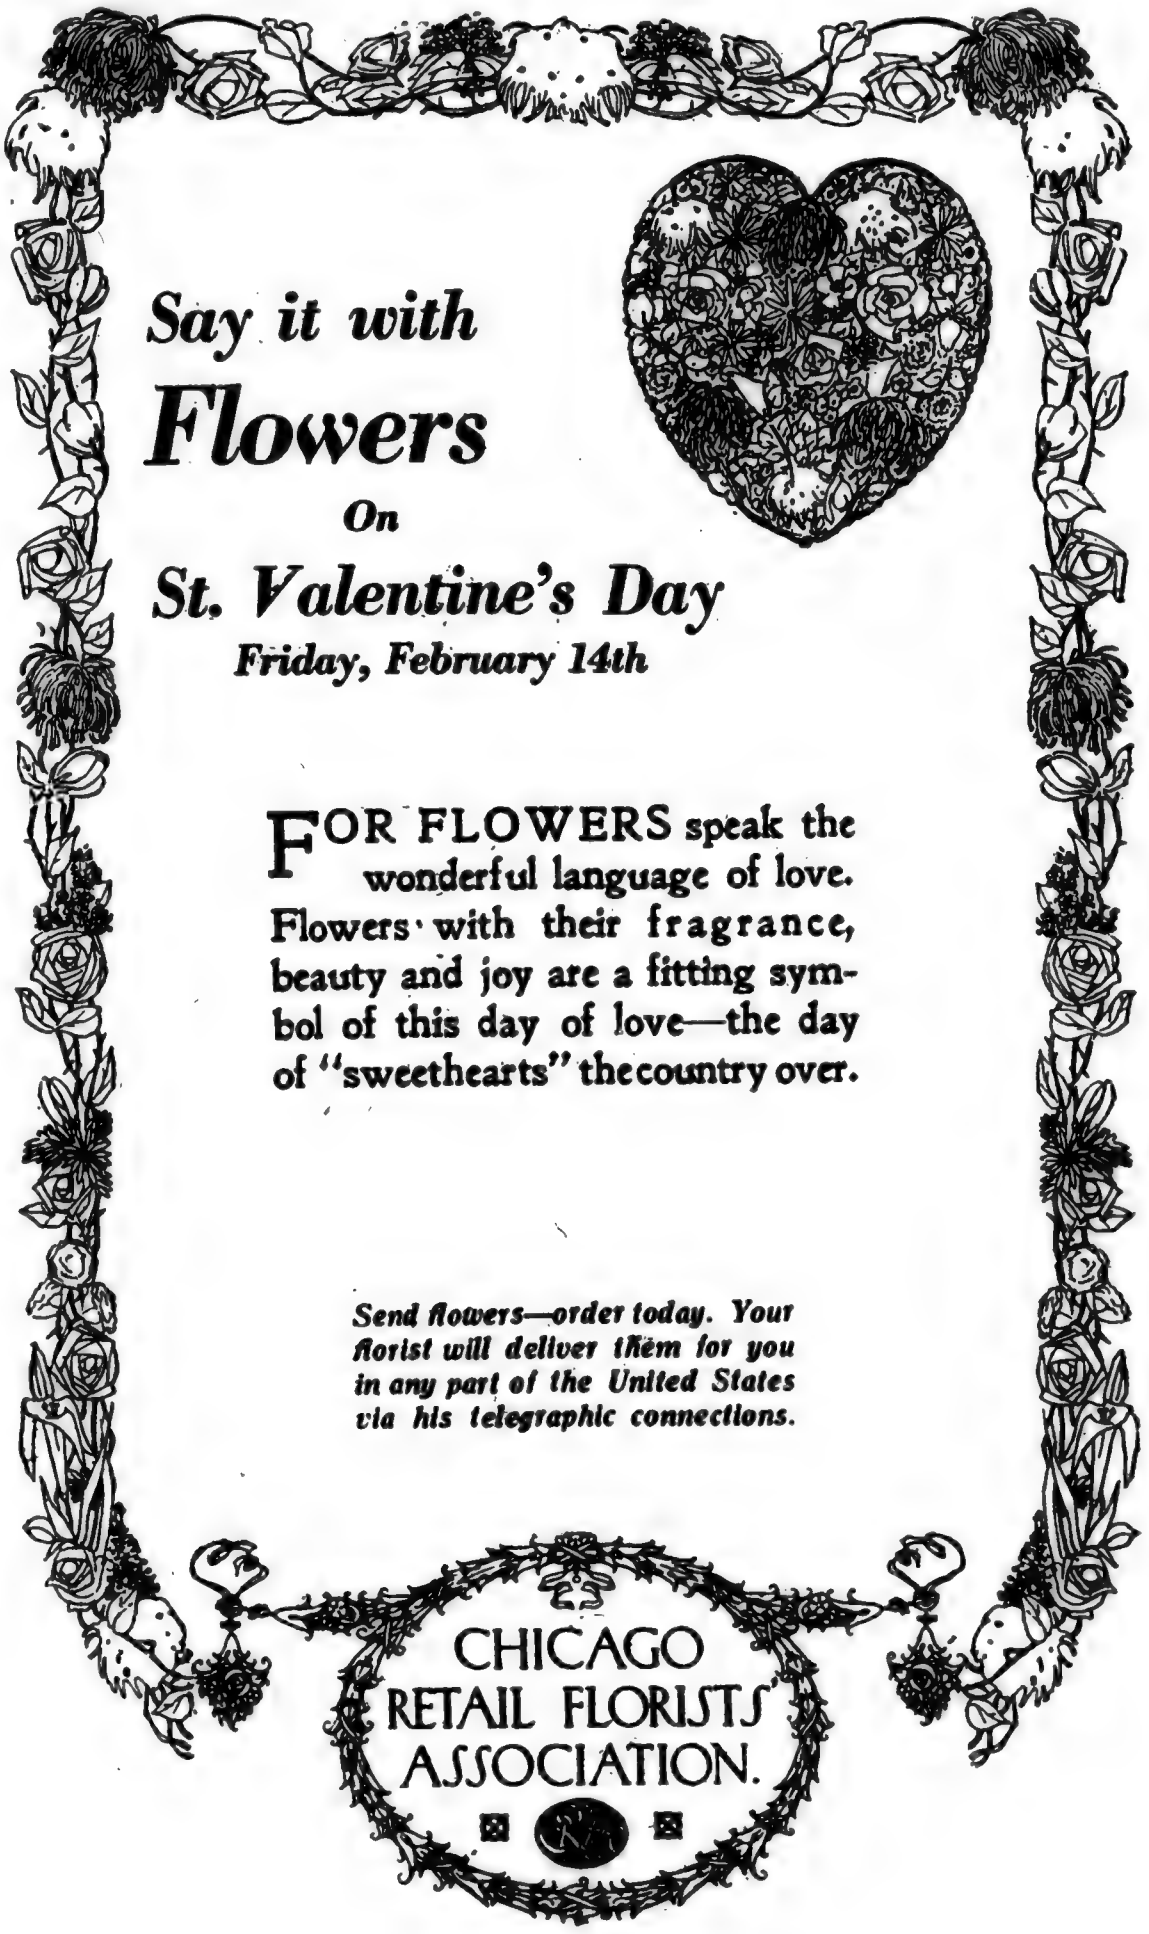
Holds Novelty Night Display.

The first business meeting of the year was held by the Chicago Florists' Club at the Hotel Randolph, February 6. There was a large attendance. It was called "Novelty night" and some excellent displays were made. The judges were: For carnations, C. W. Johnson, Harry Blewitt, P. W. Peterson; for roses, N. J. Wietor, W. J. Keimel, W. G. Earl; miscellaneous, Albert Erickson, George Ball, George Asmus.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. staged a large table of novelties for the coming flower holidays. There were valentine bouquets of various kinds, including some heart-shaped boxes of silk with hand-painted tops and hand-painted colonial corsage shields; Washington birthday novelties and a number of specialties for St. Patrick's day and Easter. The judges gave the exhibit honorable mention.

T. E. Waters designed a table with four empty chairs. There was a centerpiece of orchids. On the table were four gold magnolia wreaths, bearing black-edged cards for the four members of the club who have died this year, W. H. Amling, Conrad Frauenfelder, Thomas McAllister and Nicholas Karthauser. The wreaths were tied with golden brown ribbon and later were placed on the graves.

Another table by Poehlmann Bros. Co. contained a large funeral piece made of wheat sheaves tied with ribbon, with calla lilies in the center. It was trimmed on the bottom with silver green ruscus and cycas leaves. The table received honorable mention. Another table to receive honorable mention also was by Poehlmann Bros. Co., containing vases of Cattleya Trianæ and pink and white phalænopsis.



Honorable mention was given to a vase of Columbia roses exhibited by the Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, Ill.

Peter Pearson staged a vase of jonquils, Sir Watkin and Emperor, also a pot of Proserpine tulips, forced bulbs grown at Jefferson Park. Both Mr. Pearson's exhibits received honorable mention.

Three vases of freesia were staged by Alois Frey, of Crown Point, Ind., a yellow named Yellow Prince, a pink named General Pershing, and a lavender named Viola. He was awarded a certificate of merit for each.

The Joseph H. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., displayed a vase of Carnation Laddie, which took the A. C. S. medal at Cleveland. It scored 89 points.

A vase of a stiff-stemmed sport of Good Cheer carnation from E. H. Bla-meuser, of Niles Center, was highly commended by the judges. He also staged a vase of Carnation No. 9, which scored 79 points, and a vase of No. 27, which scored 82 points.

First Co-operative Advertisement of the Florists of Chicago.

Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, exhibited a large vase of their new carnation, Ruth Baur, which received the Dorner memorial medal at Cleveland. This scored 89 points.

George Ball received an honorable mention for a vase of calendulas.

A Busy Business Session.

The officers for 1919 had been installed at the club's January banquet, with the exception of Walter Amling, vice-president, who received his recognition in February. New committees were appointed as follows: Good-of-the club, T. E. Waters, chairman; publicity, August Lange, chairman; garden, J. C. Vaughan, chairman; advertising, Fred Lautenschlager, chairman; coal, C. L. Washburn, chairman; transportation, M. Barker. A posters committee of one was appointed, Sam Seligman. No assistants were appointed to help the chairmen, it being up to each chairman to appoint his own committee. Each new chairman was called upon for a few remarks. T. E. Waters said he would place every member of the club on his committee, which went well with those present. In the absence of August Lange, George Asmus told of the coöperative advertising plan of the Retail Florists' Association and the Wholesale Cut Flower Association. Arrangements had been made to run a good-sized ad on St. Valentine's day in the Chicago Tribune February 11 and February 13. Mr. Asmus had with him the drawings, made by a Tribune artist. They looked good and the reading matter was pulling. It is a try-out. He also had with him window posters and signs for St. Valentine's day, which now are being used on wagons, etc., all over the city. All bore the S. A. F. slogan, "Say It with Flowers," which, Mr. Asmus says, is approved by the biggest advertising executives of the country as one of the best they ever have seen. He also made some remarks on the S. A. F. national advertising.

A motion to donate $200 to the local advertising fund was carried. Fred Lautenschlager, of the advertising committee, stated that the club has disposed of all Valentine stickers and posters and has made arrangements for the disposal of all of those for Mothers' day, netting the club a good profit. Mr. Lautenschlager made a motion to donate $500 of this to the S. A. F. national fund. His motion was quickly seconded by Paul R. Klingsporn, vice-president of the S. A. F. for northern Illinois, and unanimously adopted. The president called on Mr. Klingsporn for a few S. A. F. remarks. A Miss Stewart, speaking for the Arcadia highway movement, asked for a donation of $200 toward the fund to start the new highway from Great Lakes to Chicago. No action was taken. A committee consisting of George Asmus, C. W. Johnson and Fred Lautenschlager was appointed to take charge of the arrangements for the American Carnation Society meeting in Chicago in 1920. It was decided to have the meeting at the La Salle hotel and the society will be asked to hold its meeting here the third week in January, instead of the fourth week, as the latter is the automobile show week and all hotels are taxed to the limit.

E. H. Mazey, of Minneapolis, made a few interesting remarks, as did George Blackman, of Evansville, Ind.

President L. R. Bohannon, of the Retail Florists' Association, told of the work of the new organization. A. F. J. Baur, who was present, donated his large vase of Ruth Baur carnations to the club for the purpose of sending them to George A. Kuhl, of Pekin, Ill., who is again ill in the Presbyterian hospital. Poehlmann Bros. Co. did likewise with its vases of orchids.

Applications for membership were received from the following: William Wichtendahl, John G. Poehlmann, Nick Lemperis, Ove Gnatt, D. J. O'Keefe, Frank McCabe, Thomas Wilson and Fred E. Mattie. Rules were set aside and one ballot was cast for the applicants, making them all active members. Applications received at the previous meeting also were balloted on at the same time and the applicants elected. They were, Leopold Romansky, L. R. Bohannon, George Goebel, George J. Walther.

INDIANA FLORISTS GATHER.

State Convention Interesting.

A meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana was held February 2 in the store of the Smith & Young Co., Indianapolis. President Anders Rasmussen, of Albany, was in the chair. After routine business, several new names were proposed for membership: L. H. Heney, of Greenfield; L. E. Hitz, of Madison; Messrs. David and Kelley, of Franklin. Martin Nelson, of Indianapolis, was elected to membership.

Appoint Show Committee.

The committee to have charge of the fall chrysanthemum show was named as follows: John E. Hartje, A. F. J. Baur, Joseph H. Hill, Herman Piel and Prof. Lummell. With such an able committee, it is agreed that the exhibition will be a success.

Mr. Moore, of Chicago, gave an interesting talk explaining the Skinner system of irrigation.

Oscar Carlsteadt, one of the members recently returned from overseas, told of his experiences "over there." Some thrilling stories from the front were related and a summary of the general conditions existing in France was given.

Discuss Insurance.

Florists' hail and wind storm insurance was a subject brought up for discussion and it was deemed wise to change the plans in this connection. The project is still a "live" one, however, and will be carried out.

After adjournment, a social hour followed. Smith & Young, as hosts, served a tasty buffet luncheon.

A friendly but spirited discussion of prices was entered into by the wholesalers and retailers. Various members on both sides were "bawled out," but all in good faith. The retailers received the worst end of the argument, but both sides were benefited by the presentation of views. E. E. T.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

A PLANT GROWERS' SOCIETY.

The offspring of the good old S. A. F. are numerous now and include the Rose Society, the Carnation Society and the Chrysanthemum Society, besides a couple of stepchildren, the Sweet Pea Society and the Peony Society. All of these organizations have been wonderfully beneficial to the trade in many ways. Old varieties of flowers have been improved upon and many new ones introduced through the medium of these organizations and the meetings and conventions which have been the means of stimulating interest.

There is now a field for a plant growers' association. With an embargo to be placed on practically everything in the plant line from abroad on which we depend to such an extent, we must look to our own resources for our supplies. Therefore, a plant growers' association, to encourage the production of American-grown plants for the American trade, would doubtless be of great benefit to all concerned.

A meeting of such an organization, with an exhibition of plants at a seasonable time, to show the great variety and number of plants developed by the trade at home, would be a welcome addition to the other trade organizations. Who will second the motion?

C. C. Pollworth.

ANOTHER REMEDY FOR SOOT.

In The Review of January 2 there was an article entitled "How to Remove Soot," in which salt was recommended for this purpose. Salt is a good remedy, of which I learned fifty years ago, but zinc is a better one. A scrap of zinc half the size of a man's hand thrown on the fire will clean the pipes and the chimney and prevent the soot from collecting again for some time. It may be thrown on the ordinary fire and it will not deaden the fire.

John I. Whiting.

CONSIDER CAREFULLY.

The article entitled, "A Bit About This and That," by Robert S. Edgar, in The Review of January 9, is good and expresses my views exactly as regards the plant embargo. I also read the disclaimer on the editorial page of the same issue and fully appreciate the position of The Review in regard to opinions expressed by correspondents. I know The Review always has been on the right side, has helped the cause of the working florist and stood for better wages and working conditions. As Mr. Edgar said, we are in a period of automatic reconstruction. Labor is playing an important part today and the business man should appreciate its value.

IN KHAKI AND BLUE

HOME AGAIN.

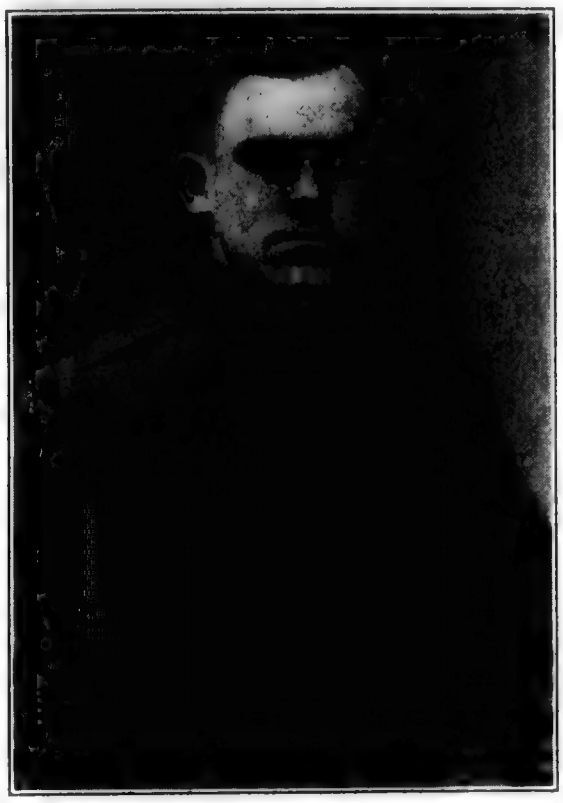
Warriors Become Civilians.

Daily the ranks of the army, at home and abroad, are being thinned, not by machine gun bullets or the deadly shrapnel, nor by the horrible poisonous gas, but by the demobilization machinery which is now working smoothly and surely, returning men to their families, their friends, their old jobs and, what is nearly as important to the men in service uniform, their civilian garb.

Now, instead of the dreaded casualty list, we read in the daily newspapers of the happy reunions which have been made possible by the discharge of men who have served their country in its hour of need. It is a delightful change for all of us, even if no one close to us was in the service.

Florist-soldiers are among those flocking home, or planning to come soon. The trade has no reason to feel ashamed of its record in the Great War, for out of the stores and greenhouses came many men who served nobly and well, some of them making the supreme sacrifice for the land of their birth or adoption. Those who have and will come back will be better men for having gone, and their return to the business will mean increased efficiency and improvement in every way.

Billeted with Germans.



Defeat has not made the German people less hospitable, according to Sergt. Herbert Sharper, whose civilian work was that of assisting his brother, John Sharper, of Oxen Hill, Md., and who now is with the Third Army of Occupation, A. E. F. He is stationed at Andernach, Germany.

In a letter received by his brother recently, the sergeant says that he and four other American soldiers are living in the home of a German at Andernach, and that their sleeping quarters are in the parlor of the house. He further says the family is extremely kind to their perhaps unwelcome visitors.

The likeness of Sergt. Sharper which appears on this page of The Review was made from a photograph taken in Andernach, presumably by a German photographer. Perhaps the camera operator would have preferred a machine gun to a camera, but Sergt. Sharper's expression gives an idea of the determination which caused Germany to wilt before our troops.

Sergt. Sharper is yearning for a sight of "the best country in the world," he writes, but has reconciled himself to waiting several months for his dream to materialize, as he is not likely to be ordered home until after the treaty of peace actually has been signed.

The flowers of France are not equal to those of the United States, in the opinion of Sergt. Sharper, who has been in the overseas army since April, 1918. He entered the actual battle zone in June and, during that month and the one following, he was in the thick of some of the most desperate fighting of the war. He came out without a scratch.

John Sharper is building a new greenhouse, 35x150 feet, on his property at Oxen Hill in preparation for the return of his soldier brother.

Florist Home from Navy.

M. H. Baumgartner, who was an electrician, second class, in the United States Navy, has been released from active service and is again at the head of his range at Brunswick, Ga., operated under the name of the Brunswick Floral Co. He enlisted in the navy early last spring and the business has been carried on for him by his parents during his absence. He reports the difficulty in getting hold of young stock for growing on as one of his worst troubles at present.

Florist Visits London Shops.

Edward Ferkins, who was foreman for James E. Beach, of Bridgeport, Conn., before going into Y. M. C. A. war work, is located in London and enjoys the opportunity of visiting the London flower shops. Writing to friends at home of his observations of trade activities in the English metropolis, he describes with admiration the fine displays to be seen in English florists' shops. Mr. Ferkins is in a base warehouse where quantities of supplies are received and shipped out.

California Men Returning.

Victor Ferrari, who is a nephew of Peter Ferrari, of the firm of Ferrari Bros., San Francisco, again is with this firm, having received his discharge and lost no time in taking up the duties he laid down to follow the colors.

Frank Thatcher, formerly with the firm of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., San Francisco, recently was transferred to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., but hopes to obtain his discharge within a few weeks. He plans to return directly to San Francisco.

F. C. Jaeger II, who is the "Son" in the firm of F. C. Jaeger & Co., San Francisco, when last heard from was in Portugal, but was looking forward to making the home run in time to enter the Golden Gate March 1. In his travels with the Merchant Marine he has improved opportunities for seeing the great world. One event of his stay in Italy was viewing the reception accorded President Wilson's party.

Soldiers Become Cubs.

First Lieut. Kellogg M. Patterson, formerly a member of The Review staff and press agent for Chicago flower shows, has been chosen to head a school of journalism which will be started at Fort Sheridan, north of Chicago, for wounded soldiers convalescing at the post and the enlisted personnel stationed there.

The school will publish a paper for circulation among the soldiers, as well as in Chicago and elsewhere. Those who desire to learn any phase of the newspaper profession will be given instruction.

Lieut. Patterson went into the army as a private in Company D, 341st Infantry, at Camp Grant, Ill. He was warranted corporal soon after entering the service, and as a corporal was admitted to the third officers' training camp. Completing the strenuous course prescribed there, he received his commission as second lieutenant. Later he advanced to first lieutenant.

During his term of service Lieut. Patterson has been stationed at several cantonments. At Camp Pike, Ark., he was managing editor of the camp paper, which bore the name of being one of the best published in the mobilization centers.

Capt. William Wolff Smith and Col. Frank Billings, of the surgeon general's office, and Major Reagle, educational officer at Fort Sheridan, are coöperating with Lieut. Patterson in arranging for the school and newspaper.

Omaha Recruit Returns.

L. Larmon has returned to his home in Omaha, Neb., in the pink of condition and all ready to go to work again with a will to make up for time lost from business while engaged in helping to lick the Potsdam outfit.

Wins Croix de Guerre.

L. E. Dupuy, son of Louis Dupuy, Whitestone, N. Y., has returned from his service with the A. E. F., the proud possessor of a croix de guerre.

J. H. P.

Canal Dover, O.—C. Betscher has succeeded in obtaining a hardy hybrid pink carnation as a result of crossing the Grenadin type with the tree carnation. The scent of the clove, combined with the floriferousness of the Scotch pink, is an acquisition.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

FEVERFEW FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Now is a good time to bench double white feverfew for Memorial day. It is a good plan to let the plants remain in pots until the flower spikes start to push up. If benched earlier, they are slower in sending up their stalks. Give them a liberal soil, such as you would use for mums, and, if possible, place them in a house by themselves, for if the plants are late they can be forced for a few weeks and for that reason it is best not to grow a variety of other Memorial day crops with them. The odor of feverfew is far from pleasant, but the flowers bear shipment well and are useful in bouquet work. Who will give us a pink or scarlet feverfew? There would be a nice little fortune for an originator of such a variety.

GLADIOLI ON BENCHES.

Now is a good time to plant a batch of gladioli in any empty benches you may have, or in spots where carnations are not too crowded or have died out. Do not overlook the beautiful primulinus hybrids. They will flower ahead of the larger and better known gandavensis varieties. The bulk of plantings made now will flower in May and a goodly proportion should come right for Memorial day, a time when they will be particularly valuable.

GYPSOPHILA ELEGANS.

Though Gypsophila elegans is well known as a useful annual for outdoor culture, only a comparatively small number of growers appreciate the value of this plant as a spring indoor crop. While it grows well in benches, the stems are stronger if it is grown in flats placed on shelves in a sunny house where a minimum of 50 degrees or thereabouts is maintained. Sow the seed in flats and later prick off into other flats. A useful size is 12x24, four inches deep. Place a light, rich soil in the flats. Each flat will accommodate sixty seedlings. Try a batch or two of this gypsophila. Several sowings are needed to maintain a succession. It wholesales well and is invaluable for the country grower who retails the bulk of his flowers.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

There was a meeting of the executive committee of the American Dahlia Society, at the Grand Hotel, New York, February 10, at which were present President Richard Vincent, Jr.; James Duthie, P. W. Popp, Geo. L. Stillman, I. S. Hendrickson, A. H. Langjahr and the secretary.

The affairs of the society were discussed at length and its work was found to be in progressive order. It was decided that the society's next bulletin be published about the first week in March and bimonthly thereafter.

Rules governing the society's trial gardens at Storrs, Conn., in connection with the Connecticut Agricultural College, were considered and adopted. A committee was appointed to prepare a memorial resolution on the death of J. H. Slocombe, New Haven, Conn., a prominent member.

Preparations for the holding of the annual exhibition were discussed and a committee appointed to make arrangements as to housing.

The committee adjourned to meet again in New York about the middle of March. John H. Pepper, Sec'y.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Prices of flowers took a tumble during the last week. The volume of blooms offered was decidedly larger than for a considerable period before and there was not the amount of funeral work that there had been for many weeks before. Carnations which had been selling at 8 and 10 cents wholesale dropped to 5 and 6 cents. Other flowers dropped in proportion. Sweet peas are beginning to come into the market in larger quantities and of good quality. Daffodils and jonquils which made their appearance a couple of weeks ago are more plentiful now and much more reasonable in price than they were. The task immediately before the retail florists is to win back the cut flower trade which has been driven away by the high prices which have prevailed thus far this winter. Many florists report that customers who regularly came in once or twice a week for cut flowers never come in now except for flowers for special occasions. Many of these customers did not buy large quantities of flowers, but because of their number and regularity the volume of stock taken was considerable. With more reasonable prices it is expected that they will soon return, although it is so late in the season that it is likely that some of them will not resume their steady patronage until next fall.

Various Notes.

F. A. Kuehn, 621 Central avenue, finds business good at present, considering conditions. A little later he will begin his spring decorations at the cemetery across the way from his store.

Charles Trauth, 475 Orange street, reports that, with the drop in the prices of flowers, he expects to be able to win back some of the cut flower trade driven away by high prices. January business, he says, was good. R. B. M.

Georgetown, Del.—C. S. Munson, who came here from Hamilton, N. Y., two years ago, is building a greenhouse.

Burlington, Ia.—Mrs. Elizabeth Bock has sold the range built by her husband, Joseph Bock, thirty years ago, to her son, Harry Bock. The greenhouses comprise 60,000 feet of glass, besides downtown salesrooms. Mr. Bock intends to enlarge the establishment.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

An increase in the variety of stock has had some effect on the carnation market, which may be said to be oversupplied; but expectations are that St. Valentine's day trade will do much towards stabilizing prices. Daffodils and jonquils are more plentiful, and, as is the rule at their appearance, the public attention is concentrated on spring flowers. Under this head, calendulas have a popular call and the demand for them is steady at good prices. This flower is claiming a distinct place in table decorations.

The supply of roses is equal to the demand, the leading varieties being Killarney, Russell, Ophelia and Hearst. All of these are of good quality. Sunburst and Ward still show weak necks and small flowers, the grades being from first to special. Few shorts are to be had.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club will meet February 11 to elect officers.

Local florists are signing a petition and protest against the plant quarantine, which will be duly mailed to the proper authority. The opinion is unanimous that such a quarantine cannot benefit either our country or Europe. Palms can be washed and inspected, azaleas sprayed or fumigated, and Easter lilies, as a florist said, cannot be expected to bring in diseases because most of the lilies are thrown out in a few weeks.

Charles Sandiford has the finest of daffodils and jonquils. His principal Easter stock will be hydrangeas and roses, which are now in excellent condition. Mr. Sandiford can always be depended on for producing something to open the eye of the observer. The St. Valentine's day special is in the form of specimen plants of blooming bleeding hearts.

Preparations are under way to have a growers' meet soon. The subject of debate will be the price of bedding stock. The opinion of the leaders is that, though good prices were realized last spring, better ones must be expected the coming season. F. P. A.

NEWPORT, R. I.

In the District court last week was heard the case brought by Henry J. Hass, who sought to recover $375 for damages to his horse, harness, wagon and contents, which included flowers and vegetables, when a piece of the city's fire apparatus collided with the Hass vehicle on Thames street, October 19, 1916. The court gave its decision in favor of the city.

Mr. Hass claimed that the accident was due to the negligence of the city, because of the slippery condition of the street, causing the fire apparatus to skid against his wagon.

Traction plows are already beginning spring work in the vicinity of Middletown.

At the annual meeting of the Rhode Island Nurserymen's Association last week, V. A. Vanicek was elected treasurer.

August Erickson died at his home on Webster avenue February 1, in his seventy-fourth year. He came to Newport thirty-five years ago and was employed for several years as a gardener on various estates. W. H. M.

OBITUARY

J. Frank Blakeborough.

Many friends in Clayton, N. J., and vicinity, mourn the passing of J. Frank Blakeborough, which occurred January 30, at the age of 57 years, at the Pennsylvania hospital, Philadelphia. Mr. Blakeborough had been connected with the trade for upwards of twenty-five years. His range at Clayton was kept in the pink of condition at all times and he was successful and a designer of exceptional taste.

Mr. Blakeborough had been honored by his fellow-townsmen by election to various public offices, including that of councilman, which he held for several years. He was a member of the M. E. church, in which also he had office. He was affiliated with Woodbury Lodge, No. 280, L. O. O. M., with the Tulpehocken Tribe No. 181, Imp. O. R. M., of Germantown, Pa., with the Clayton Lodge P. O. S. of A. and Clayton Grange, No. 79 B. of H. Members of the borough council were pallbearers at his funeral, at which the floral tokens were many. He is survived by his wife and daughter.

Edson Jefferson Foster.

Edson Jefferson Foster, who died January 29 at his home in Findlay, O., had been in business as a florist in that city for thirty-four years. Mr. Foster had been in declining health for several years, although his last illness was of short duration. He was a son of Jacob Foster and was born in 1854. He married twice, the first time Miss Anna Bond; the second, Miss Elizabeth Fisher, who survives him, with four sons and a daughter.

Marius Mutillod.

Marius Mutillod, head of the Secaucus Exotic Nursery, Secaucus, N. J., died February 10 at the age of 50 years. Mr. Mutillod was well and favorably known to the trade and was an important exhibitor at the New York flower shows. J. H. P.

Mrs. Mattie McFarland.

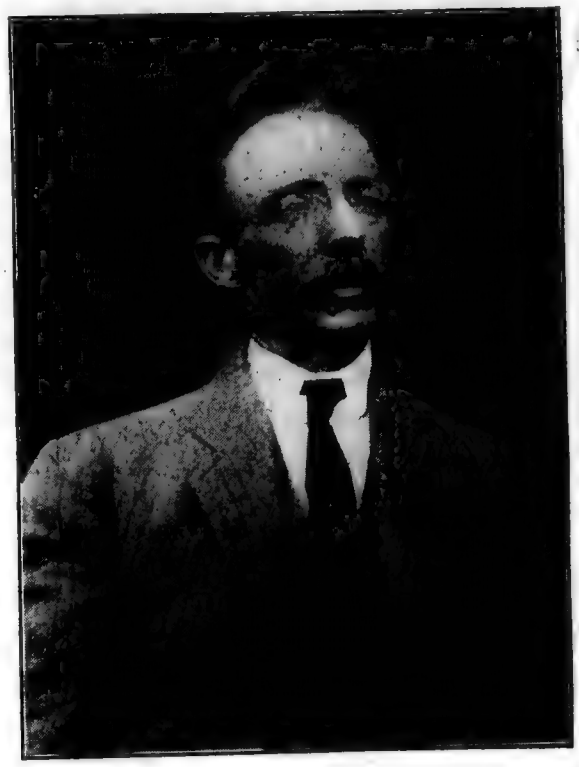
Mrs. Mattie McFarland, wife of William P. McFarland, of Akron, O., who died January 31, had a wide circle of friends through her activities in club work. She was a member of the L. O. T. M. No. 35, Women's Relief Corps, of the Protected Home Circle, the Bethany Shrine and the Elva Chapter of O. E. S. The latter organization conducted the funeral services, which were held at the late home of the decedent, February 2. Burial was in Glendale cemetery.

Ida Klopfer.

The many friends of G. Klopfer, formerly in the trade in Peoria, Ill., but now ranching at Node, Wyo., will learn with regret of the death of his only daughter, Ida, at the age of 19 years. Miss Klopfer was helping her father round up some stock when she was thrown from her favorite horse and sustained a fracture of the skull. The funeral took place at Node and beautiful floral offerings were in evidence, despite the fact that the nearest florists are at least 200 miles away, showing conclusively that flowers are just as necessary among the folks of the cattle lands as in the cities. School children, Red Cross workers and, in fact, the whole population for miles around attended the funeral services, conducted by Rev. Edward Grim, who came all the way from Elgin, Ia., for the purpose. Miss Klopfer was a teacher in the Node school; consequently the school car was used instead of a hearse to carry her remains from the ranch to their last resting place.

G. Klopfer is a brother of Henry Klopfer, head gardener to Mrs. P. A. Hearst, near Pleasanton, Cal.

John F. Follett.



John F. Follett, 77 years of age, of Diamond Hill road, Cumberland, R. I., died at his home February 3, after an illness of only a few days from bronchial pneumonia. He was born in Cumberland and had lived in that vicinity all his life. For more than thirty years he conducted a retail florists' business in Central Falls, having greenhouses on Summit street of that city. He was also employed for more than half a century in the machine shop of Fales & Jencks, from whom he received a pension for his long period of service.

Mr. Follett was a Past Master of Jenks Lodge and a member of the Royal Arch Chapter of Masons, of Pawtucket. He is survived by three sons, one daughter and a brother. W. H. M.

George Talbot.

Death has claimed another of the most popular men connected with the florists' business in Baltimore in the person of George Talbot. He was ill for a week after having contracted pneumonia, which proved fatal February 4.

He was born in England sixty-one years ago. After serving for a time on the private estate of Aston, near Manchester, he emigrated to this country in the early 80's and found employment in the conservatories at Patterson park. Afterwards he was transferred to Clifton park and the greater part of his life in Baltimore was spent in the parks. Ten years ago he started business on his own account at Darby and Greenspring avenue. Two years ago, one cold night, an accident happened to his boiler, resulting in the destruction of his entire range. He then took a position with the government at Camp Meade, where he was employed at the time of his death.

Mr. Talbot had been financial secretary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club for years, and this position brought him into contact with everyone connected with the trade in the city. His funeral was largely attended by the members of the trade and the floral offerings were many and handsome. Tate.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Poinsettias and cyclamens figured largely in the banner holiday trade of the Friedley Co., Cleveland, O. A batch of the latter coming into flower later are valuable for funeral work. Several garlands for caskets noted were made by S. Norris, who was with A. Graham & Son many years and has now joined the Friedley forces. Adam Graham II finds time amid the strenuosity of business life to acquire foreign languages. He now is studying Russian, on the theory that knowledge of the language makes for a better understanding of the people.

* * * *

J. H. Bockman, of the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, is of the opinion that the day for the package of Holland or Edam cheese to be found in the bulb case is past, our Dutch brethren now being fearful of tempting their temperate American customers.

* * * *

A. C. Kendel's new seed store is the admiration of the trade and a fine testimonial to the eighty years of its existence, from 1839 to 1919. W. H. Bailey, a prominent member of the Kendel staff, has been invalided for some time through a carbuncle on his neck, which at one time was the cause of much concern. At the same time his daughter, an only child, a lovely girl of 19 years, was stricken with influenza and passed away. The family has the sympathy of numerous friends in the trade. It is hoped Mr. Bailey will soon be able to return to his post again.

Guy French, of French & Salm, Union Grove, Wis., suggests the addition of two to the list of national flower days: June 30, to celebrate the victory over John Barleycorn, and November 11, Armistice day. He argues, with apparent good reason, that there must have been a universal desire for peace or two such important events in the world's history would never have happened.

Charles Schwake, of New York, says his firm is importing azaleas from Ghent this spring, and that the growers report considerable damage done to the greenhouses. Yet prospects look promising, if our authorities will help along the good work. W. M.

IT will take a good carnation to displace Mrs. C. W. Ward with those who have the knack of handling it.

IF Laddie proves to be a producer it will become possibly our most profitable and therefore popular carnation.

RETAILERS should be the last to wish to see wholesale prices fall, for low prices mean that department stores and curbstone sales will begin again.

WITH the smaller growers in the Mississippi and Missouri valleys there is a place for every cutting of Carnation Nebraska which can be rooted. It is easy to do and prolific.

IT seems that the rooting of carnation cuttings is not progressing in the accustomed fashion. There is likely to be a big shortage of field-grown plants, come August or September.

THIS is proving a great season for the growers in the middle west, most of whom have kept all, or nearly all, their glass in operation. Average prices compare even more favorably than top prices, because medium and lower grades have been in greatest request and there has been no waste.

FRANK X. STUPPY, of St. Joseph, Mo., is wintering among the millionaires at Palm Beach. A snapshot showing him ankle deep in the water, clothed in an abbreviated bathing suit and an expansive smile, seems to indicate that reports of sales from the greenhouses continue to afford satisfaction.

NOT so long ago Max Schling told the New York Florists' Club that he did not believe in newspaper advertising, pinning his faith on good stock and good service, but recently he said to the Philadelphia Florists' Club that he has spent as high as $42,000 for publicity in a single year, which just goes to show how a good man develops with the times.

WE can grow anything in America; the trouble is with our patience; we want to do too much too quickly.

IT is worth while remembering that the reasons for this season's short supply of stock are not likely ever to occur again.

THERE are plenty of places, even now, to get low or medium grade stock, cut flowers and plants, but the sources of supply of really first class material are limited.

THE calendula is one of the subjects which, for cut flower purposes, have increased in popularity. The calendula may almost be classed among the market staples now.

THE coffee trade has organized a committee to do for coffee just what the S. A. F. publicity committee is doing for flowers, only a million dollars has been subscribed for four years. The advertising will start in April.

THIS season has benefited the trade to a wonderful extent by enabling florists to catch up with their bills payable and today the trade as a body stands on a sounder footing than ever before. There are, of course, some incorrigibles, men who have no sense of financial responsibility, so that eternal vigilance still is the price of solvency.

NEBRASKA FLORISTS' SOCIETY.

The Nebraska State Florists' Society will hold its annual meeting, postponed on account of the "flu," February 25, at the Lincoln hotel, Lincoln, Neb.

The forenoon session will be devoted to the placing of cut flowers and plants, in conjunction with the Horticultural Society, at the rooms of the Commercial Club, the afternoon to the awarding of premiums and diplomas and the renewing of old acquaintance.

In the evening the annual banquet will be served and the program rendered at the Lincoln hotel.

Department of Registration.

The L. M. Smith Quality Flower Co., Laurel, Del., submits for registration the following new varieties:

Chrysanthemum January Gold—Golden yellow sport of the variety Mistletoe; a good, clear yellow, deeper in color than Major Bonnaffon; incurved full to the center; begins blooming December 20 and continues to March 1; of great substance, keeping in good condition for three to four weeks.

Chrysanthemum Dr. Hitch—Sport of the variety Mistletoe; color between white and lavender pink, shading to yellow in the center; blooms at the same time as January Gold and has the same good keeping qualities.

HELP! HELP!!

Each week in the office of The Review practically all the work of getting the paper out is done in three days, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday—Thursday, Friday and Saturday have been useful principally for getting ready for the next week's rush.

But we have got to change the system.

The work is so heavy at the first of the week that overtime has been necessary—about four days of working time has been put in during the first three days of the week. But overtime costs double wages—four days' time and five days' pay is about the way it has figured out. In other words, for each working week The Review has paid for two extra days to accommodate its late patrons.

At present high wages it is impossible to keep it up.

Advertisers will assist materially in keeping down the cost of printing if they send their instructions Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Practically every ad received Tuesday calls for the payment of overtime.

ANATOMY OF SUCCESS.

Get up on your toes.
Put the best foot forward.
Stiffen your backbone.
Throw back your shoulders.
Hold up your chin.
Keep a stiff upper lip.
Keep your eyes and ears open—
And your mouth shut.
Use your head,
Go ahead,
And get ahead.

The Market.

As this issue of The Review goes to press, the market is in a condition that is difficult for the retailers, owing to a shortage of some of the bulbous stock principally used for St. Valentine's day. Most of the wholesalers say they have all the orders they can handle for popular stock for St. Valentine's day. Their shipping business continues as heavy as ever, with retail business keeping pace.

The rose situation is unchanged, as short and medium length stock is extremely scarce. Long-stemmed stock, however, is more plentiful and there is enough to go around. Beauties in all lengths remain short of the demand. Rose prices continue stiff. Fortunately for the retailer, orchids are on the long side, with plenty of good stock to be had at a comparatively low price. A heavy supply of violets continues to arrive, the stock being of unusually good quality. There is more than enough to answer immediate needs and, with these two items plentiful and prices reasonable, the retailers should show a good margin of profit on corsage work.

The scarcity of valley continues. Sweet peas are plentiful and prices unchanged. There will be plenty of this stock for Valentine's day. The quality is good in long, medium and short stems. Carnations are abundant, with another drop in the price for the lower grades. Extra fancy stock moves rapidly and there is not enough of it to go around, but all other grades move slowly. Both calla and Easter lilies are short of the demand. Yellow narcissi are over for the season. Paper Whites continue abundant and tulips are increasing in supply, but there are not enough to take care of present orders. There is a shortage of Roman hyacinths. Jonquils, which are in special request, are hard to find. A good supply of freesia continues to arrive. Calendulas are popular and on the short side.

In green goods the situation has changed. Asparagus plumosus, owing to a frost in the south, is now on the short side. Adiantum is also short and there is barely enough Sprengeri to go around. Everything else, however, is plentiful.

Foley Coming Downtown.

Another sign of the impending return of the era of greenhouse expansion is the announcement that the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., with factory in the southwest manufacturing district, is about to open a downtown sales and administration office. Space has been leased on the eighth floor of the new State-Lake building, at the corner of State and Lake streets, at a term rental said to be $14,400. The building is nearly ready for occupancy and the Foley concern will be one of the first to open there.

George Reinberg Building and Moving.

Among the earliest building announcements is one which indicates George Reinberg's intention to remove from his present location and erect a new, large, modern range in the country. When Mr. Reinberg built on both sides of Balmoral avenue that thoroughfare ran through a prairie; now it is built up solidly with residences where there are no greenhouses and the greenhouses eventually must give way to the city dwellers. Mr. Reinberg some time ago took down one of the sections on the south end of his range and put up an apartment house. Now he is taking down another section, but he will build at once nine houses, each 27x300, on his farm in Niles township, some miles northwest of the city, but within easy motor run. He will use Leak-proof wooden gutters and the Ickes-Braun Mill Co. already has delivered the material at Mr. Reinberg's city place, where it is being painted. It will be one of the first building operations started this spring.

Various Notes.

It is town talk that deals have been closed affecting the ownership of two large growing and selling establishments, but it is stated at headquarters no papers have been signed and publication of what is on everybody's tongue, it is said, would be premature.

Among the growers who are figuring on additions to their space is the Weiss & Meyer Co., Maywood. Plans are being made for the early erection of another large house.

A famous advertiser is known for his slogan, "Keeping Everlastingly at it Brings Success." Keeping at it certainly has brought success to S. J. Pearce, even a greater success this season than last. Neither the cost of bulbs nor the difficulties of obtaining them stood in his way last autumn and now he is coming out even better than he hoped, for thus far he has had the market largely to himself on jonquils, tulips and Iris tingitana.

Paul Klingsporn piloted a party of Chicago Flower Growers' Association growers to Richmond, Ind., February 8, to visit the Hill establishment to see Rose Premier in bloom. In the party were Frank Schramm, D. J. Abrams, Rudolph Ellsworth and William Spandikow. All have bought the new rose. George Ball accompanied them.

A. Miller has returned from a ten days' trip which followed the Cleveland convention.

Charles L. Washburn will leave for Pasadena, Cal., February 15. Mr. Washburn will go to the coast direct instead of stopping in some southern states, as he had planned. Mrs. Washburn will go with him. His son, E. B. Washburn, will take care of the business during his father's absence.

Victor Bergman, of Friedman's, is confined to his home, under the care of his physician, with a severe attack of the grip. This leaves the Friedman establishment badly handicapped, as Thomas Fogarty still is ill and O. J. Friedman is in New York on a business trip. Mr. Bergman, however, is fortunate in having capable young lady assistants.

The Retail Florists' Association ran its first advertisement in the Tribune February 11 and backed it up with streamers for window and delivery car use and also window posters. Hardly a retailer or wholesaler was found without one of them in his window.

Schiller's have added two new trucks to their motor delivery fleet. The latest additions are a Vim and an Overland. It is hardly necessary to say that George Asmus has the national slogan "Say It with Flowers" on the new cars.

The Rosery, 6972 North Clark street, has outdone its previous attempts with its St. Valentine's window.

Glass, 16x20AA, still is quoted at $7.60 per box in small lots, but it is reported quotations in car lots have been made this week at $5.75. The factories are operating again.

Visitors.

J. A. Bissinger, of Lansing, Mich., who is an infrequent visitor to Chicago, was here last week. He has been doing a good business without interruption on account of the war and is looking forward to a big spring trade.

Charles Schwake, of New York city, called on the trade the early part of the week.

Sidney Beard, of Beard Bros., Detroit, was one of this week's visitors.

G. T. Lewis, New York city, of the basket concern which bears his name, called on the trade last week.

CROWN POINT, IND.

This is the season of the year when Prince, a collie which knows florists at sight, wags a welcome to many visitors at the establishment of Alois Frey. There always is something interesting under the Frey glass, but it is for freesias that the establishment is most widely known. This is where the Rainbow freesia originated. As the name signifies, there are many bright colors and visitors agree that annual progress has been made; the freesias are better each year. Mr. Frey says it is because of continued selection and the development of a stock of larger bulbs. In the beginning the Rainbow freesias consisted of mixed seedlings, but sufficient time has elapsed so that considerable stocks of distinct varieties have been worked up and the varieties named. Of Viola, lavender, there is more than a bench, representing thousands of flowering bulbs. Of General Pershing, pink and white, there also is a large stock. Yellow Prince is another that is grown in quantity. There are dozens of other varieties that have been selected and of which stocks are being worked up. As compared with last year the growth is stronger, the stems longer, the flowers larger, the colors brighter. The thing which is perplexing Mr. Frey and Mrs. Frey, whose assistance has been an important factor, is what to do with such an enormous quantity of bulbs within the limits of their space.

The carnations at Crown Point are no less admirable than the freesias. The big Lord & Burnham house planted to Mrs. C. W. Ward is a sight. This variety seems particularly to like the conditions here.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A general decline in prices set in last week and flowers are cheaper now than for a long time. The absence of severe weather and a continuation of clear skies has greatly favored an increased supply. On the other hand, the demand is not particularly robust and a further decline is not unlikely. Roses are arriving more freely and prices on short-stemmed stock have dropped as low as $4. Special favorites, like Ophelia, Russell, Sunburst and Hadley, still command good prices. The supply of Beauties is not large, but is equal to the demand. Carnations are much more plentiful and values have shown a sharp decline. Fancy flowers sell now as low as $4 and good grades at $3. Sweet peas arriving are of excellent quality and make from 75 cents to $3 per hundred. Violets are far fewer than in former years at this season. The near approach of St. Valentine's day is helping to clean them up.

In the way of bulbous flowers a few tulips are seen, but there is a largely increased supply of daffodils. Of freesias and Paper Whites there is an ample supply. The same is true of callas and liliums. Pink snapdragons continue to sell well, also pansies. Calendulas are now of fine quality. Cattleyas are in good supply. Valley remains scarce. A few nice gardenias are seen.

At Framingham.

At S. J. Goddard's, Carnation Laddie looks splendid. The demand for rooted cuttings of this variety is heavy and many plants are cut down to produce the supply needed. Rosalia looks well and Mr. Goddard has a bench of Nancy, selected so that it gives few, if any, single flowers. Matchless is the leading white, but one or two seedlings promise to beat that popular sort. Doris carries a heavy crop, with no split flowers. Many of Dorner's seedlings are on trial here and some fine things are included. Benora remains the leading variegated. Yellow Prince looks well, but will not be grown another season. Fine batches of snapdragon, good Russell and Ophelia roses, sweet peas, cyclamens, show pelargoniums, polyanthus, callas and other plants were noted, a great proportion of these being for the retail trade.

At William R. Nicholson's, Carnation Belle Washburn shows up remarkably well, having strong stems and large flowers. Matchless, in one house planted from flats, looks grand, vastly superior to stock in another house lifted from the field. Albert Roper proves disappointing as a winter bloomer. Too many flowers come off color. It is a grand warm weather variety, however. White Benora was in heavy crop and will bear watching. Pink Delight is the standard light pink grown. A truly wonderful sight here are the rows of Godfrey callas in 8-inch pots around the sides of the carnation houses. They are smothered with spikes. Other interesting crops noted were wallflowers, forget-me-nots, Gladiolus primulinus hybrids, sweet peas and great numbers of Gypsophila elegans in flats, which is a great specialty here.

Various Notes.

Schedules are out for the exhibition of plants and flowers to be given by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club in Horticultural hall February 18. Some fifteen classes are allotted to carnations, while all seasonable pot plants and other cut flowers have classes. In addition to cash prizes, medals and certificates of merit will be awarded. Everything points to an excellent show, which the public will have an opportunity to visit free of charge.

Arthur E. Horton, a prominent local engineer, delivered a splendid practical lecture on drainage at Horticultural hall February 8. He held the close attention of his hearers for nearly two hours and answered many questions. There will be a record attendance at the closing lecture of the season February 15, when Dr. B. T. Galloway, chief adviser to the Federal Horticultural Board, will lecture. Both the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston have asked their members to attend this meeting and Dr. Galloway is sure of a welcome.

Seed stores report business as active, due to the exceptionally mild winter we are experiencing. All have had great difficulties in getting their catalogues out, due to labor shortages, but have at last succeeded.

Carnations remain steady at $2 per dozen, with not nearly enough to go around. Sweet peas are selling at from $3 to $5 per hundred, double violets at $5 per hundred. The first jonquils appeared last week and sold readily for $2 per dozen, Paper Whites at $2 per dozen and orchids from $1.50 to $2 each. A good many carnations are being shipped in, but no orders are filled in full. All the florists are compelled to resort to wax and prepared flowers. Cyclamens are plentiful and sell well, both as a pot plant and for made-up baskets for funerals. During the last fortnight the weather has been like spring and everyone has been making garden, but a decided change is taking place. It is cold, with two inches of snow and more coming.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

More flowers; less business; lower prices. That is the record of the week ending Saturday, February 8, in the cut flower market. It was difficult for the wholesalers, because of the irregular demand and consequent accumulation of some varieties of stock. The middle of the week was the worst. Toward the close of the week there was more activity at lower prices.

There was not much change in roses, barring weakness here and there in the shorts. Carnations fell away, as did daffodils, Paper Whites and freesias. Sweet peas fell off, though list prices are the same, because it took such extra fine peas to bring the top price.

Orchids held firm, but the crop is going off. Easter lilies and callas receded. Valley went up again on the strength of improved quality. Lilac fell away, as well as violets.

The change to winter weather is likely to interfere with the demand even more than with the supply. Pussy willows are plentiful. Myosotis is in. Indications point to a brisk demand for St. Valentine's day.

The California Seed Growers.

This week has been one of activity in seed circles. Representatives of the large California seed growers have been in the east making contracts for next season's crop of flower and vegetable seeds. Mrs. Johansen, of the Johansen Seed Co., of El Monte, has been here. John Bodger, of the John Bodger & Sons Co., of Los Angeles, was another visitor. L. B. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., of Gilroy, has been in the city.

Visitors tell us that seed growing in California has increased rapidly since the war upset the peaceful industries of Europe. Some idea of its extent may be gathered from the fact that one of these California firms alone has 1,500 acres devoted to growing plants to produce flower seeds.

The increase in production has been further stimulated by the so-called box trade, to which some seed houses cater. That is the offering of boxes of flower and vegetable seeds in all manner of stores during the spring months.

"Don't Charge So Much."

In the Philadelphia column of another trade paper there appeared recently an article that may be summarized by the above headline. In this article it is stated that in former seasons carnations were purchased by the retail dealer at $4 per hundred and sold at $1 per dozen, while now they are bought at $8 per hundred and sold at from $2.50 to $3 per dozen. It is stated also that on this basis $1,500 worth of stock, purchased, say, in one month, would in former years have realized $3,000, or $1,500 gross profit, while the same amount of stock would cost $3,000 now and on the percentage of former years would be sold now for $6,000, or $3,000 gross profit, which the writer of the said article thinks ought to be enough for anybody, without increasing the percentage of profit, as he claims is being done now.

We protest that this statement of our contemporary is inaccurate and misleading.

In the first place, the retail price of flowers is a matter between the various retailers and their customers and does not concern the florists generally, as do the wholesale prices. It is assumed that each retailer will be fair to his customers and to himself. But, admitting for the sake of argument that this is a matter of general interest, the figures are misleading. It has been practically impossible for eastern retailers to get the same amount of stock this winter that they got last winter, even at double the prices. The stock was not to be had. A few florists may have been able to obtain the stock they went after, but the great majority of them did not do so. They tried to get it, but could not. But suppose that they had bought stock for $3,000 and sold it for $6,000, as the paragrapher pictures them doing, there is still another important point to be considered. The expenses to be charged against this income are far and away greater than anything ever experienced in former years. Salaries and all kinds of supplies cost decidedly more. That is why the retailers must increase their percentages over costs in fixing prices. They cannot get enough flowers to sell to make a living profit at the old percentages.

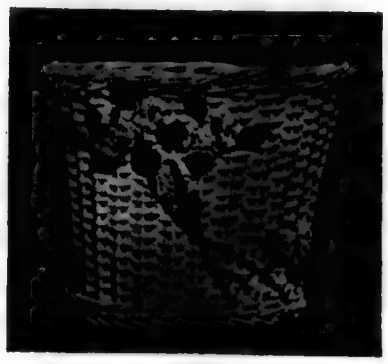
It really seems a strange time to bring this matter up, now, when the market is bare of stock, the barest, in fact, that it has been for years. It seems strange, indeed, that it should be brought up at all. These are matters that adjust themselves. If a particular florist charges too much, people will go elsewhere for their flowers. If all the florists charge too much, the people will stop buying. Flowers are not like bread or clothes. People do not have to have them. They simply want flowers, if they can be had within certain limits of price. After the government has put so many greenhouses out of commission, everybody cannot have flowers within certain limits, at least not for a time.

The Meeting at the Adelphi.

There can be no question that the Florists' Club is now filling a place in our business life such as its founder intended that it should do. Nineteen-nineteen marks a new epoch in this club's history. A new career of usefulness has been begun that promises great things for the future.



But it is five minutes of eight. Let us join the group of men and women who are entering the elevator in the lobby of the Adelphi. There is a dispute between the elevator girl and a passenger as to whether the roof garden is or is not on the fourteenth floor. Anyway, it is on the top floor and here we are. The rooms are large and well lighted. The long array of chairs facing the speakers' platform already are nearly filled. In front Mr. Thilow is getting the ladies desirable seats, stopping long enough to point out to a friend the choice exhibits that are staged at the right of the platform. A funny member is asking some of his neighbors how it is that they have to be taught their business.

President Harvey has called the meeting to order. Secretary Kift is reading the minutes of the January meeting. The routine is over. The speaker of the evening is introduced.

Max Schling is a man in the prime of life, full of energy and enthusiasm for his work and sincere. Mr. Schling opens with a tribute of appreciation for his audience that wins its instant confidence. He disclaims artistic ability and, with the modest aim of merely offering suggestions that might prove of interest, proceeds with a demonstration.

Just at this point, as though to prove that he was not above being taught, John P. Habermehl, head of the largest decorating firm in the city, which op-

Mr. Schling's demonstration of making up covered arrangement and combinations, with prices given. It was extremely interesting. He gave an impromptu talk, also, on what may be termed the elements of business success, closing with a description of his advertising experiences and methods and a reference to the great value of the F. T. D. as a means of educating the ninety-nine out of every hundred who are not yet flower buyers.

Mr. Schling generously presented the flowers he had used in his demonstration to the ladies who were present. The attendance was over 200, one-fifth being of the fair sex.

Various Notes.

The February meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will be in Griffith hall, 1420 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, at 3:30 p. m., February 18. J. Otto Thilow will deliver an illustrated lecture on "The Life and Vegetation of the Hawaiian Islands." Good prizes are offered for plants of cyclamen, primula and cineraria and for cut flowers of roses, carnations and snapdragons.

The Market.

A marked increase in the supply of bulbous flowers, principally of narcissi, has had considerable effect on the values of other flowers. Carnations, particularly, have felt the pressure and have been forced down to prices which today might be considered normal, 4 cents to 6 cents, the higher figure being obtainable only for flowers of special quality. There is no snap to the buying and the general demand may be said to be unimproved. Were it not for a heavy demand for flowers for funeral work, the market would be in a listless condition, for little in the way of decorations is called for at social functions; even the Charity ball, held last week, did not serve to stimulate the demand in the case of retailers who usually profit from such affairs. Lincoln's birthday and St. Valentine's day this week may create a livelier tone to the market, but no shortage in the supply of flowers is looked for.

Roses continue in short supply, particularly in the lower grades, but the large offerings of other flowers make the shortage tolerable; consequently prices have fallen off a point or two on roses as well as on carnations.

Carnations are now plentiful, and their quality, in general, is good. The cropping varieties appear to have recovered from the Christmas cut and, as several of the larger growers took a chance on the ending of the war and the lifting of the fuel restrictions, there is no likelihood of a dearth of pinks from now on.

Some fine freesia is coming in and sells well. Roman hyacinths, chiefly white, are a prominent item among arrivals, some consignments being conspicuous for unusually long-stemmed flowers. White lilac, too, is in evidence; so, with Paper Whites, lilies and other flowers, there is plenty of white material available.

Orchids are abundant and at times move slowly. Cattleyas are expected to be plentiful for St. Valentine's day, balancing, perhaps, a particularly short supply of good lily of the valley.

Arrivals of Easter lilies are light, but sufficient for the call for them. Sweet peas are abundant and prices have toppled to a nearly normal point, $1.50 to $3 per hundred, with a few of special quality bringing $4.

Calendulas, snapdragon, iris, pansies, bouvardia, daisies and mignonette are in fair supply and move well.

Various Notes.

Charles Thorley, the Fifth avenue florist, is a candidate for membership on the New York State Boxing Commission, if the Gibbs bill is passed by the legislature. His chance to receive the appointment is believed to be more than good. Mr. Thorley is well posted as to the science of the sport and has many influential friends behind him in his candidacy. He is well known to Governor Smith.

Mrs. Mary Belle Davis Henderson, widow of Alfred Henderson, for many years connected with the firm of Peter Henderson & Co., died February 8 in her apartments in the Hotel Marie Antoinette of pneumonia. She is survived by a son, Peter, and three daughters. The funeral was held February 11 from the Central Presbyterian church, Madison avenue and Fifty-seventh street.

Park Commissioner Berolzheimer has been elevated to the post of city chamberlain and Francis Dawson Gallatin, a gentleman well known for his public service and for his intelligence, has been appointed to the vacant office. Mr. Gallatin's appointment is generally approved, as it is believed that he will do his utmost to preserve and improve the beauty of the park areas coming under his control.

Herman Branch, florist at 18 East One Hundred and Sixth street, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities scheduled at $4,813 and assets nil.

Secretary Young and Frank R. Pierson were in Washington February 6, on the occasion of the presentation of the brief protesting against the embargo on plant importations.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Throughout the week the wholesale market has cleaned up daily. Stock has shortened up now, although funeral work constitutes the bulk of the demand. The cut of carnations has dropped off considerably. Roses are arriving more freely. The demand is for short-stemmed stock for the most part. There is no oversupply of the long-stemmed grades, among which are excellent Ophelia, Hadley, Columbia and Russell. Sweet peas are in good demand and the supply is limited. Narcissi have been clearing well. Jonquils are in limited supply and sell readily. A small quantity of snapdragon is seen occasionally and it

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Wholesale market conditions for the last week remain much the same as reported in the previous issue of The Review. Wholesalers report an excellent demand throughout the week for all seasonable stock, and expect a big rush for this week, especially for St. Valentine's day.

Violets will, of course, be the special feature of the week and there is a promise of a large supply. Roses are not in oversupply and Russells, Ophelias and Columbias clean up daily and at good prices. Carnations are still short of demand, as all of our local growers are off crop at the same time, and these sell clean at $8 per hundred for choice.

Sweet peas are expected to be in big demand this week and share honors with violets, which are abundant, coming in daily.

Valley, Paper Whites, jonquils, Easter lilies, callas and a few tulips are arriving and help swell the market. Everything in greens is in demand, with asparagus and fancy ferns scarce. All other greens are plentiful.

Celebrate Victory.

The florists of St. Louis and vicinity celebrated victory with a banquet at the Planters' hotel February 5. The affair was attended by nearly 200 florists, among them many ladies. The big ballroom was decorated with plants, thanks to the city park department, and the tables were decorated with carnations and sweet peas. An excellent menu was served. President August H. Hummert, of the Florists' Club, opened the program with an address of welcome. "In Honor of Our Boys" and "The Star Spangled Banner" were sung and between courses Arthur Beyer's jazz band played.

After coffee, President Hummert selected J. J. Beneke as toastmaster for the evening. Mr. Beneke responded with a few remarks and called on President J. F. Ammann, of the S. A. F., as the first speaker. He spoke on S. A. F. matters as only "Fred" Ammann can and described the great sessions held by the S. A. F. board of directors, from which he had just returned. Mr. Ammann expects the greatest convention the society ever held at Detroit next August.

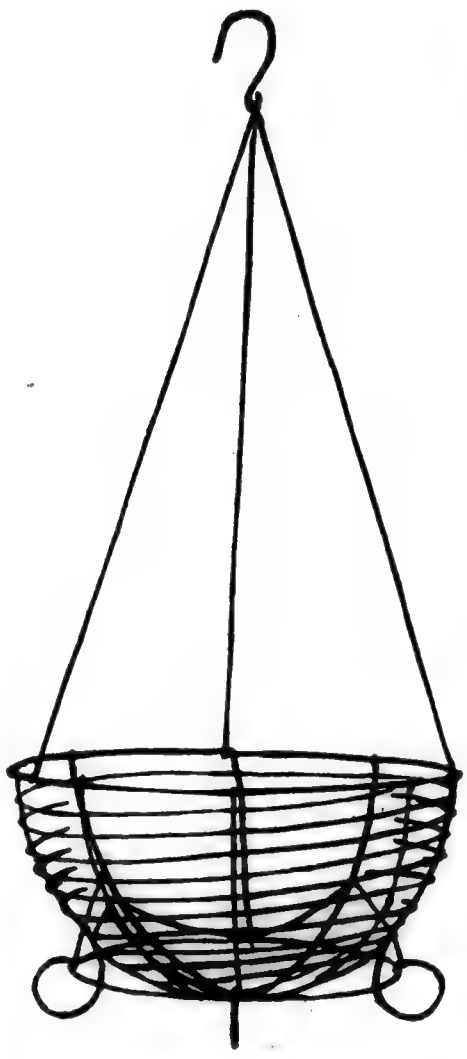
W. E. Bilheimer, the next speaker, spoke on "Get Together," and was followed by J. A. Hubbard, who was called upon for a talk on the value of advertising. He gave some splendid advice on this subject.

Jules Bourdet, chairman of the local publicity committee, talked on publicity and explained what was accomplished by his committee the last year. He asked coöperation for this year.



Last, but not least, the toastmaster called upon Prof. R. H. Emberson, of Columbia, Mo., whose remarks were highly entertaining.

Dancing followed in the ballroom.

Much credit is due the committee in charge for the success of the affair, considered one of the most successful ever arranged by local florists.

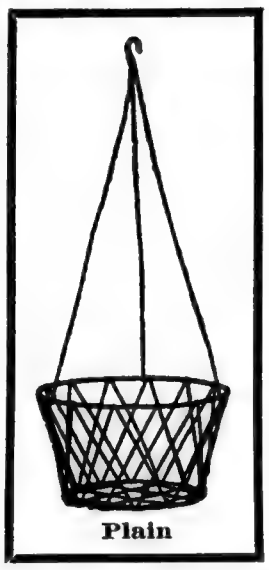
Various Notes.

The publicity committee of the St. Louis Florists' Club held a meeting February 4 at headquarters and approved an appropriation of several hundred dollars for local newspaper advertising for St. Valentine's day. There was a full attendance.

There seems to be some prospect for a fall flower show. The committee considering the matter is as yet undecided and it will be taken up at the meeting of the local club this week.

Mrs. George Madsen, of the Alton Floral Co., Alton, Ill., is at Camp Grant visiting her son, Leo Willes, who is at the base hospital there. Mr. Willes was severely wounded in France.

George H. Pring, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, will lecture before the St. Louis Natural History Association February 20, on "Insect Pollination in Flowers."



Mrs. W. C. Smith is at the Deaconess Hospital suffering from a severe illness. Late reports are to the effect that she is improving.

The monthly conference of the officers of the Florists' Club was held at the home of Frank A. Windler, secretary, February 7. Arrangements were made for an interesting program for this week's club meeting.

The Lady Florists' Club held a meeting February 4 at the Y. W. C. A. Miss B. Meinhardt presided over the meeting and considerable business was transacted.

H. C. Heileman, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, and Julius Dilloff, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, called on the trade last week with splendid success.

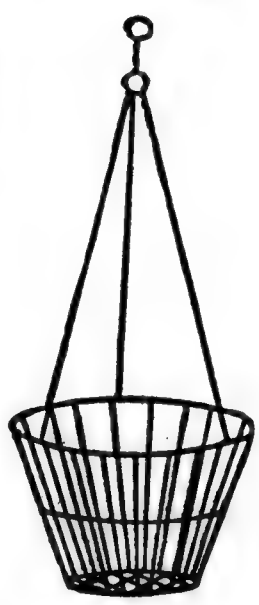
The florists here, especially on the west side and downtown, are making special window displays for St. Valentine's day. Judging by advance orders, they look for the best St. Valentine's day business in years.

There are many meetings of trade organizations this week, among them the Retail Florists' Association, February 10; the County Growers, February 12; the St. Louis Association of Gardeners, February 12, and the St. Louis Florists' Club, February 13. J. J. B.



ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Business throughout this locality continues quiet. The mainstay now is funeral work, but occasionally there are small orders for social affairs. The springlike weather continues. There has been no snow for nearly a month, but, with cold nights, there is little chance for the frost to get out of the ground. So far this month there has been more sun recorded than for several years past and in many cases new grass is seen on the lawns and crocuses are in bloom.

The market seems to be running unevenly so far as the supply of carnations is concerned. Some days there are scarcely any to be found, while at other times there are quantities, of good quality and lower in price. Red varieties are plentiful, but the demand for them is not large. The supply of spring flowers is adequate to the present demand and consists of jonquils, Paper White narcissi, Roman hyacinths, freesia and tulips. These sell in preference to other flowers, as they are more reasonable in price. The market is well supplied with pussy willows, for which the demand is fair. It is gratifying to see a larger supply of sweet peas reaching the market. They are of different grades and sell well for all purposes at good figures. Good stock is seen in many shades and is useful for basket arrangements. The demand for callas holds up well, but the supply of Easter lilies is not large. The bright weather is bringing larger shipments of roses into the market, but the prices continue above normal. Excellent stock is seen in White Killarney, Shawyer, September Morn, Prima Donna, Sunburst, the Wards, Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty. The supply of American Beauties is not large. Valley is seen, but not in quantity. Pink snapdragon is in short supply. There are a few calendulas in the market and they sell well, as do small supplies of cut lilac. Marguerites sell nicely. Mignonette is not plentiful. Cypripediums and cattleyas are in good supply, but the demand is light. The stores are well stocked daily with a good assortment of potted plants, consisting of hyacinths, daffodils, cinerarias, wallflowers, cyclamens, primulas, tulips and Primula malacoides, all of which sell readily.

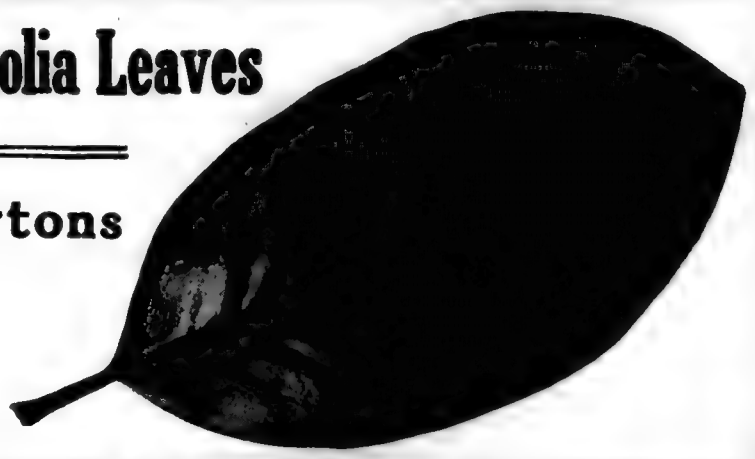
The Market.

The sun has been shining brightly the greater part of the time during the last week and the days have been unusually springlike. Due to this fine weather and to the lengthening days, the cut flower supply has increased. Although roses are still reported as scarce, other flowers are blooming more freely. The market is abundantly supplied with narcissi and carnations. A number of freesias and sweet peas are to be seen in the florists' windows and a few Roman hyacinths are making their appearance. Tulips are coming in, but they have short stems. Violets are in better supply. On account of the fact that cut flowers are plentiful, prices have been modified.



Some members of the trade report potted plants in demand, but the assortment is small and the few available are hard to get. Funeral trade has dropped off considerably. Although a number of orders are still being booked, the rush of the last few months, when more calls were received for floral designs than could be handled with ease, is over.

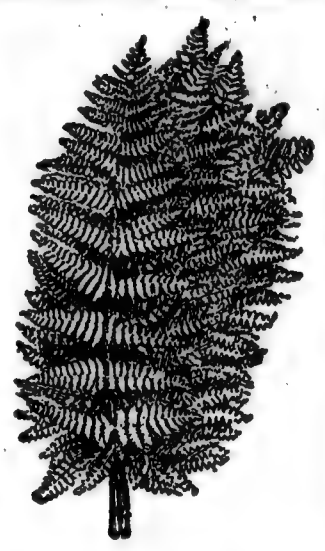
Counter trade is not so brisk as it has been, due probably to the fact that a number of men have been discharged by the factories and there is now no overtime, for the hours are shorter than formerly. However, there is more demand for flowers for social occasions than there was last year. Social amusements which were impossible last year on account of the fuel and food restrictions are now being resumed.



Members of the local trade are making preparations for St. Valentine's day, as they believe the demand for flowers will surpass that of last year. Novel features consist of colonial bouquets, boxes and baskets of artistic plant combinations, etc.

Various Notes.

A member of the local trade recently received a letter from Edward Ferkins, formerly foreman for James E. Beach. He has been in Y. M. C. A. work overseas and is now located in London in a base warehouse for the American Y. M. C. A., where many tons of supplies are received and reshipped each day. He says that although he has little leisure, he enjoys looking around at the London flower shops when he has the opportunity. He says in part: "The flower shops here are attractive and make fine displays. Prices are high and business is good. I saw magnificent poinsettias at the Christmas season. Begonia Cincinnati, cyclamens and ericas were exceptionally fine. There are now chrysanthemums, Roman hyacinths, Paper

Whites, lily of the valley and Golden Spur to be seen in quantities. Carnations and roses are not much in evidence at present and few orchids and gardenias are shown.''

Robert Hawkins is featuring colonial bouquets and other novelties for St. Valentine's day. He intends to devote his entire window to displaying these novelties. W. J. Kenney, who has been connected with Thomas Galvin, of New York and Boston, for the last fifteen years, is now employed by Mr. Hawkins.

James Horan & Son designed several immense pieces recently for the Stoddard funeral. Some nice freesias are coming on at the greenhouses of this concern. Roses are scarce.

John Reck & Son are anticipating a good St. Valentine's day trade. Business is brisk with this concern. Their windows are attractively decorated this week with a pleasing variety of cut flowers.

The Park Flower Shop reports that counter trade is picking up. Daffodils and hyacinths in pots are being displayed by this concern.

James E. Beach says general business is brisk. He has started to take chrysanthemum cuttings for the coming year.

George Pflomm is having some artistic combinations of plants, ferns, etc., made up in boxes and baskets for the St. Valentine's day trade. Mr. Pflomm reports that he is receiving some splendid carnations. There is a big demand for flowering plants at this establishment and it is difficult to get enough to supply the demand. I. L. B.

Two members only were absent, for reasons meeting the approval of the assembly. A full report of the proceedings must necessarily be deferred until receipt of the transcript of the notes of the official stenographer, but the following may be advanced:

The minutes of the conferences of the chairmen of the two committees, the president of the society and the secretary, held in Buffalo last June and in Cleveland last October, were submitted and approved. Secretary Young presented a financial report covering in detail the work of the promotion bureau and the status of the publicity fund, from its inception to the close of last year, which received the careful consideration of the committees and, on motion of Chairman Asmus, of the publicity finance committee, was referred to the society's executive board, with the request that that body appoint a committee to audit it.

Major P. F. O'Keefe, of the P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, Boston, submitted a report of the work accomplished through advertising placed for the months of January and February of this year, covering thirty-three magazines, with a total circulation of approximately 21,000,000. The report was wholly satisfactory to the committees. Major O'Keefe had prepared and submitted a complete plan of campaign for 1919, with sketches and other material, which was warmly commended by the meeting and adopted. The committees also entered into a contract with the O'Keefe Advertising Agency to take charge of the advertising during the 1919 campaign.

Upon the recommendation of the publicity committee, concurred in by the publicity finance committee, the O'Keefe Advertising Agency was authorized to proceed with the spring advertising, according to the following schedule, at a cost, approximately, of $20,000, which is contribution to the publicity fund, with his best wishes. As Chairman Henry Penn, to whom Mr. Pochelon remitted the check, said, "this shows the interest of our English brethren, of which our home folks should 'sit up and take notice.' If florists in England send money towards a campaign for publicity for flowers in this country, what should we expect from our own?"

It should wake up some of the boys on this side of the ocean who have not yet seen fit to contribute towards this most beneficial work, carried on for everyone engaged in the growing or distribution of the products of our industry."

Mr. Nonsubscriber, the campaign for 1919 is well planned and is under way. Are you going to support it, as, surely, your conscience dictates that you should? If you are in doubt on any point, will you not communicate with this office and have that doubt removed?

thusiasm of the members of the publicity and finance committees in discussing the 1919 campaign, after the showing of many sketches and details, as well as texts, for the spring campaign advertisements in the several magazines, with "Say It with Flowers" as the theme, you would have appreciated the work of both the committees. If you could have observed them at the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, you would have seen them busily quizzing and questioning Major P. F. earnestly and patiently for four and a half solid hours, arranging the details of our publicity campaign for next spring. Your committees have outlined a fine campaign, you may be assured. In order to bring out the desired results, we have determined upon a campaign to raise $100,000 for 1919, so as to give the florists of the country the prestige to which our industry justly is entitled.

Most of the members were so enthused at the prospect that they immediately doubled their subscriptions for the coming year, which speaks well for the last year's effort. Now that our fund is to be $100,000 for the entire craft, and your committee feels doubly confident of your willingness to help materially in this good work which is for the benefit of all, may we not expect you to send in your share toward this campaign, as a token of your appreciation of the campaign's work in your behalf? As was well said by President J. F. Ammann, of the S. A. F., "you are not giving; you are merely investing," in what is bound to be one of the greatest stimulants to enable the florists to reach the standard at which we are aiming.

Send in your subscription now to Secretary John Young—now, while this matter is fresh in your memory. "He who gives quickly gives twice, because his gift serves to stimulate his neighbor." Go to it, boys! Our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," benefits all, the purchasing public as well as the trade.

National Publicity Committee.

at the range of David J. Scott is a house of Sweet Pea Rose Queen, accepted as the peer of anything seen for miles around. The prices the flowers are bringing are highly satisfactory. Great care is taken in selecting seed stock, as it is realized that this is essential. It is understood also that if a true strain is required, much bloom must be sacrificed. A good figure must be put upon the seed, therefore, especially when the flowers are in such demand as at present.

A select type of calendula is grown here, but, as this variety is such a shy seeder, the best means of propagation is from cuttings. Snapdragon Enchantress is well named, both as to quality of bloom and length of flowering period. The only desideratum is a darker shade of pink. Fewer bulbs are being grown, but these are of good quality, particularly Golden Spur, the most profitable narcissus.

The superb mignonette seen here finds ready sale, but it does not pay to grow it for seed. The best carnations here are Enchantress Supreme, Matchless and Mrs. C. W. Ward.

William Ehmann finds Rosalia a profitable carnation to grow. A good stunt is the planting of lettuce between rows of sweet peas. A fine bed of callas brings top figures.

Leroy Adams reports a big change from last year, when his range was frozen up. The stock he saved proved hardy and the result is seen in the plants now flourishing. Carnations Enchantress Supreme, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Philadelphia, Mrs. Akehurst and White Wonder are in fine shape, likewise the sweet peas. W. M.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

CABBAGE seems to be one of the few items that are short this season.

So far this season there is nothing to indicate that the seed trade did not touch high tide in 1917.

THERE is a notable increase in the orders for flower seeds, compared to the last two seasons.

THE seed trade seems to be returning to a peace basis more rapidly than most American industries.

IT seems that Mrs. Van Astorbilt will not plant potatoes in her front yard this season, nor tomatoes in her window-boxes.

IT is not easy to make farmers see that contracts for 1919 acreage for seed crops should be at lower prices than in 1918. Isn't $2.26 guaranteed for wheat?

FREIGHTS on the Pacific have declined fifty per cent or more, $32 to $37 per ton from Japan. It will affect the price of a few hardy lilies that are coming over.

A MODERATE amount of unemployment will stimulate the demand for seeds for home planting; last season there was too much work and too much pay for a certain class of citizens to take any interest in gardening.

VISITED New York: Everett R. Peacock, Chicago; John Bodger, Los Angeles, Cal.; Mrs. Johansen, of the Johansen Seed Co., El Monte, Cal.; L. B. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., of Gilroy, Cal.

IN Canada it is said to be a question if the farmers who were urged to produce beans and peas will sow any acreage again with these seeds unless a market be found now for the surplus of the 1918 crops, which one grocery trade authority estimates as 500,000 bushels above domestic requirements.

IN the Santa Cruz district of California it is thought the continued cold weather indicates that the 1919 yield of freesia bulbs will be only from sixty per cent to seventy-five per cent of the 1918 yield per acre, while the acreage in that district is said to be only sixty per cent of the 1918 acreage, which, however, was the largest on record.

IMPORTERS of lily bulbs will note that the Federal Horticultural Board has announced the first modification of Quarantine No. 37, affecting these shipments. The original order permitted the bulbs to come in only without soil, an impracticable provision, because the bulbs would lose most of their value. The modification permits them to come in packed in sterilized soil.

SUIT OVER LATE DELIVERY.

Several months ago B. J. Schmierer, who since has changed his name to Sherman, proprietor of the North Shore Floral Co., Chicago, employed Herbert Bebb, attorney, 1303 Title and Trust building, to resist a claim of Jacobus M. Vedhuyzen Van Zanten, his principal defense being that delivery had not been made at the agreed time. Mr. Schmierer had offered $150, but the seller would not consider settlement and brought suit for the full amount, $230. Attorney Bebb filed a jury demand in the Municipal court at Chicago, with the result that the matter was delayed long enough for both parties to cool off, and February 10 an agreed judgment for $165 was entered without trial.

OLD EMPLOYEE HONORED.

William E. Bougy, assistant treasurer of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., was the guest of honor at a dinner given at the Union League, that city, February 6, by David Burpee, president, and W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., of the company. The affair was in appreciation of Mr. Bougy's thirty-five years' service with the concern.

The assistant treasurer began with the Burpee concern as an office boy. So small was the business when he started to work for the company that no books were kept. Mr. Bougy opened the first set of books and has had charge of the accounting department ever since.

It was brought out at the dinner that the warm weather has had an effect upon the buyers, causing them to order considerably more numerously than usual for this time of the year. The Burpee company has received four times the normal number of orders to February 6.

ANOTHER IMPLIED WARRANTY.

Disclaimer Not Employed.

A sale of seed by description as to variety carries an implied warranty by the seller that the seed will prove to be true to name, where the buyer has no opportunity for inspecting before buying or where the identity of the seed cannot be determined by an ordinary examination. And where seed was sold as being of a specified variety, but failed to prove so, the buyers were entitled to recover damages measured by the excess of the value of the crop which would have been grown from the seed bargained for above the value of the crop actually grown.

These points were decided by the Arkansas Supreme court the other day in the case of Price & Neil vs. Kefauver, 206 Southwestern Reporter, 664. There

Stamford Beauty Tomato Was Tried and Found True

The finest outdoor Tomato the world has ever seen. Awarded highest honors wherever exhibited. Winners of five Certificates of Merit from Horticultural and Agricultural Societies.

Stamford Beauty Tomato has been exhibited and judged by the most expert gardeners in America and has received most flattering honors, probably more than any other Tomato on the market today.

Stamford Beauty resembles the old favorite Stone Tomato, but is earlier, sweeter and has a handsome color finish of deep scarlet. Stamford Beauty is a strong, healthy grower and a most wonderful cropper, producing a wealth of large, beautiful smooth Tomatoes from early Summer until late Fall. Stamford Beauty will give you full reward for your money and labor. Plant some this year,

Pkt. 25c., 5 pkts., $1.00

What others say:

ALFRED OLSEN, truck farmer, Springdale, Conn., grew about two hundred plants last summer. He says: "Your Stamford Beauty Tomato has them all beaten a mile. It is a real bread and butter Tomato for the truck farmer. Aside from being a heavy producer, it is very smooth and fine of color and sells before others. Next season I shall grow nothing else."

MR. EUGENE BLANDIN, Summit, N. J., says: "Your new Tomato, Stamford Beauty, is all and more than you claimed for it. I always considered the old Stone good enough for anybody, but you have improved it greatly, especially in sweetness and color. We are very pleased with this and thank you for the seed, which germinated perfectly."

does not appear, however, to have been any disclaimer of warranty on the part of the seller, such as is commonly used in the seed trade, and therefore the decision is not to be regarded as conflicting with those important appellate court decisions which have laid down the rule of law that a seedsman may avoid liability in cases of this kind by express disclaimer of warranty of variety, etc.

The defendant, a grocer at Rogers, Ark., sold a quantity of seed to the plaintiffs as being Orange sorghum seed. According to evidence adduced at the trial, the seed, when planted and matured, proved to be a mixture of broom corn, kaffir corn and milo maize seed, with perhaps a mixture of sorghum of some kind. Molasses could not be produced from the product.

One of the plaintiffs testified that defendant not only represented that the seed was of the variety mentioned, but added that he "would stand behind it." The witness further stated that the seed had been hulled and could not be distinguished from sorghum seed.

The defendant, testifying in his own behalf, denied that he specified the variety, merely delivering a quantity on the plaintiffs' request for sorghum seed. He did not grow the seed.

In instructing the jury as to the law involved in the case, the trial judge laid down the following rule, which the Supreme court approved on appeal:

Trial Court's Charge.

"If the jury believes from a preponderance of the evidence that the plaintiffs, Price & Neil, went to the defendant's store for the purpose of buying Orange sorghum seed for the purpose of growing cane to make molasses, which purpose at the time was known to the defendant, who as a positive fact asserted that he had Orange sorghum seed to influence the plaintiffs to buy said seed, which fact was relied upon by the plaintiffs, who were induced thereby to buy said seed, and you further find that said seed was not Orange sorghum seed and was unfit for growing cane to make molasses, and the seed so sold was so much like Orange sorghum seed that an ordinarily prudent person would not have discovered the difference in the seed, * * * you will find for the plaintiffs and assess their damages at a sum equal to the difference in the value of the crop grown from the seed so sold and the value of a crop which would have been grown from Orange surghum seed."

The jury which tried the case having returned a verdict in the plaintiffs' favor, and the trial judge having entered judgment thereon, the defendant appealed to the Supreme court, which tribunal, in affirming the decision, said, in part:

Supreme Court Affirms.

"The rule of law seems to be well settled by the authorities that a sale of seeds by description, where there is no opportunity for inspection, or where the identity is not distinguishable upon an ordinary examination, imports a warranty as to the particular kind of seeds, and that such a transaction falls within the general principle that a sale of chattels by description ordinarily imports opinion as to whether or not a sale of seed imports a warranty of quality, but there is little difference of opinion as to warranty as to the kind of the seed. Under the law as stated, the instructions of the court were more favorable to appellant than he was entitled to. There was no prejudicial error in that respect.

"It is unnecessary to discuss the other instructions, for the ruling of the court in the giving of the instructions and in refusing those requested by appellant did no violence to the rule of law just stated.

"The measure of damages stated in instruction No. 4 was correct, and the testimony was sufficient to sustain the amount of damages allowed by the jury according to the law thus stated.

"It is also contended that there could be no recovery by the copartnership composed of appellees for the reason that the purchase of the seed was made by Neil, one of the copartners. It is sufficient answer, however, to this contention to say that the testimony shows that Neil purchased the seed in his own name for the firm. Privity of contract between appellant and the copartnership was thus established, and appellees are entitled to recover for the breach of warranty.

Custom Cannot Change Law.

"Finally, it is contended that the court erred in refusing to permit appellant to prove by a certain witness that it was the custom among retail dealers in Rogers not to warrant the quality or condition of seeds that they sold. There are several answers to the contention that this ruling constituted prejudicial error. In the first place, the alleged warranty does not relate to the quality or condition of the seed sold, and therefore the custom sought to be proved has no reference to the subject under investigation. In the next place, it is not shown what the answer of the witness would have been to the question excluded. Therefore it does not appear that appellant was prejudiced by the refusal of the court to allow the witness to answer. In addition to that, it can be said that a mere custom of merchants in that vicinity not to warrant seeds could not change the law with reference to a contract concerning a particular sale." S.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

A report from Washington showing how the bulb and seed growing industry has flourished in Denmark during the war period, partly because of the difficulty of obtaining importations from Holland, mentions the Daehnfeldt Co., seed growers, of Odense, as having made a profit in its last fiscal year of ninety per cent on a capital stock of $643,000. "And it is not at all surprising," observed James O. Rignel, of the James O. Rignel Co., Inc., Lockport, N. Y., "when we consider cabbage Danish Ball Head is retailing at $15 per pound, which price we must ask to come out ahead, though we buy direct and in large quantity." W. M.

Burpee's Seeds Grow

Bedding plants and flowers to beautify the homes and gardens of the American public will be in greater demand this spring than ever before.

Every wide-awake florist should now be making preparation to make good on the shortage that is going to be so noticeable this spring.

Bedding plants of every variety are going to be scarce. This scarcity is largely due to the lack of help and the fuel shortage. There are, however, a great many varieties that can be easily grown from seed sown now, and this will help to make up the shortage of Geraniums and other popular bedding plants.

The most suitable varieties to grow from seeds and those which always do well in American gardens are: Ageratum, Alyssum, Asters, Begonias, Celosia, Centaurea, Coleus, Petunia, Salvia, Verbena, Vinca and Zinnia.

The House of Burpee is famous for its superior strains of flower seeds. The stocks of some of the varieties mentioned are short. Consequently, we advise ordering early.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Prospects point to a heavy St. Valentine's day trade, although the supply of flowers to meet it will not be large. From indications, stock will be well cleaned up.

Funeral work has been a big item and everything available has been utilized, with no flowers left on the plants waiting for Valentine's day. Small flowers, which are always most in favor at this time, are limited. Violets and valley are scarce, but orchids are plentiful. Sweet peas and freesias are usually the leaders in popularity on this day. Peas will be ample, but, although freesias are in fair supply, they are not abundant. Plenty of cut baby primroses are to be had. Bulbous stock is meager in both quantity and variety and includes only a few hyacinths, jonquils and tulips. Narcissi have decreased in supply and the price remains steady at $6.

Other offerings for spring baskets, corsages, etc., are marguerites, calendulas, pansies, mignonette, snapdragon and pussy willow.

Greens are high and scarce and, since the demand is heavy, are inadequate. Sprengeri, plumosus and smilax can hardly be found, while ferns are inferior at $4 per thousand.

The death of James Polk, a well known philanthropist, at his home in Greenwood, Ind., was deeply felt by his many friends. Their sympathy for the bereaved family was expressed in many flowers. Telegraph orders were numerous. J. O. Bishop, of Greenwood, had more work than he could handle and most of the local florists were kept busy.

The Florists' Supply Co., in addition to the supply house, has a factory on the third floor of the Holiday building, where wire goods are manufactured. This company will specialize in florists' wirework, such as designs, hanging baskets and wire supports of all kinds. The house is in a position to care for all kinds of special design work. A line of fancy wire lamp shades will be carried. E. E. T.

Stock is still scarce, especially roses. At no time within recollection has there been such a famine. Prices remain at $25, $20 and $15 per hundred for the several grades respectively.

There is a tremendous amount of sociability in evidence throughout the country just now. Florists everywhere seem to have enjoyed a record January.

Although the abnormally mild weather continues, violets do not seem to be so much in vogue as in other years, notwithstanding their excellent quality.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

CULTURE OF SOLANUM.

Will you kindly give me a few points on the culture of solanum? Last year I put my little plants in the field in April and they thrived and berried beautifully. Early in September I dug them up and potted them in 6-inch and 7-inch pots, putting them under a bench in the greenhouse for fifteen days or more. I watered the foliage and roots two or three times a day, as long as the warm weather lasted, but I could not overcome the tendency to wilt during the day after I put them on the bench. They wilted even in cold weather, in fact. Is it possible to overcome this tendency and, if so, how can it be done? How can large plants be transplanted into 5-inch and 6-inch pots without disturbing nearly all the roots? Would it be better to keep them in a lath house?

Is there anything that will rid these plants of the potato beetle besides arsenate of lead, which spots the foliage?

F. A. P.—Cal.

The shock to the roots of the plants after they have attained their full growth is the cause of the wilting and it is impossible to prevent some, at least, of the plants from going wrong. The treatment given is all right from a rough and ready standpoint, but the ideal treatment would be to cut around the plants on two sides with a spade a week or ten days before lifting and, when the plants are potted, give them a slight bottom heat to get the roots working again. Shade and light dewings overhead and moderate watering of the roots are other essentials. Then, when the action between root and branch is again vigorous, the plants will stand exposure to light and sun. If no bottom heat is at command, some litter or straw manure should be placed under the pots when they are staged, as this will keep them a little warmer than on the ground and help the roots just that much. But no plant lifted just as it is at its best can ever compare with specimens grown in pots while the berries are maturing. Paris green should be effective against the insects.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Stock generally is considerably more plentiful this week than for some time and the growers are not holding out for such high prices. But the demand still is good and in some lines stock is cleared daily. Wholesalers note a slight falling off in out-of-town shipments and, funeral work not being so plentiful, the local demand has dropped a notch. But withal the business is far ahead of last year's and the first week in February goes on record as one of the best for this season. Roses are coming in fair shape, the short and medium lengths clearing early. Carnations are improving with the brighter days and all classes of small flowers are coming in more freely. Among flowering shrubs the white, fragrant buddleia is a favorite, the odor reminding one of Boronia megastigma. Freesias are at their best now and some splendid forms of pure white varieties are on the market. Daffodils and hyacinths come slowly and it looks as if their season might be short. At least one large grower will cut only half the quantity of Golden Spur he cut last year and on some places there is not more than ten per cent of the normal crop. Lack of rain is said to be the cause of the shortage, but just how lack of winter rain can affect bulbs that mature in the early summer does not appear. Orchids are meeting with a fine demand and the prices keep up well. Violets are still plentiful and the prospect for St. Valentine's day trade is good. Greens are shortening up in supply, but there are enough to go around. Prices on all lines are higher than at this season last year. Fine cyclamens, primulas and begonias and a nice line of ferns are the leaders in plant stock.

Various Notes.

Propagation of dahlias is in progress at the Superior Nursery, at Fifty-ninth and Compton avenue. C. Gutting is a strong believer in vigorous stock for young plants and the immense roots dug from the Figueroa street gardens are a mass of live eyes, each producing large, vigorous cuttings, which are taken off daily to be rooted. Other young stock noted as doing well included crotons and various new forms of nephrolepis. Ferns have long been a specialty here and the stock is good. Excellent young stock of cyclamens is seen here also.

Mr. Storrs, of Storrs & Harrison, Painesville, O., was a visitor in the city this week.

John Fincken, of West Washington street, filed a petition in bankruptcy February 4. Some time ago Mr. Fincken called a meeting of his creditors and everyone in the trade was willing to give him a chance to go on and make good. But an attachment was put on his place by a doctor for professional services and Mr. Fincken was advised by his attorney to take the step indicated above. No one in the trade had pushed him or even thought of doing so, as it was thought that, given a chance, he would be able to work up his business again.

George W. Smith has been in town this week, having driven down from Ventura, where, besides his farming interests, he has several large landscape contracts in hand.

George Eischen, having been honorably discharged from the army, is back at his old job with J. W. Wolters, on Hill street.

A look through the Howard & Smith nursery is always interesting and there is much to see at all times. Just now one of the big items is delivering roses. The immense stock of Los Angeles is greatly diminished, and Fred Howard says this concern probably will be unable to fill all orders in full on this and some other popular kinds. A big force is packing this rose and other stock all the time, but cannot catch up with

WE ARE keeping our word and living up to our motto. This is proved by our being able to fill our holiday orders with good stock when others failed.

The Market.

Stock has continued to increase during the last week without a corresponding increase in the demand, so the tendency is toward lower prices on practically all cut flowers. The dominant feature of the market is the heavy cut of outdoor daffodils just beginning to arrive. At the first of the week they cleaned up at $2 per hundred. Now $1.50 is a top price and short-stemmed stock does not bring more than $1 per hundred. A gentle rain this week would prove beneficial to all outdoor spring flowers.

Freesias are still a prominent item, but prices have dropped from 50 cents a bunch in the last few days to three bunches for $1. Carnations, which have to share their popularity with daffodils, have receded to 75 cents per bunch, a bunch containing two dozen blooms. Though the cut of roses has not increased to any great extent, the position of these flowers has weakened with the increased supply of other flowers, as a whole. Prices are still high, however, in comparison with the same period in former years. The quality of stock generally is good. Excellent American Beauties are sufficient for requirements and there is a fine cut of Russell, Ophelia, Shawyer and Hadley. Violets are better and more plentiful than they have been for two months. The shippers have booked unusually large orders for St. Valentine's day. Few Easter lilies are offered and few are in sight for later in the season. From present indications the Easter supply will be lighter than has been the case for many years. Florists are now considering what can be had to take their place. Orchids are in ample supply, but gardenias are on the short side of the market. No lily of the valley has been seen here for a good many weeks. Spring blossoms figure prominently in the downtown displays and have a brisk call; the same may be said of acacia. Heather is still used extensively. A limited amount of snapdragon appears, and sweet peas likewise are in short supply.

Various Notes.

F. C. Jaeger, of F. C. Jaeger & Son, received a card from his son, F. C., Jr., familiarly known as "Freddie," from Portugal a few days ago, saying he expected to be back in port here March 1. In the merchant marine he has had the opportunity of seeing a good part of the world. He wrote enthusiastically about seeing President Wilson's party in Italy.

Henry Avansino, of Avansino Bros., has been taking a turn at the influenza. He is up and around again after a three weeks' illness, but probably will not be back at the store for ten days or two weeks yet, having had a severe attack.

Joseph Avansino is bringing in a heavy cut of daffodils from San Leandro, where he has the crop from 50,000 bulbs under contract. Besides supplying the needs of the business of Avansino Bros., he sells to other stores in the Bay section.

Victor Ferrari, nephew of Peter Ferrari, of Ferrari Bros., and associated with that firm's nursery and greenhouse business, has received his discharge from the service and resumed his old duties.

William De Brunn, with Pelicano, Rossi & Co., is being congratulated upon his recent marriage, which came as a surprise to his fellow-workers. A. J. Rossi reports business holding up well, the rush of funeral work due to the epidemic having given way to more substantial normal requirements for cut flowers.

Nice primulas and other potted plants arrive from H. Plath's place at Lawrence and Winnipeg avenues. Friends regret, however, that Mr. Plath is on the sick list.

H. L. Goertzhain has been sending in some nice snapdragons and pansies from Redwood City, south of San Francisco.

Frank Thatcher, formerly with Pelicano, Rossi & Co., has been transferred to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he is recuperating from a cold which he contracted before leaving the other side. He hopes to be returned to San Francisco before many weeks.

The monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society February 1 was well attended. The entire session was given over to routine business matters. Lectures and other special features probably will be resumed in another month or two.

Walter Hoff, manager of the landscape department of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., has just returned from a trip in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys. Nice heather is arriving at the store in Powell street from the nursery down the peninsula.

Robert Newcomb has been renewing acquaintance in the trade here, having severed his connection with the Miller Floral Co., of Salt Lake City, Ut., and gone on the road for the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, of Burlington, Ia. He formerly made this territory for the American Bulb Co.

Mark Ebel, of Sacramento, Cal., was in town a few days ago, accompanied by Mrs. Ebel.

Among the funeral orders of the last week at B. M. Joseph's was an especially large one calling for several designs and a pall of violets and freesias.

N. F. Baldocchi, of Podesta & Baldocchi, says funeral work has dropped off noticeably, but that the call has increased for flowers for other purposes, a welcome change.

Improvements in the wholesale cut flower and supply establishment of the C. Kooyman Co., Bush street, are progressing nicely. The owners of the building are renovating the place thoroughly, the work to include replastering the walls, the installation of a new store front, a beam ceiling, lighting fixtures and other modern features. Copper screws will be inserted in the ceiling beams at regular intervals, from which the stock of baskets can be shown to advantage.

J. A. Axell, manager of the E. W. McLellan Co., is much relieved to have stock enough to fill orders in full again, after being forced to prorate the supply among the firm's customers for so long. The company has a nice cut of roses and is particularly well supplied with Russell.

Enomoto & Co. have no complaints to make about business, there being plenty of flowers here now and a brisk demand.

The United Flower & Supply Co. is much gratified over the large orders received for violets for St. Valentine's day.

SWISS FLORAL CO., Portland, Ore.

Louis Picetti, manager of the new store of the Charles C. Navlet Co., on Market street, off First, reports good results from the special rose-bush, shrub and plant sale, which was inaugurated January 27 and continued for two weeks. The adjoining store, which was used to accommodate overflow stock at holiday time, has been utilized to good advantage during the sale. Pleasing results have been obtained in the cut flower department. There was a question at first whether the location was favorable for this class of trade, but any misgivings that might have been entertained at that time have been dispelled, according to Mr. Picetti, sales having been gratifying from the start.

Mrs. Roberts reports business well up to expectations at the J. B. Boland store in Kearny street.

The local trade has been notified that W. H. Hawkins has purchased and taken charge of the greenhouse interests of B. S. Bassett, at Loomis, Cal.

Miss Recardie Lee Murray is back on duty after a week's rest. She reports business active at the hotels where she maintains stands, as well as at her store on Geary street. M. M.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The last two weeks have brought about a decided change in the florists' business. Two weeks ago stock was scarce and the toll of the influenza epidemic so large that florists were hard pressed to find stock. Today there are large stocks of all seasonable flowers, such as Paper Whites, daffodils, Roman hyacinths, violets and sweet peas, with a large collection of potted plants. The influenza is now practically checked, few cases being reported.

The laurustinus, a hardy shrub which covers itself with cymes of white flowers, is useful for design work. The flower-buds develop gradually during the fall and winter months and, if taken up with a ball of earth and kept in a carnation temperature, will open in three weeks.

Much use has been made of late of magnolia leaves and English laurel foliage in design work, which materially aided in filling orders when flowers were scarce. Narcissi and freesias are in oversupply at the present time and moving slowly.

Various Notes.

Samuel Roake, the fern man, now located at Castle Rock, has been elected mayor of that village. He assures us that politics will not prevent him from sending his customers their usual orders of fern fronds.

R. L. Scott, of Tillamook, who fills orders for huckleberry shrubbery and other greens from the woods, is in the city on business. He is thinking of disposing of his greenhouse at Mount Scott.

William Hoffmann is trying to arouse enthusiasm among some of the florists in regard to spending a couple of weeks at Palm Beach this summer by way of a vacation.

Henry Kahn is bringing in fine sweet peas and a quantity of callas.

The Chapelle Flower Shop reports that its new location is bringing a steady increase of business and that January was the best month on record. This concern has a neat little store in a good location, with a large workroom on the mezzanine floor. Its policy in future will be to handle a better line of stock and to cater to a higher class of customers.

The Swiss Floral Co. reports an increased call for petunia seed of the Portland strain and it is sold out on White Beauty. The trade at the store has exceeded the capacity of supply, funeral work being especially heavy.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The general strike, which has been threatened for a week or more, became an actuality February 6, when 50,000 union laborers of 130 local organizations comprising the Seattle Central Labor Council dropped their tools and walked out. Employees not included in the strike will have to walk to and from their work, as street cars are not running. They also will have to carry their lunches, as all restaurants are closed. The municipal lighting department is still operating and promises of the mayor and the superintendent of the department that power would not be cut off have been fulfilled thus far.

The florists are still open for business, but business is conspicuous for its absence. W. S. G.

ILLINOIS APPROVES EMBARGO.

Convention Busy Affair.

After a heated discussion, a resolution recommending that the federal quarantine on plants be made permanent was passed by the Illinois State Nurserymen's Association at its convention in Chicago February 6.

Those who opposed the resolution expressed themselves as believing that its passage would antagonize the florists and the nurserymen of the east, both of whom have gone on record as opposed to the quarantine, or favoring its modification.

In favor of the resolution it was said that no harm would be done by the quarantine either to the nurserymen or the florists, as both would be able to produce in this country everything that has come from abroad in the past.

The resolution, which will be sent to the Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., was considered and voted upon favorably at the closing session of the convention, which was thought to have been a helpful meeting by the majority of those present.

Resolution of Endorsement.

Following is the resolution:

"We, the members of the Illinois Nurserymen's Association, duly assembled in convention February 5, 1919, heartily endorse the action of your board in establishing the federal quarantine No. 37, restricting the importation of nursery stock and other plants and seeds on and after June 1, 1919.

"Realizing that this quarantine is the result of your thorough investigation, we request that this quarantine be made permanent, so as to safeguard the development of the agricultural, horticultural and forestry interests of America, as well as the nurserymen and growers, propagating and distributing such nursery stock, plants and seeds as are being excluded by this quarantine."

Another important matter disposed of by the convention was the appointment of a legislative committee, composed of A. M. Augustine, Normal; Arthur H. Hill, Dundee, and J. A. Young, Aurora, to push legislation providing for the eradication of the barberry and other plants liable to harbor diseases. In this connection a recruiting committee, including T. J. Littleford, Downers Grove; A. Z. Smith and B. J. Vandervort, Bloomington, was appointed to solicit new members for the association, with the idea of increasing the funds in the treasury, these to be used for expenses of the legislative committee.

Discuss Accounting System.

There was considerable discussion of an accounting system for nurserymen, this to make it possible for them to determine prices intelligently, and agitation in favor of standardizing prices, but no formal action on these matters was taken. Varied prices charged by nurserymen were said by several who spoke to be responsible for evil reputations borne by some of the trade. Nearly all agreed that standard prices would eliminate cut-throat competition with its attendant bad features.

The several papers read before the convention contained a number of useful and interesting features, and the discussions which followed brought out many other points of interest to the nurserymen.

REMEDY AGAINST DEFAULT.

Claims for Damages.

The law, of course, affords redress for breach of a valid contract to purchase goods, but there is now a well established rule of law in nearly every state to the effect that if the buyer gives notice of his repudiation of his contract before the seller makes delivery, it shuts off the seller's right to collect the purchase price. The aggrieved seller in such case must resort to a claim for damages for breach of the contract. In other words, the law recognizes the legal right of either party to a contract for the sale of personal property to repudiate it before it has been performed, subject only to liability to pay the damages sustained by the other party through such breach.

Exceptions to the Rule.

This rule does not apply where there has been a delivery of the goods, actually or constructively, to the buyer. For example, if goods are sold f. o. b.

place of shipment (and they are presumed to be so sold unless there is an agreement to the contrary), it is too late for the buyer to give notice of repudiation of the contract after the goods have been shipped. In such case the title to the property already has passed to him by delivery of the same to the railway company, which is to be regarded as the buyer's and not the seller's agent for the purpose of transporting them.

A Typical Case.

But a typical example of a case where an aggrieved seller may fall down in suing for the agreed price, instead of for damages, is to be found in the case of the Sherman Nursery Co. vs. Aughebaugh, 93 Minnesota Reports, 201, decided by the Minnesota Supreme court.

Defendant contracted to buy a quantity of nursery stock from plaintiff for delivery to him at his nearest railway station the following spring, nearly one year after the placing of the order. Plaintiff delivered the stock at that place, but defendant refused to accept delivery or to pay for the goods and, when sued for the price, he set up the fact that about ten days after he placed the order and before the plaintiff had done anything toward execution of the contract on its part, he countermanded the order, and notified plaintiff that he would not accept any stock.

The plaintiff relied upon a provision in the contract to the effect that the order was not subject to countermand, but the suit was determined against the nursery company in both the trial court and in the supreme court on appeal. The latter court said:

No Ground for Action.

"It is true the case did not progress far enough to determine whether the defendant had a legal right to countermand the order, but it stands admitted that he attempted to do so, and refused to permit the plaintiff to deliver the goods; that is, he repudiated the contract and the goods were never delivered. We have, then, a case where the purchase price of goods is to be paid on the delivery thereof, but the buyer has repudiated the sale, and prevented the seller from making delivery. This brings the case within the well settled rule that, except where the purchase price of goods is payable irrespective of their delivery, if the buyer repudiates the sale while it is executory [unperformed], and prevents the seller from performing on his part by making delivery of the goods, the seller cannot maintain an action on the contract for the purchase price. His only remedy in such case is an action for damages for a breach of the contract * * * It is obvious that the plaintiff cannot recover on the contract the purchase price of the goods; that the complainant does not allege a cause of action for damages for the defendant's breach of the contract; and that for this reason the action was properly dismissed."

Leather Leaf Fern—Polystichum Coriaceum

I think we have the largest stock of this Fern in cultivation. A splendid house plant. The leaves are a dark, lustrous green and will keep for weeks after cutting. Now used in high-grade floral work and commended by many of the best retail florists.

Every retail grower should have plants in some corner of greenhouse for cutting. Once used, you will wonder how you ever "kept house" without it.

For a short time I offer strong divisions, ready for benching, at price asked by others for 2¼-inch pots; $10.00 per 100.

Twenty-five for $3.00, prepaid in U. S.

J. D. EISELE, of Henry A. Dreer, writes:

"I consider this one of the most beautiful Ferns we have and undoubtedly the most useful for cutting."

The announcement of the quarantine states that "through the coöperation of the Department of Agriculture with state officials, local organizations and individuals, the susceptible species of berberis and mahonia have been largely eradicated from the above-named states, but these plants are still prevalent in many regions of the United States. It appears necessary, therefore, to quarantine the states of Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, in accordance with Section 8 of the Plant Quarantine Act of August 20, 1912 (37 Stat. 315), as amended by the Act of Congress approved March 4, 1917 (39 Stat. 1134, 1165), and to prohibit or regulate the movement from said states and district to the states first above named of all species and varieties of barberry and mahonia susceptible to black stem-rust."

UNJUST LAW PROPOSED.

Arkansas Trade Aroused.

Arkansas florists, seedsmen and nurserymen are facing a serious situation if a bill now pending in the state senate is passed. The measure already has passed the house without amendment and is scheduled to come before the senate for consideration February 20.

The bill is known as "The Arkansas Nursery Fraud Act of 1919," and its purpose is, according to the preamble, to "punish misrepresentations and deception" in the sale of nursery stock, florists' field-grown stock and seeds.

It is provided in the bill that every person or firm applying for a license under the act shall file with the chief inspector of the plant board a bond of $1,000, in the case of residents, and a bond of $5,000 in the case of nonresidents.

Further, the act provides that no stock of any sort may be shipped into the state unless both the shipper and the consignee be licensed and bonded by the chief plant inspector of Arkansas. The license fee is fixed at $5 for nurserymen and dealers in nursery stock and $1 for agents, salesmen or solicitors. These licenses, according to the bill, expire July 1 of each year.

Prison Penalty.

Penalties provided for disobedience of the law are fine and imprisonment, the former from $10 to $200, and the latter from twenty days to six months. Both penalties may be imposed.

Nurserymen or dealers shall be required, under the bill, to file with the chief inspector of the state plant board a copy of the complete invoice of each sale they make, including the name of the purchaser, the name and quantity of varieties sold and the prices.

The only clauses in the bill looked upon with favor by the Arkansas trade are those in which it is made unlawful to misrepresent stock or substitute, and another providing that persons desiring to act as expert horticultural advisers shall be required to furnish proof of their ability to the state chief inspector and be licensed.

The Arkansas trade is fighting against the unjust features of the bill, saying that if it is passed without amendment, their business will be seriously affected. Some make the assertion that the effect of the bill will be to put out of business every florist, nurseryman and seedsman in Arkansas.

It is contended by those interested that the fee for the nonresident license is too high and that the effect of this portion of the bill will be to stop the importation of flowers, plants or trees from other states. The state license and bond are declared to be unreasonable, while the reports required are characterized as absurd.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Business is excellent here, with the demand for all kinds of stock holding up well and keeping the market firm. Although prices are high, the public seems to be adjusting itself to this and the demand is good in all lines. There has been an unusually heavy call for potted plants, for the most part in bulbous stock.

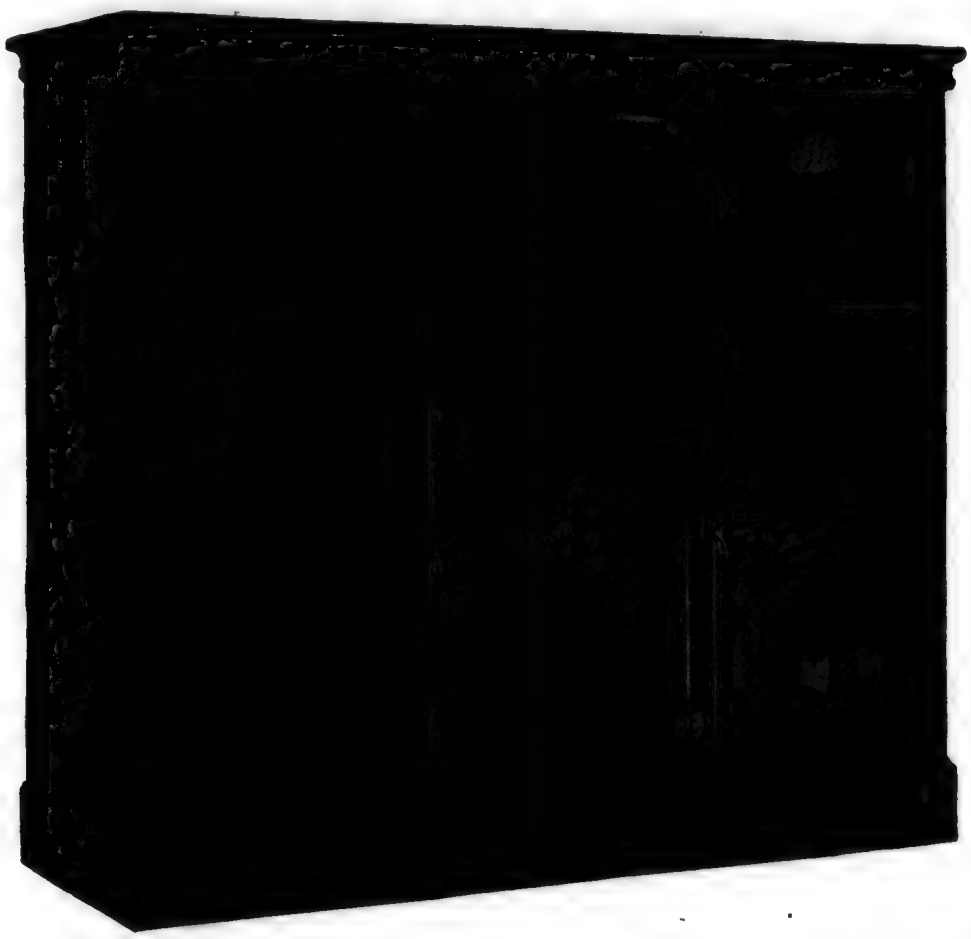
Advance orders for St. Valentine's day have been numerous, most of them F. T. D. orders.

Roses are now at their best, but a shortage of roses for St. Valentine's day, especially in the red varieties, is expected. There is a splendid crop of carnations on at present and violets also are in good supply. Bulbous stock is in fine condition, Paper Whites, jonquils, freesias and tulips being offered. Primula malacoides made its appearance last week.

Various Notes.

The Flick Floral Co. sent out two handsome orchid wreaths last week. Cattleyas were used to make up these pieces.

The New Haven Floral Co. has a fine line of bulbous stock for St. Valentine's day, in addition to an excellent crop of roses, including Columbia, Shawyer, Ophelia, Richmond and Hoosier Beauty.



W. J. & M. S. Vesey have a heavy crop of cattleyas and other seasonable orchids. Richard M. Vesey left last week for Indianapolis to take his seat as representative in the state legislature. Judge and Mrs. W. J. Vesey have gone to New York city and other eastern points.

Adolph Jaenicke, city forester, has just purchased a large apple orchard a few miles from this city. He will oversee this enterprise in addition to looking after the work connected with his position in the city.

H. R. Smalley has been reappointed agricultural agent of Allen county by the board of education for the year 1919. Mr. Smalley has met with success in this work here.

Colonial bouquets and baskets of spring bulbous flowers are being featured by the Doswell Floral Co. The firm reports plenty of funeral work.

A fine St. Valentine's day decoration was noted at Edgar Wenninghoff's flower shop, in which novelties of various kinds were displayed. R. F. B.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

HEATING WITH EXHAUST STEAM.

Is it practicable to heat a greenhouse with exhaust steam? I can arrange to secure steam from a power plant which would give me continuous, day and night service. The power plant comprises a 90-horsepower engine, with two boilers, of 100 and 150 horsepower, respectively. The exhaust is now going to waste. What would be the value of the water returned to the plant, to be used again? F. J. A.—Neb.

It is not only practicable, but it is often profitable to heat a greenhouse with exhaust steam, where regular service can be secured. There are also many advantages, among which are the lessening of the danger of fire, the relief from the labor of firing and the removal of the cinders, and the securing of greater regularity in the heating.

A flat rate per thousand square feet of glass or of radiation is sometimes given, but the cost of heating varies so much in different years, and according to the condition of the glazing and the character of the exposure, that no general estimate can be given on this basis. The method of determining the charge for heating used by most central heating plants is to base it upon the weight of the condensed water which is returned from the greenhouse coils, determined by a self-registering condensation meter.

The exact amount charged for the service varies with the cost of fuel at the given point, as well as with the amount of steam used. Thus, where fuel is cheap and where a large amount of steam is required, the charge may be as low as 40 or 45 cents per thousand pounds of condensation. On the other hand, the charge may be as much as 75 or 80 cents per thousand pounds of condensation where the cost of coal is high and the greenhouse space is small. In some sections it may be even more than this. There has been an advance of more than fifty per cent in the charges during the last two years, owing to the war prices of fuel. Ordinarily, the party owning the heating plant makes the connection, charging nothing for piping to the curb line, and asking the actual cost for labor and material for connecting with the steam mains inside the greenhouse.

If there is a small and, preferably, a cool house located at a lower level than the others, it is often advisable to put in "economy coils," through which the condensed water will circulate before going back to the heating plant. In this way the efficiency of the steam can be increased fully ten per cent.

When it is possible to carry the condensation back to the heating plant at a temperature of 150 degrees, as may be done when the distance is not great and the return pipe is properly insulated, this permits a considerable saving of fuel, as compared with the cost of raising the temperature of well water from 50 degrees to 212 degrees. We are told that it requires the expenditure of 967 degrees to form steam from water at 32 degrees, and on this basis, while approximately 950 degrees will be required to turn well water at its usual temperature into steam, only 850 degrees will be required if the water has an initial temperature of 150 degrees, and still less if it is returned at a higher temperature. On this basis an allowance of ten per cent, less any increased cost for returning the water, might be made, as compared with the cost when it is turned into the drains.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business has approached nearer to normal conditions during the last week than for a considerable time. There has been a slight improvement in the supply and a slight easing off in the demand, especially for funeral work, with the consequence that there is practically a normal market, though prices are slightly higher. The increasing supply of bulbous stock is also a factor in the changing conditions. Whereas the spring graduation exercises in the grammar schools of the city a few years ago were an occasion calling for many flowers, those of the last week were held without the customary elaborate setting, and it is doubtful if they resulted in the selling of a single dollar's worth of flowers.

Various Notes.

Aaron Cohen has been at his home in this city the last week on a furlough from Camp Upton.

James Hay, of East Greenwich, has just purchased a new runabout automobile for light work.

Ralph Kinder, son of Samuel Kinder, Bristol, has been discharged from service and is at home.

A mortgage for $7,000 against the real estate of Joseph Koppelman, off Pawtucket avenue, East Providence, has been discharged by Sarah Fishelson.

The state has been asked to appropriate $3,500 for the suppression of the white pine blister rust and $5,500 for an automobile power sprayer for the use of the Board of Agriculture in fighting insect pests.

Jack Johnston, son of Edward Johnston, arrived at Newport News, Va., last week after his seventh round trip across seas with the naval transport service.

Alexander Macrae is a member of the "Welcome Home" committee appointed by the Republican city committee to assist in general plans for the celebration here.

Lieutenant Amasa F. Williston, of Little Compton, has received an honorable discharge from service.

Joseph E. Koppelman has been confined to his home, on Pawtucket avenue, East Providence, during the week by a severe attack of grip.

The annual returns of the board of assessors of the town of Warwick filed last week show that the estate of Nelson W. Aldrich is taxed for $1,613,000 and that of James A. Foster for $120,590.

O. H. Williams & Sons, whose houses on Hartford avenue have been closed all winter, are preparing to devote two houses to bedding plants and the remainder of the range to vegetable plants for transplanting.

At the annual financial town meeting at Westerly February 11 $200 was appropriated for the tree warden to care for shade trees and $300 for suppression of the elm beetle and tussock moth.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Fire destroyed grain and hay stored in the stable of Albert Lash, at Warwood, recently and damaged the building considerably. Effective work on the part of the fire department saved the building and prevented the fire from spreading to the residence.

Great Saving in Preparing Land for Carnation Stock

Following is what Kretschmar Bros., of West Nyack, New York, say of the System:

"It has always been a great expense to prepare our land for the carnation stock before planting, as each day we would only plow enough for the day's planting so that we could work in moist soil. This also would be all hand raked to get it in the best condition. We can now plow the whole strip and harrow with a spiked tooth harrow and use the Skinner System after each day's planting to water them down."

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is good and everything coming into the market is cleaned up quickly. Prices are good. The demand from out of town is heavy.

Roses of all kinds are scarce. Rose shipments that come into the wholesale houses sell quickly and more roses could be used if they were available. The carnation cut sells readily also. Easter lilies are not so plentiful as they were for a time. Some excellent rubrum lilies and callas are coming. The bulbous list includes daffodils, Paper White narcissi, Roman hyacinths, Dutch hyacinths, yellow narcissi, freesia and a few tulips. The sweet pea supply is good and finds an excellent market. Orchids are plentiful. Some choice snapdragon is available and sells readily. Other offerings are violets, calendulas, valley, mignonette, myosotis, baby primroses and wallflowers.

The supply of greens is fair and finds a good market.

Various Notes.

George Kessen, who was formerly with the Avondale Floral Co., has returned from service in the army and has taken a position with the William Murphy Co.

C. E. Critchell entertained E. Allan Peirce, of Waltham, Mass., William Nicholson, Framingham, Mass., George Arnold, Boston, Mass., and Joseph H. Hill, Richmond, Ind., while they were in this city after the recent meeting of the Carnation Society at Cleveland.

The local trade was greatly shocked to hear of the sudden death of Milton Alexander. He was well known and well liked here.

C. E. Critchell has received some excellent snapdragon that has sold readily.

Among other recent visitors were I. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and Ferdinand Keller, of Lexington, Ky. C. H. H.

W. H. Rutenschroer mourned the loss of his fine stock of primulas, which were destroyed by fire recently, although the loss was covered by insurance.

Painesville, O.—The Storrs & Harrison Co. is receiving quick response to the new catalogue and looks for a continuation of good business. Seed stocks are complete and an early reduction of plant stock is anticipated by E. B. George, who has an additional task, owing to the flight of his worthy sire to California for a brief period.

Gladiolus: "Mrs. Watt" has been grown from Massachusetts to California, and has made good with every florist who has given it a trial. Resembling the American Beauty rose in color, but more brilliant, it will occupy the same place among gladioli as does the American Beauty among roses. Unexcelled for forcing, and because of its distinctive beautiful shade and strong upright growth, it meets the need of every florist.

AUSTIN-COLEMAN CO., WAYLAND, OHIO.

Prince of Wales is destined to be the best florists' cut flower Gladiolus ever known. Color a clear, gorgeous, glistening salmon, melting to a throat of the sweetest yellow. Extremely early, large flowered on tall, strong spike and grand multiplier. Every spike a bouquet. Excellent forcer, weeks ahead of America, in short, the one best bet on the Gladiolus horizon. Award of Merit, Haarlem, Holland, 1913, a rare honor. I have sold all the large bulbs and planting stock that I care to dispose of, but having a surplus of bulblets, I will sell a limited quantity at $1.00 per 100, $9.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate and with every order of 500 or more, will include one large bulb free. These prices are away below value and are made for a quick disposal of my surplus. All bulblets have been kept in damp sand and are of high germination. Raymond M. Champe, Walled Lake, Oakland County, Mich.

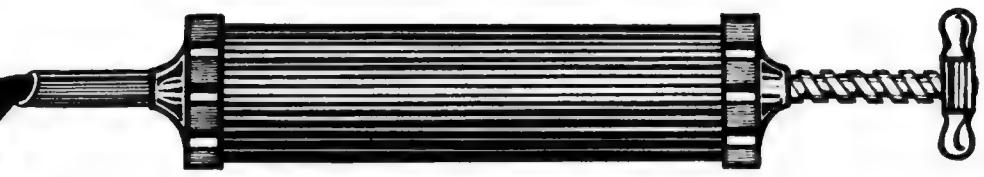
Permanite

"No more Putty for me"

Said Mr. Loyd C. Bunch, of Fredonia, Kansas, when we asked for his opinion of Permanite, that ever-elastic glazing cement. Mr. Bunch had tried 'em all—Old English Putty, Liquid Putty and a lot of other cements—but the one big objection he had against every one of these products was this: no matter what he tried they all hardened up, cracked and sooner or later fell off, which, of course, meant additional expense and labor for Mr. Bunch.



When you use Permanite you will never experience any trouble of this kind; Permanite is elastic and stays elastic; no matter what happens, summer or winter, rain or shine, Permanite is on the job, stays "put" all the time and will positively outlast putty three to four times. Permanite costs less than putty, covers more linear feet per gallon and will not harden, no matter how long it may be on your roof.

If you haven't one of our latest Permanite folders on hand be sure and write for your copy today!

Yes—

every man's a Crank about something

WE'RE cranks about the little things that go into the making of a "surenough" greenhouse. One of 'em is ventilation.

YOU'RE probably a crank on growing the kind of stock that always hits the Bull's-eye of Big Prices —Bing!—right in the center.

NOW you see the "something" we're cranks on and the "something" you're a crank on will work together to make a Big, Bulging Bank Balance to your credit.

YOU know your system of ventilating will, in a great measure, determine this matter. You know what a power you control in a really reliable ventilating system. In the AGMCO you have it—your ideal, because we're cranks on it.

STUDY this view of the AGMCO continuous ventilation—burn it deep into your memory. Note the continuous shaft apparatus—two continuous lines of sash, one on each side of the ridge, hinged on the ridge and opening up and out. The sash are clamped together with steel plates, sufficient space being left to allow for expansion to prevent getting out of line and, what is equally important, the arms are close enough together to lift the whole sash without twisting it.

WHY, just the lack of this kind of ventilation may make the difference between a crop that Boosts Your Bank Balance and one that Punches Your Profit out of Place.

Write about it—only takes a minute —this one will do

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE

Standard 40-Foot House for Flowers and Vegetables

(This measurement is to extrem outside of posts.)

Inside measurement is 39 feet 4 inches.

It has no columns to interfere with plowing or carting manure.

The truss is hung particularly low, so that the bottom member can be used for cucumber and tomato wiring.

We drill the wire holes at the factory.

This type of house we called the Irondequoit section, because it has been so extensively adopted by the growers at Irondequoit, near Rochester, N. Y.

This width house gives six benches, each 4 feet 6 inches wide; with four walks, 1 foot 6 inches wide; two side walks, 2 feet 1 inch wide; and center walk, 2 feet wide.

Height to ridge, 16 feet 4 inches.

The interior shown is in J. H. West & Sons' house.

The way things are loosening up in all other lines of business, it does look as if there is a big harvest ahead for you greenhouse men.

When you are ready to talk business, say when and where, and we will be there.

Less Flowers and More Ribbon

In these days of high priced flowers, it is real economy to use ribbon lavishly. Many designs with a few flowers tastefully arranged with a large bow of inexpensive ribbon will give greater satisfaction than when many expensive flowers are used in the design.

Progressive Florists realize that in these days of heavy retail overhead something must be done to counterbalance the high cost of flowers.

A large, attractive ribbon bow can be made up by you in a medium grade of ribbon at a cost not exceeding 75 cents. Width of the ribbon, 5 inches. Higher grade ribbon in proportion.

You Florists who still believe in economizing on ribbon, take notice. AT YOUR SERVICE.

HERE'S ANOTHER REAL GOOD THING

The Review has not been able to interview all the parties interested, but enough has come to light to indicate that "Ironite" is what is known, in the language of the day, as a "good thing"—a good thing, at least, for the man who seems to have a monopoly on its sale to florists.

HAVE you had the pleasure of a visit by the "Ironite" man? His name is Miller—Dr. Allen W. Miller is the way he endorses checks—and he knows the trade from A to Z, or, should we say in recognition of the astuteness of some of the most successful florists, from alpha to omega? If you have entertained this interesting traveler, quite likely about the place you have a bag, a not large but quite heavy bag, of a substance that seems in harmony with the inscription on the tag—Ironite.

Quite likely you have it, because, while there is record of many who have bought and received commendably prompt delivery, thus far no one has been heard from who has made any use of his purchase.

"Here's Something New."

The first word of Ironite came to The Review from Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill. "Here's something new," they wrote, "or at least it is new to us. A man giving the name of Miller called on most of the florists in this section, introducing a 'soil conditioner' named Ironite. Enclosed is the receipted bill he gave to one of our neighbors. He had good letters from some Chicago growers. What do you know about it?"

One of the functions of The Review, you know, is to dig up the information its readers haven't the local facilities to find for themselves.

The billhead carried the name of the National Co., San Francisco. There was no street address. Inquiry of the telephone company brought the reply that no concern of that name in San Francisco had a telephone and consulting the San Francisco city directory at a nearby library of city directories failed to give the desired information, so a letter was written to the Office of Fertilizer Control, U. S. Department of Agriculture. The government licensed all fertilizer manufacturers during the war and limited their prices and profits. The official reply was: "We have no record showing that a Mr. A. W. Miller applied for a license, nor have we granted any license to the National Co. If you can aid us in getting in touch with this Mr. Miller, we shall be glad of your assistance; meanwhile we shall endeavor to find him through our regular channels."

The Review printed these facts, with the request that some reader supply the street and number of the National Co., so that this paper could send a representative to the headquarters of the concern.

Since then there have been many letters about Ironite, for Review readers are prompt to respond to any request for information. From Seattle and Spokane, from Knoxville, Tenn.; from Toledo, O., and from many places between, word has come that the Ironite man had been there. But there is no news of headquarters of the concern, to which one might go to replenish his supply of Ironite if he wanted to.

In all cases reported Miller has made the sale. His method is to ship a quantity of Ironite to himself at some point where there is a colony of florists. Then he canvasses his prospects, books his orders, hires a conveyance, usually an auto, makes deliveries and collections and goes on to another town.

A Good Thing.

The transactions are quickly closed and it is not until the seller has disappeared that the buyers begin to suspect that perhaps the salesman had in mind a certain story when he said Ironite was a good thing.

It is related of a certain millionaire manufacturer of a patent medicine that about his country place he dressed and looked the typical farmer. One day he was accosted by a party that stopped in a big touring car:

"That's Blank's place, isn't it?" asked one of the strangers.

"Yes," replied the owner.

"Made it all out of Blank's Bitters?"

"So they say."

"Is the stuff really any good?"

"Well, it did me good."

From Spokane, Wash., came the report that some of the buyers of Ironite changed their minds before Miller got out of town and got their money back—he seems not to have objected, indeed, to have been glad to refund the money, take his goods and go his way.

Good thing though Miller says Ironite is, there is a suspicion that the formula is not constant. The sample submitted to the Washington Agricultural Ex-

THANK YOU!

One of the most pleasant of the many interesting features of publishing The Review has to do with the invaluable assistance rendered by its readers.

For many years the steady growth of the paper, particularly in circulation, has come principally through well-pleased readers recommending it to others to whom it should prove equally helpful.

This assistance will be especially valuable now that the trade is about to enter another period of rapid expansion and will be thoroughly appreciated.

AN OFFICIAL REPORT ON "IRONITE."

STATE COLLEGE OF WASHINGTON.
Agricultural Experiment Station.

Pullman, Wash.,
January 21, 1919.

Gentlemen:—

Your sample of "Ironite" has been received and analyzed. This sample has absolutely no value as a fertilizer in that it contains just a trace of potash, phosphorus and nitrogen. The fertility content is less than is ordinarily found in soils as taken from the field. The substance seems to be composed of just common white sand mixed with a little lamp black to give it color, as well as a considerable quantity of iron filings to give it weight.

I cannot see what possible good would result from applying this material to growing plants outside of the good that might result from using the same amount of white sand.

Yours very truly,

F. J. Sievers,
Soil Physicist.

periment Station proved to be blackened sand and iron filings, but George H. Hennessey, Springfield, Ill., writes of his purchase: "It looks to me like foundry dust from the emery wheels of some big castings plant."

What Testimonials Do.

This is from A. Cruikshank, superintendent of East Lawn Cemetery, Sacramento, Cal.: "Upon the statement of A. W. Miller that he had supplied and had references from Peter Reinberg and Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, we bought 190 pounds of Ironite, but our foreman is so well convinced that the thing is a fraud that we cannot induce him to try it."

And this from A. Legros, of the Broadway Floral Co., Everett, Wash.: "We enclose our canceled check for $14.40 for 120 pounds of Ironite, said check having been endorsed and cashed by Dr. Allen W. Miller. We also enclose Experiment Station report on the value of the article. We were influenced more by the testimonials by Bassett & Washburn, Peter Reinberg and Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago, on their business stationery, than by his 'silver' tongue."

Disclaimed at Chicago.

The Review asked the Chicago growers mentioned what light they could throw on the matter. Here are the answers:

From C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago: "We have no recollection of having written any recommendation of Ironite, or even of having tried or received the article in question. We do not know where the man could have gotten our letterhead and we should very much like to see the letter said to be from this firm."

From Peter Reinberg, Chicago: "Please be advised that we have never used the preparation, Ironite, nor have we given any testimonial to Dr. Allen W. Miller. If any florists had written to us before buying, they would have found we have never heard of the stuff."

From August F. Poehlmann, president of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.: "Beg to advise that both Dr. Allen W. Miller and the preparation, Ironite, are unknown to any of the Poehlmann brothers and that any testimonial which Mr. Miller may exhibit bearing signature of personal members of our firm or corporation is a swindle. I wish you would notify your readers to this effect at once."

RETAIL STORE MANAGEMENT

WHAT THE LEADERS IN THE TRADE ARE DOING

FLOWERS FOR FUNERALS.

Correspondents frequently state that funeral work is the principal activity of the trade for the time being, that the call for funeral flowers absorbs all the stock obtainable. Supplying funeral flowers in fact, constitutes so large a part of the work of florists everywhere that it has become a commonplace to the trade. But none the less the florist should consider it a high privilege to fill orders for funeral flowers, for there is no other occasion on which flowers serve a more useful purpose, no other mission on which flowers can be dispatched for which they so ideally meet requirements. When grief enters the home, words are vain. Flowers alone can express sympathy, flowers can bring a message of cheer. Their beauty brightens the darkest hour, even the hour of grief. Our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," nowhere else applies with such potency as in the case of funeral flowers. The florist may consider the function of professional service which enables him to supply the floral message to the bereaved home one which he should value above all others, as it is also the one for which flowers are most in request. Nowhere are flowers received with more appreciation than at a funeral.

DELAYED TELEGRAPHIC ORDERS.

Among the problems the florist comes face to face with now and then which are more or less perplexing is that of the delayed F. T. D. order for funeral flowers. In the case of a telegraphic order for flowers to be delivered at a funeral which arrives after the funeral, or when the funeral procession is wending its way to the cemetery, the object of the purchaser seemingly has been defeated by the tardy service of the telegraph company and the florist receiving the order often is in a quandary as to what the ethics of the situation require. However, there is a way to meet the situation which will be satisfactory to any reasonable client, a way, in fact, which may bring more gratification to all concerned than if the original intention had been carried out.

The florist may await a convenient season for communicating with the bereaved family on the subject, say the day after the funeral. He may then call the residence by telephone and inform the family of the deceased that he received an order too late to be filled for the funeral, giving the name of the donor, asking if it will be satisfactory to them for him to send the flowers to the cemetery the following Sunday, or if they would prefer that he send them to the home direct, that the relatives may themselves place the floral offering on the grave. This inquiry should be accompanied by a request that the flowers be acknowledged. This plan will be found to solve the difficulty and save the day for the florist receiving the order, as well as for the one forwarding it. It will also satisfy the purchaser of the flowers and those for whom they were sent.

A JANUARY WEDDING.

A wedding which afforded scope for the talents of an Indiana florist was that of Lieutenant Foss Smith and Miss Helen McGreevey, which took place at Huntington, Ind., in January. George Pastor, of that city, had the decorations and a glance at the accompanying illustration will show that some pleasing fancies were developed in the bouquets of the wedding party.

QUICK ACTION; GOOD RESULT.

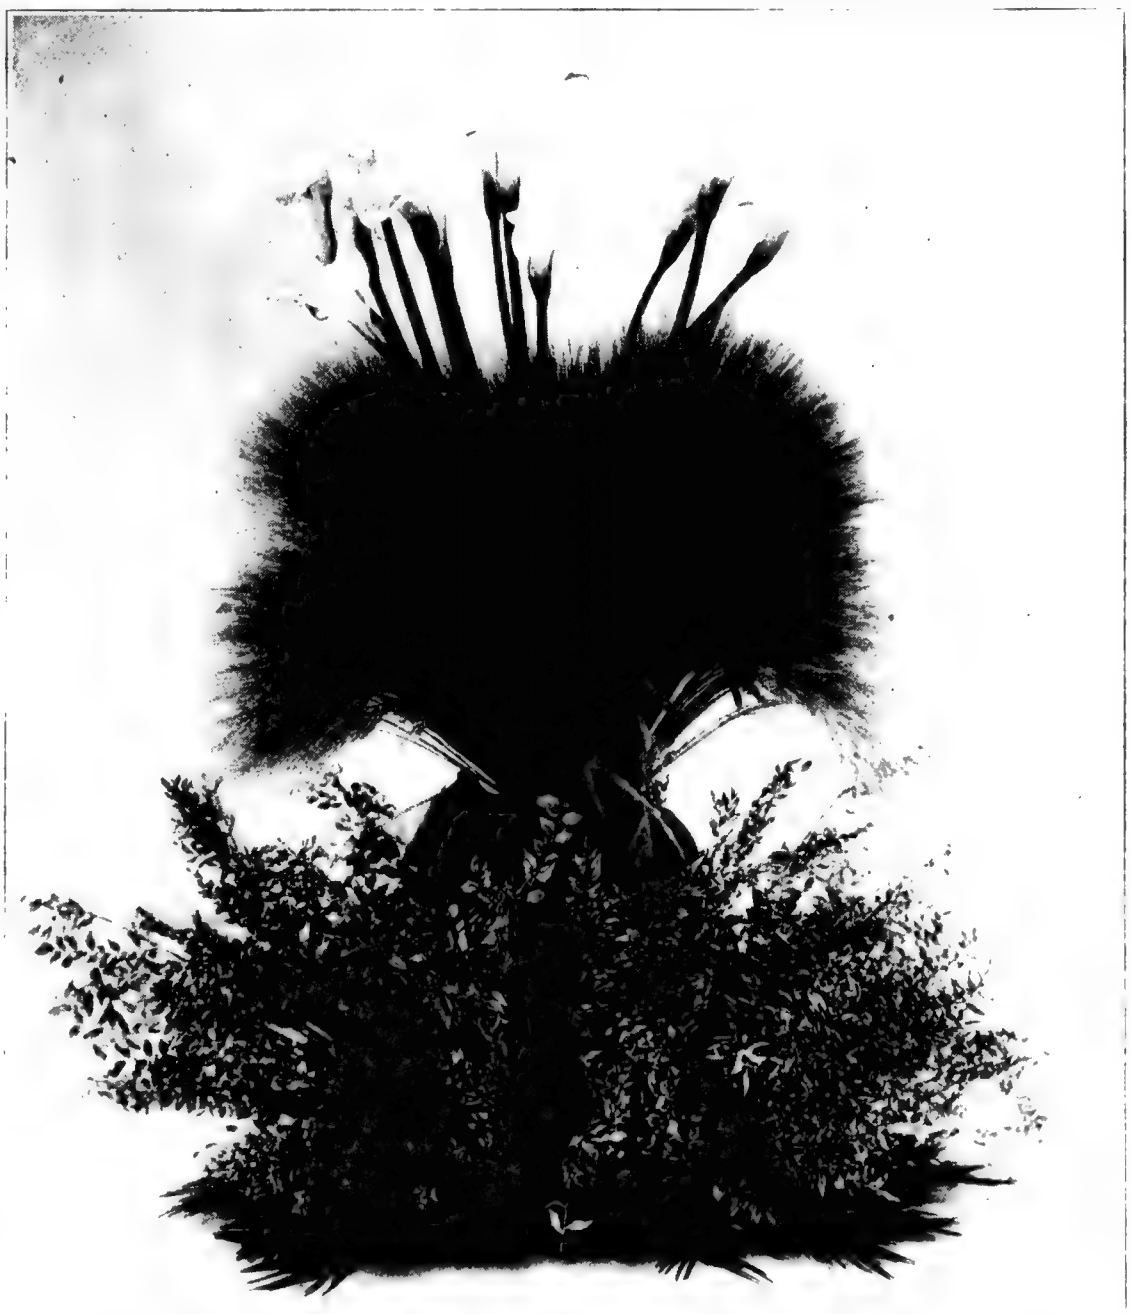
The latest idea in the way of ready-to-ar funeral pieces is a combination of wheat sheaves, silver-tinted green rus- and cycas leaves, as shown in the il- tration on this page. To finish off piece, in the center of the wheat aves is a vase which in this case con- ned calla lilies. The sheaf may be l with a golden bronze bow and kes an inexpensive large funeral e which can be finished up in a minutes for a rush order. It was st shown at the Chicago Florists' lub meeting February 6 by T. E. aters, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., and at- ted much attention.

SAY IT WITH FLOWERS.

S. N. Peck, of Peck's Flower Store, Toledo, O., paused briefly in his work of saying things with flowers—paused just long enough to say a few things in verse. Then he placed the verses in his show window, where they caught the attention of many people who otherwise might have passed without even a glance at the store. "Many persons stopped to read them," says Mr. Peck. But the whole import of what he said in verse was: "Say It with Flowers." He mentioned a few of the numerous occasions for which flowers are the best means of expression—better than more costly gifts, better than poetry or flowery phraseology of any sort. The stanzas that greeted the passers-by from Mr. Peck's window were these:

A BUNCH OF FRESH FLOWERS.

If you have a friend who's discouraged or ill
And a message you'd send that will give him a thrill
Of pleasure, to know that you thought it worth while
Thus your friendship to show and to help him to smile
And to while away some of his dark, lonely hours,
Just send to his home a bunch of fresh flowers.



If you have a friend whom death has bereaved
Of one o'er whose loss he has bitterly grieved,
And you'd lighten his sorrow and soften his grief
And aid him to borrow of you some relief
From mem'ries that burden his grief-laden hours,
Just send to his home a bunch of fresh flowers.

If you have a sweetheart you ardently love
And you wish, by some eloquent token to prove
That your love is eternal, unswerving and true
And you hope she in turn has the same love for you,
You can give her great pleasure and brighten her hours
With something she'll treasure, a bunch of fresh flowers.

If you have a wife who is faithful and true
And has given the best of her life just for you;
If you wish her to know that your love's just the same
As the day you were married and she took your name,
To can bring to her mem'ry those fond, happy hours
By sending out home a bunch of fresh flowers.

TIMELY PUBLICITY.

An example of the adaptation of time-honored fancies to the uses of publicity was afforded in the St. Valentine's day advertising of Harry C. Huesman, Reading, Pa., who last week mailed out hundreds of folders tastefully gotten up, featuring the florists' slogan, "Say It with Flowers," on the front page, at the top of which was the word "Valentines." On the inside of the folder the use of flowers is suggested for valentines, as flowers are "messengers of sentiment." "By sending flowers," it is stated, "grown-ups get the same pleasure children find in valentines." Then follows a special offer for the day and a reference to the F. T. D., about which patrons are invited to inquire. Mr. Huesman gives The Review credit for the inspiration for this little publicity stunt, which owes its success in part to an attractive lay-out and appropriate fanciful designs with which the text is enhanced.

Keep Receptacle Ready; Add Flowers on Short Notice.

TELEGRAPH RATES REDUCED.

The announcement by the Western Union Telegraph Co., Inc., of reduced rates for night messages, effective January 1, is of interest to the retail trade as a factor in developing the Telegraph Delivery department. The night message is a convenient and inexpensive medium for the transaction of F. T. D. business and the new schedule will effect an appreciable saving.

The minimum charge for 10-word messages is 20 cents and the maximum charge for the greatest distance is 50 cents. Additional words are only 1 or 2 cents each, according to distance. A night message of moderate length can be sent a great distance for from 25 to 35 cents.

In the comparatively short time in which the system of ordering flowers by telegram has been in operation, the custom has become popular beyond expectations and the adjustments which facilitate these exchanges will bring increased business to this department.

A UNIQUE NEW FLOWER SHOP.

Among modern flower stores, the new home of the Heepe Co., Akron, O., is an artistic triumph. It combines rare beauty of appointment with convenience of arrangement and in its architectural lines is a decided departure from accepted ideas. It mirrors the ideals of the progressive young men responsible for its creation and is a splendid token of their love for their profession.

Why should not places where flowers—nature's gems—are sold be beautiful? A glance at the accompanying illustrations will show to what extent this idea prevailed in the interior structure of the Heepe store. The principal effect, however, is wrought by the skillful blending of colors, which lends an atmosphere of warmth to the entire room. The mural decorations are finely done scenes from local gardens, executed in natural tones. Show window, display cases and card desks are strikingly ornate and rock-built fountains and cozy trellises festooned with English ivy are cunningly set to relieve the commercial aspect. The floor is of specially selected tile and, in addition to the front entrance, there is a side door of glass opening into the main corridor of the building.

Nor is practical convenience neglected. In the rear of the office is located the workroom, above which, on a mezzanine floor, is a large room designed solely for handling, packing, wrapping and deliveries in rush times.

The ground being higher in the rear of the building, trucks enter from the street level, thus facilitating the getting out of orders and receiving of goods. This part of the store is particularly interesting, as it represents vastly improved methods taught by many years of experience.

A peculiar condition is responsible for the erection of the building which houses this fine store. The phenomenal growth of the Rubber City in the last five years rendered the limited business section greatly inadequate to its needs and many changes became necessary. In order to protect themselves, the Heepe brothers, in company with three other business houses similarly situated, obtained a fine site on the busiest street, near their old location, and built thereon a modern fourteen-story structure, each of the builders taking a store on the main floor and securing a permanent home. OPEN LETTERS from READERS

OH! FOR A STANDARD GRADE.

I look for The Review every Friday and go all through it, taking note of every item. I enjoy it, and the classified ads make it easy to look up anything one needs and one will come pretty near to finding just what one wants. We have read and heard a lot about high prices on cut flowers and I think we ought now to give the plant end of it a little noise. The plant ads mostly all show advances in prices and nearly all read "Cash, please." You send the cash and you take just what some of them care to send and when they get ready. Some of them never even acknowledge receipt of orders they cannot ship at once. Many times I look at stock received and say to myself, "The coal men ain't in it." You cannot grow good stock with puny, weakly plants to start with.

I often think it would be a grand thing to have some kind of examining board to class all stock, its worth, or whether it ought to be dumped. Of course, that would be a hard thing to regulate. All I have to say is that it's a shame the quality of stock some people send out. W. M. Tiplady.

XANTHOSOMA MARSHALLII.

Last year, in answer to an ad in The Review, I purchased ten young plants of Xanthosoma Marshallii, intending to try out this variety. I have been growing these plants in pots and they make beautiful pots for a conservatory while young, but the leaves tend to become too large as they grow older. These plants grow erect and the foliage stands straight out instead of drooping, as do the leaves of Caladium esculentum, producing a picturesque effect. I believe X. Marshallii stands to become as popular in the trade as C. esculentum.

LIKES SPECIAL DELIVERY.

We note a number of articles in The Review on the subject of mailing flowers. For the last three years we have mailed large numbers of small orders of cut flowers and always with a special delivery stamp. We use from fifty to 300 special delivery stamps each week and find much better service in the larger towns and cities than could be obtained by express. In some of the smaller towns the post-offices do not deliver so quickly as we feel they should, but in towns where there are special delivery departments the packages generally are delivered within an hour or two after their arrival.

Since the change of express rates, a great number of people request that their packages be sent by mail, as there is a saving of about 10 cents that way and delivery is more prompt by mail.

All special delivery packages are required to be in the post-office in Cedar Falls half an hour before trains are scheduled to leave, and are put into sacks used only for this class of mail.

Under separate cover I am mailing one of our special delivery cut flower boxes. [The sample was a one-piece corrugated box made by the American Paper Products Co. and arrived in good order.] This box is made in sizes 3x5x18 inches, 3x5x24 inches, 3x5x30 inches and 4x6x30 inches. Larger sizes are not a success in one-piece mailing boxes. We use for this purpose regular corrugated boxes, in sizes 6x6x30 inches, 6x8x30 inches and 6x8x36 inches. We do not attempt to mail larger boxes than these.

For long trips into neighboring states and especially large cities, we find the mail service convenient and the flowers arrive in good condition. All flowers are wrapped carefully in wax paper, with moist paper around the stems, while the boxes are carefully lined with newspapers. The flowers are tied in the boxes, which are wrapped first in newspaper and then in wrapping paper. In this way the contents is protected from both heat and cold.

PANSIES UNDER GLASS.

I have a ground bench in a low house with a night temperature of approximately 50 degrees. I intend to plant pansies to bloom in the spring. If you consider this house suitable for pansies, will you kindly advise me as to the culture of these flowers under glass?

A. S.—Ill.

Pansies do well under glass, but a temperature of 50 degrees at night is too high for them. They will do better with 40 to 42 degrees at night. The same treatment as that given violets is required. Sow the seeds early in July and bench the plants in September. Allow a foot between the rows and ten inches between the plants. You can plant them closer than this, but if you do, towards spring the plants will smother one another. If you want merely a spring and not a winter crop you can keep the house down to freezing, mulching the plants with straw or leaves. Start them up about the middle of February for spring blooming. Or you can carry the plants over in a coldframe and plant them inside at this season. There is an advantage, of course, in having established stock, as compared with freshly planted stock. Use a generous compost containing a good proportion of well rotted manure and be sure to grow them cool and airy. C. W.

BEDDING GERANIUMS.

The winter has been a kindly one for the commercial grower and stocks of all kinds look well. The only disgruntled people are those who closed their entire ranges last fall, fearing another severe winter and an acute fuel shortage. It is now apparent that stocks of many plants are far short of the country's needs. This is true particularly of geraniums. If you have a large stock of geraniums you are to be congratulated. Geraniums will sell at higher prices the coming season than ever before. Take good care of your plants. They grow rapidly now and will need more frequent spacing from now on. Pot along any plants that need it before they become matted and starved and you will be able to find a good many nice tops which will root readily and make nice little plants before spring. Do not make the too common mistake of growing your geraniums warm. They need sun, fresh air in plenty and a dry, buoyant atmosphere.

VERBENAS.

You can sow seed of verbenas as late as a month hence and get nice blooming plants in May, but January or February sowing is preferable. This gives time to pot off the plants. Pinch them and get nice early little plants before the selling season opens. Cover the seeds lightly. I find a light dusting of coal ashes answers perfectly for a covering. You cannot depend on seedlings of verbenas coming true to color and for that reason cuttings taken in the fall and carried over are preferable. These plants are now producing an abundance of cuttings, which root easily. By the way, if you have never tried verbenas in pans for spring flowering, do so. Put half a dozen plants in an 8-inch pan and, by growing them cool, you will have beautiful plants in May. Miss Willmott, pink, is an especially fine sort to grow in pans.

IVY GERANIUMS IN BASKETS.

Basket plants are more popular each year. A good many plants are fine in baskets. Among these are vincas, Asparagus Sprengeri, nephrolepis in variety, fuchsias, browallias, achimenes, petunias and ivy-leaved geraniums, to mention only a few varieties. Give the ivy geraniums a trial and you will find them remarkably effective and floriferous. Line the baskets with moss and use a moderately rich compost and be sure to have a saucer-like cavity on top for water. It is a mistake to fill the baskets level full, as many do. The only way to water such baskets, if ever they become really dry, is to dip them in a tank or tub of water.

SHOW PELARGONIUMS.

As Easter comes late this year, it should be easily possible to flower a goodly batch of such pelargoniums as Easter Greeting, Lucy Becker and Wurtembergia. If these are not already in their flowering pots, lose no time in getting them there. They like a coarse, fibrous loam, with well decayed cow manure added in the proportion of one part in four. If your soil is a heavy one, add some sharp sand to make it more porous. Be sure to pot firmly. After potting water moderately until the plants start into more active growth. Give them a cool, airy house. You cannot force pelargoniums. It would soon ruin them. Keep them close to the glass and, as they are apt to become headquarters for green aphis if there is any in their neighborhood, do not omit a weekly fumigation. Nicely flowered pelargoniums make most acceptable Easter plants.

CHRYSANTHEMUM STOCK.

You will soon want to start propagating mums, especially those you want a larger planting of for another season. So, if your stock is in some out-of-the-way place, move it into a cool, sunny house, well up to the light, so that you can get a crop of nice, succulent cuttings later, when needed. The winter has been so mild that shoots on mums in cool houses are far more advanced than usual. Stock planted in coldframes, mulched with dry leaves and well ventilated, is even showing signs of activity already. But we are not clear of winter yet by a long way and it would be decidedly premature to remove any mulch. Do not do it for some weeks yet. However, keep the stock fumigated and grow it cool, where it gets lots of sun and air.

PLANTS FOR EASTER.

I have some white and purple wisteria in the field that were carried over from last Easter. How soon should these be potted up and taken into the greenhouse to get them in flower for Easter? Information as to how to handle them will be appreciated.

I also have hybrid roses and hydrangeas that were potted up last December and are in a cool house. They are starting up now and I would like to know how to get them to bloom for Easter as well. L. S.—O.

It would have been better to pot up the wisteria last fall. However, I would lift the plants and pot them as soon as possible. They should have from six to eight weeks in a temperature of 50 degrees to flower them on time. But if they were forced last season, as stated, I am afraid they will not flower particularly well. It would have been better to give them rest for another year.

Both the hybrid perpetual roses and the hydrangeas should be placed in a warmer house at once. They should have 50 degrees at night for a time; then, in a couple of weeks, this may be increased to 58 or 60 degrees. The hydrangeas will need rather more time than the roses. C. W.

THE TRADE OUTLOOK FOR 1919

By SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

THE subject assigned to me on this auspicious occasion, namely, "The Outlook for Floriculture in 1919," is a pleasing one to me for more than one reason. In the first place, as you are no doubt aware, floriculture has been my business from boyhood, but it has been more than that to me—it has been my pleasure also, and my spare hours have mostly been spent in the delightful company of my roses and other denizens of my garden and my next best delight to communing with my flowers is to talk about them to my friends.

Another reason why this subject is a pleasing one to me at this time, is because the world has been passing through such a cataclysm the last five years that mankind had but little thought to spare for the beautiful in life. But now that the dark cloud is passing and the sunshine is beginning to glimmer through, once more the outlook is so much improved that one can discourse with a clear conscience on the subject of floriculture. We may even have a spray of apple blossoms on the breakfast table in 1919—a thing taboo during the war. The idea back of the taboo was, of course, an economic one—namely, that the apples were the important thing and that food for the body was more desirable than a feast for the soul.

Future Holds Promise.

Now the indications all along the line in ornamental horticulture—trees, shrubs, flowers, conservatories, landscaping, and the many allied industries appertaining thereto—show signs of awakening and good judges are of opinion that the year will be the greatest ever experienced, and that the pent up soul of man will rebound from long confinement and go a-gardening once more with redoubled energy. Cabbage has been king, but Queen Rosa will now ascend the throne.

In regard to the branch of floriculture in which I am most intimately associated in a business way, that is, the wholesaling of cut flowers, I may say that it has been a long time since we have had more encouraging prospects than the outlook for 1919.

The trade has gone through a great many vicissitudes, labor and coal troubles probably being the florists' most serious troubles. The conditions have been materially changed since the signing of the armistice, and everything is getting back to a better businesslike basis. The cost of doing business, though, remains high, and probably will remain high for some time to come. The only thing that would bring prices down materially would be a panic, and that, of course, we do not want; but we do think the cost of doing business will lessen as the months and years go by, though there will not be any marked decrease for some little time to come, not much if any in 1919.

Soldiers Want Flowers.

With the return of the men who have been in the war, it is bound to bring more business, and more general business, to the florists of this country. These boys will want to be entertained by their relatives and friends, which will mean flowers.

This war condition has brought into the market a new class of buyers; buyers who will soon feel that flowers are not a luxury but a necessity in their homes and that the home is not complete without a few flowers, which give an added touch of joy and pleasure that cannot be brought into the home in any other way, so flowers come to be a necessity and not a luxury.

Some members of the Society of American Florists, in launching the publicity campaign last year, felt it was an inopportune time to conduct such a campaign, but those who had charge of this campaign felt it was one of the best times to get the flower business before the public, and there is no doubt that the campaign has worked a wonderful amount of good and will make for better results as it progresses.

Favors Larger Fund.

The thought for the coming year is to raise, instead of $50,000, $100,000, just double the publicity as planned for this year. No commodity, if advertised judiciously and regularly, but can be helped in the sales of that commodity by this advertising, continually bringing before the public the slogan which the publicity committee is using, "Say It with Flowers," which will be stamped indelibly, I think, in the minds of everyone, like other trade-marks, such as, "Cream of Wheat," "Uneeda Biscuit," and other trade-marks that we are all so familiar with.

"Say It with Flowers" means so much and it is a wonderful slogan for each and every florist to use in his local advertising. This local advertising, coupled with the national advertising, cannot help but benefit every live and up-to-date florist.

Some of our more optimistic friends in the flower business feel that the flower business today is only in its infancy and a few years, with this publicity campaign in good working order, will bring the business up to a point undreamed of.

The publicity campaign is ably managed and there is no question that the money will be judiciously spent, and spent where it will do the most and the best good.

Modern Methods For Future.

This publicity campaign and the business generally getting on a better and more sound business basis, is going to mean that we are going to have not the old-fashioned ways of doing business, not a slipshod way, but up-to-date business methods right straight through, both in the growing, wholesale and retail ends.

Each florist will realize that it is absolutely essential that he keep things up in a businesslike manner in order to live, and stay in the swim.

Another point that is being worked up, which will result in good and be nation-wide in its benefits, is a system of credits. The credit business in the past has been very lax; in fact, anyone who was a good fellow could get credit. The S. A. F., back of the collection and credit committee, in starting a campaign of education along credit lines, will eliminate all the old loose practices which have been used in the past. This habit was to run up a bill on one man, stop buying from him, run a bill on the next one, and then, when they had gone the rounds, start in paying the first one and so on down the line again.

There is no reason why every florist cannot pay his bills promptly when they become due. Other lines of business do it, and it has come to the point where, if the florist wants to live and do a prosperous business, he will have to pay his bills promptly.

Other Changes Necessary.

This is going to make one more careful in the credits he gives, and going to give him an incentive to watch his collections much more closely and not have so much dead wood on his books. Then, too, it will give him an incentive to organize his establishment in a more up-to-date way. In fact, it will be absolutely necessary for him to organize his establishment in such a way that he can keep abreast of the times.

The growers, wholesalers and retailers have just passed through five or six months of excellent business, probably giving them as prosperous a season as they have ever had, particularly for the fall and midwinter months, and

This is a paper read before the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., February 11.

I can see no reason why the spring should not be equally good and with a large increase in the volume of business. Summer business, as usual, probably will not be anything wonderful, but it ought to be fully up to other years; in fact, better. The fall should start in good shape.

I cannot see but that the flower business for 1919 will be a healthy one in every way.

TO THE STATES.

Where Plant Imports Go.

The following table is of interest for several reasons. In the first place, showing the distribution by states of all the plants or nursery stock imported in the last five seasons, it gives a line on the parts of the country in which the trade will be most seriously affected by the approaching quarantine. Secondly, it gives a line on war's effects on the plant imports of the trade in the United States. It is seen that the first war year the plant imports were almost exactly the same as in the last peace year, but the next year they increased more than ten per cent. Then came a rapid decline, the imports in 1916-17 being only a little more than half those of the previous season, while those of last season were only twenty per cent of those of the big year. Here are the figures as shown in the records of the Federal Horticultural Board:

State	1917-18	1916-17	1915-16	1914-15	1913-14

It will be possible to dispense with most of the inspectors after June 1, 1919, when plant imports will practically cease.

CARE OF TULIPS AND IRIS.

I have twelve beds 6x50 feet planted with Darwin tulips and Spanish iris. After the ground was frozen hard enough to drive over, I applied a 2-inch mulch of old manure taken from last spring's hotbeds. Is that a sufficient covering? Should it be removed in the spring, or should the plants be allowed to come up through it?

I also have several beds of Darwin tulips and Spanish iris planted a year ago. The iris is six or eight inches high. A covering of grass grew over this during the latter part of the season. Should this covering be raked off and a mulch of manure applied? I have been afraid of injuring the plants if I covered them after they had made such a growth. The tulips are covered with a growth of green grass, part of it being timothy that came from a mulch applied last year, and part consisting of a coarse grass that has long, strong roots. The beds under the heavy grass are on low ground. I have refrained from removing this covering also, lest the plants be injured. Any information on the subject will be appreciated.

F. M. D.—Mo.

Leave the old manure mulch on your Darwin tulips. They will come up through it all right and you would break many of the plants if you tried to remove it in the spring. Do not worry about the Spanish iris, even if it has made considerable growth. Iris is a hardy plant. I have had iris exposed to 20 degrees below zero unmulched and no harm was done. You can scarcely remove the grass from your iris without damaging the plants. In a much colder state than yours, I merely give a light mulch of leaves or strawy manure and this proves ample protection, always provided that the roots are in well drained land. It is dampness at the roots and not cold that kills out this useful iris.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

EDWARD REID.

ON the day when the new Congress meets, or, to be exact, the fourth day of March, Edward Reid will celebrate the silver anniversay of his start in business. Mr. Reid ascribes his success to two things—confidence and no capital: The confidence of his friends who sent him their flowers to sell; the lack of capital that made him extremely careful where he placed those flowers. Mr. Reid has always practiced conservatism, believing that it is best to keep his business within his grasp rather than to extend it beyond his personal supervision. He has impressed his strong personality on the commission trade. For twenty-five years he has sent weekly statements and fortnightly checks. He introduced in Philadelphia the system of attaching jeweler's tags with numbers to the bunches of flowers and returning the proceeds of that identical lot, in place of the old plan of pooling the stock and returning pro rata.

Calumet, Mich.—The floral department at the Harper & Thomas establishment at Fifth and Portland street has been purchased by Henry Kettenbell, of Lake Linden, the change having become effective the second week in January.

ROSES

TO FLOWER GRUSS AN TEPLITZ.

Two years ago I planted a bed of Gruss an Teplitz roses outside. They were 2-year-old California-grown stock. They send up canes five to six feet high that come blind. The only roses produced are a few on the old wood at the base of the plant. They are planted in moderately rich clay soil and protected with a straw mulch in winter. I have given them several mulchings of cow manure and bone meal. Can anything be done to make them bloom? The location seems to be ideal for roses, with clay soil, good drainage and plenty of sun. D. R.—Ky.

This rose is such a remarkably free bloomer that I am inclined to think that the vigorous 5-foot or 6-foot shoots you have which fail to bloom are merely suckers from the stocks on which the plants are worked. Carefully note whether these shoots are quite prickly and carry seven instead of five petioles on their leaves. If they are as described, you probably have a crop of Manetti or briar shoots, from below the soil, which will soon cripple and destroy your roses. All such shoots should be carefully pulled or cut off as close as possible to the union of stock and rose.

ROSES IN CARNATION HOUSE.

I would like to know if I could have success growing roses and carnations in the same house. Is there any particular variety of rose that would come nearer doing well in a carnation temperature than others? I have one house 32x100, part of which I would like to devote to roses. I think I can keep one side of it warmer than the other. Would Red Radiance be a good rose to grow under such conditions? I have heard it said that this was an easy rose to grow. I do not want to try any variety that has not proved fairly successful under similar conditions, as I have no room for experiments. D. M.—Ore.

Roses need a higher temperature than carnations, but you could do the two fairly well together in a minimum temperature of 54 or 55 degrees. In this house I would not try any of the Enchantress family, but Matchless, Pink Delight, Ward, Beacon, Belle Washburn and Benora are suggested as good carnations. Among roses you would do much better with Killarney and White Killarney than Radiance and the Killarneys would prove much more profitable. The temperatures given are a trifle warm for carnations and a little cool for roses, but will probably give you fairly good returns with each.

CALIFORNIA-GROWN KAISERIN.

We contemplate planting a house to Kaiserin in February and notice 2-year-old field-grown plants offered by a firm in California. Do you know of any reason why California stock would not do well here? A. N. K.—Minn.

While I have had no experience with California-grown roses under glass, I see no reason why well ripened field-grown Kaiserin should not succeed with you. Perhaps some other readers who have tried them could give their experience. C. W.

THE ILLINOIS MEETING.

President W. J. Keimel and Secretary J. F. Ammann send the following notice:

"The thirteenth annual convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held March 11 and 12 in the Floricultural building at the University of Illinois, Urbana, the opening session on Tuesday, at 2:30 p. m., followed by another at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday, the second day, will be devoted to conferences and inspection of the experimental greenhouses.

"You owe yourself as well as the other fellow this little treat of fellowship. The program will be interesting and instructive. Cost of Production, Publicity, Fertilizers, Insecticides and many other important topics will be discussed.

"If you have anything new in flowers or ideas bring them along. Be sure and come."

CAMELLIAS COMING BACK.

In a recent issue of The Review I notice the statement that camellias are coming back into favor. I do not find any advertisement of them. Where can I get them? T. S. W. G.—Ark.

You can obtain camellias from such firms as Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., and others. Unfortunately, the coming embargo on importations of all plants with soil at their roots will shut out camellias and we are now practically dependent on Europe for our camellias. Probably in time some concerns here will propagate this charming old-time favorite, but for some time I am afraid prices on this and other hard-wooded plants will be high.

Ithaca, N. Y.—The Bool Floral Co. anticipates the largest spring trade in its long experience. Arthur Bool has charge of the houses and keeps things up to a high standard to supply the store, which is much frequented by the Cornellians.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

CUCUMBER QUERIES.

I would like to have some advice about the growing of cucumbers under glass for spring planting. Is it best to water them in the morning or afternoon? What is the reason that cucumbers that are just setting turn yellow and fall off? What will destroy cellar bugs that crawl up the vines and eat the fruit? Is tobacco fumigation harmful to the crop? Last but not least, I would like to have information about the right way to prune the vines.
J. M. S.—Wis.

Morning is the time to water cucumbers.

Fruits which have not been properly fertilized will fall off. Bees are the best fertilizing agent and many growers keep hives in their houses for this purpose. Hand pollination can be done with a bunch of cotton wool, a rabbit's tail or a camel's-hair brush. Collect the pollen from the flowers when they are dry and touch the pistil of the female flowers, which carry the fruit, with it. Tapping the vines about midday helps to pollinate the flowers. All fertilizing is best done during the middle of the day and when the skies are clear. It is also more effective when some ventilation is given.

Cellar or sow bugs can be destroyed by mixing up a sweet poisoned mash of shorts, Paris green and molasses. Also dusting the surface soil with tobacco dust or Hammond's Slug Shot prove effective. Apply the dust around the haunts of the pests.

Tobacco fumigation will not harm cucumbers if properly done. I would not advise the use of tobacco stems, but nicotine papers or tobacco dust will be effective.

If your plants are trained upright, allow eighteen inches between the plants. Do not pinch the main shoot until it reaches above the first wire or string. After this, pinch the tips out of all side-shoots, or laterals, after they have produced one or two flowers. If you grow plants in arbors or on an A-shaped trellis, it is necessary to allow the leader to grow a little longer before pinching. After it is grown long enough, pinch as in the case of upright plants. It sometimes is necessary to remove the wood. If the shoots become too crowded, remove the weakest. C. W.

IN KHAKI AND BLUE

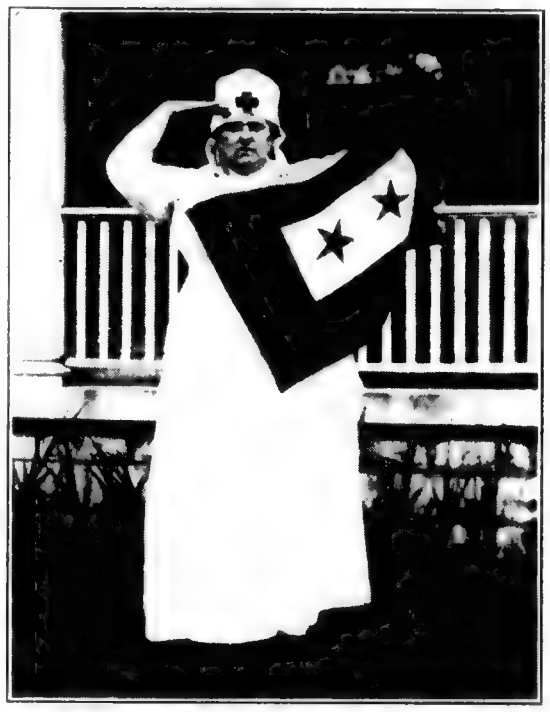
FORMING NEW ARMY.

Joy Attends Discharge.

There is a great new army being formed. Into it are being drafted not only those who wore the olive drab and the navy blue of Uncle Sam's fighting men, but the members of their families as well. It is called "The Army of Joy," and to its personnel are added several new recruits every time a soldier is handed the piece of paper which means he is no longer a warrior, but a civilian.

Sons, brothers and husbands of florists, not to mention sweethearts, are reappearing in the homes of which they dreamed so fondly in camp and trench, and their reappearance invariably brings cheer and happiness.

A great many florist-soldiers are already back in the harness, working among their flowers and plants. Some they now consider themselves most unfortunate, since there is "nothing doing" on the firing line—are still in France, watching the wily Hun and impatiently awaiting the signing of the peace treaty; and others are performing the routine tasks of camp and cantonment in this country.



It will not be long, however, we are told, before every American soldier will be back in the United States and returned to his pre-war status. The soldiers and their relatives vote unanimously in favor of speeding up the necessary process.

"Home Again."

After giving almost a year's service to his country, Howard J. Hook is "home again" and on the job as auditor of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. While he by no means regrets the break in his business career, he shows no hesitancy in saying that he is glad to doff the service uniform for civilian attire.

Howard J. Hook.

Mrs. N. O. Selby.

Mr. Hook, who received honorable discharge from the service at Camp Meade, Md., gained the rank of sergeant first class. He enlisted March 12, 1918, was in the Ordnance Corps, and was stationed at Baltimore, Md.

Two Sons at the Front.

Mrs. N. O. Selby, of Selby the Florist, Middletown, O., has just cause to be proud of the service flag she is shown holding in the accompanying illustration. Mrs. Selby has two sons at the front in France, or rather did have before one of them, Gordon N. Selby, one of the U. S. marines, was wounded in battle July 19. The other son, Allen W. Selby, is with the 147th Ambulance Corps. Mrs. Selby's father, Henry Behrens, Sr., was in the florists' business in Middletown sixty-eight years previous to 1912, when the present owners succeeded him and have continued the business with much success. Mr. Behrens died two years ago.

A Triumphal March.

The return of Thomas Iliffe, the son of Daniel Iliffe, the greenhouse builder, of South Weymouth, Mass., from war service overseas was the occasion of a rousing welcome from his fellow townsmen. Mr. Iliffe was in the aviation department of the A. E. F. and returned on the battleship Connecticut. He was met at the train and escorted to his home by an enthusiastic delegation.

One of the "Eyes of the Army."

None of the amazing things this war developed is more interesting than the work of the army aviators, the men who are the "eyes of the army." This branch of the service calls for the best of the young men who have joined the colors. One of the members of our trade who is connected with this service is Joseph L. Barnitt, Jr., for seven years before he enlisted December 11, last, a member of the force of Alex. McConnell, New York. He is a member of the 213th Aero Squadron, now in France. The young man was aboard the transport Tuscania when it was sunk. He was rescued and a few days later sent his father, Joseph L. Barnitt, also a member of the McConnell staff, a cablegram saying: "Arrived safely. Well." Later he was sent to France.

Moline Grower Returns.

Reuben Goranson has received honorable discharge from the service and is again at work at the range of Julius Staack & Sons, Moline, Ill. He was stationed at Vancouver Barracks, Vancouver, Wash.

Rhode Islanders Return.

Among recruits formerly connected with the trade who are returning to their homes in the towns of Rhode Island are Lieutenant Amasa F. Williston, of Little Compton, who has just received his discharge, and Jack Johnston, son of Edward Johnston, of Providence. Young Mr. Johnston has just arrived at Newport News, after completing his fifth round trip across the ocean in the naval transport service. Ralph Kinder, son of Samuel Kinder, of Bristol, has received his discharge and is at home.

Geneva, N. Y.—W. & T. Cass, relating their experience of a total loss on rooted cuttings of geraniums shipped by express, concluded that the parcel post is the best means of shipment, even if smaller and more numerous packages are necessary. They are not alone in this experience. They have a fine general stock and have had a good season, most favorable for planting in the nursery, which constitutes an important department of their flourishing business.

BUCKEYE BULL'S-EYES

A RARE OPPORTUNITY.

At the rate that the national advertising is creating potential flower buyers, the growing section will have to get busy to supply the goods. True, we are just recovering from a serious interruption in the growing end, but during this time demand was being created apace by the unprecedented use of printers' ink, making it imperative that production be speeded up. It matters little what kind of flowers is sent to market; they meet with a ready sale at prices making their production profitable. For the first time in the history of the business, nothing is going into the loss column. Better methods of merchandising are moving the stock and they are destined effectively to solve the problem of the glutted market.

Perhaps there never existed a greater incentive for embarking in the business of producing plants and flowers than the present offers. The labor situation has returned to normal and the price of glass, boilers, structural steel and other materials has descended to a level permitting extensive use. The crying need of practically every wholesaler in the land is stock, the question of sale, temporarily, at least, occupying a secondary place. Of the items of bedding and ornamental plants there are not half enough in course of preparation to take care of spring requirements. The situation in greens is one approaching actual famine, with no immediate relief in sight. The plants from foreign countries to be excluded, or substitutes, must be produced at home. The war proved that the florists' business possesses stability. These and many other factors are potential indications of the existence of excellent opportunities for making money by producing flowers.

AN APPRECIATION.

The writer had heard much of that gifted Philadelphian, Charles H. Grakelow, and looked forward with pleasure to hearing him speak at the recent meeting of carnation men in the Sixth City. It was at the banquet, when Toastmaster Knoble, with a few appropriate remarks, introduced the speaker, that a young man arose in his seat at the side of the spacious ballroom and, by his first accents, commanded the undivided attention of his audience and demonstrated that he was a master of the spoken word. For fifteen minutes his auditors drank from the springs of his wonderful eloquence as he treated them successively with scintillating flashes of wit and lofty flights of oratorical imagery. His apostrophe to flowers was a prose poem and his glowing tribute to the enterprise of the local Florists' Club was sufficient to inspire every one of its members with nobler purposes and greater aims. Although he spoke so briefly, his words were enough to betoken the man as talented and able, an ornament and a credit to his profession.

The commercial flower business has been advanced to its present enviable status largely through the untiring efforts of men who were graduates of the potting shed; supplementing which, the idealism and vision of men of the type of Charles H. Grakelow are required, that its proper ultimate salvation be achieved. The influence of such men is dynamic, in that it is impossible to meet them without feeling benefited by the experience and spurred to greater action. May their tribe increase. May their example serve to elevate the florist from the pessimism of the past to a better conception of the true nobility of his calling.

MILLERS ON MUM STOCK.

Will you please publish an effective remedy for millers which are giving me trouble on the mum stock plants and also on the snapdragons? I have used tobacco smoke, Paris green and strong sulphur on the steam lines, also Nico-fume, regularly, but have not been able to get rid of them so far. The little worms breed by the thousand, when there seem to be only a few of the millers. Information will be appreciated.

W. S. L.—Ill.

You say you have used tobacco dust and Paris green, so the only other proposition seems to be to use cyanide. Instructions for using cyanide have been given repeatedly in these columns. Hand-picking is usually the best method and the one most generally adopted, but an exceedingly light solution of Paris green, applied through a fine spray to the under side of the leaves where the worms feed, is, as a rule, effective. There may seem to be only a few millers, but if these few are caught in midwinter, even at the expenditure of time and trouble, it is time well spent, since, as you state, they breed by the thousand.

If cyanide is not successful, we know of nothing else but hand-picking of every part carefully.

C. H. T.

MILLEPEDES IN GREENHOUSES.

I am sending a few samples of a worm that has infested my greenhouse, which I cannot get rid of. It multiplies rapidly and destroys the plants. Will you please tell me what will destroy it?

J. T. W.—Mich.

Tobacco dust or Hammond's Slug Shot dusted over the benches, as well as between them, will clear out these pests as effectively as anything I have tried.

Beacon, N. Y.—As one enters the city of Beacon, from ferry or railroad station, the first sight that meets the eye is the new sign on the facade of the building of Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, at Hammond's corner. The building has been remodeled and new machinery of the dustless type has been installed, with a capacity of ten tons daily. This equipment involves the operation of two new electric power motors.

BUCKEYE BRIEFS

Lima, O.—Eggert N. Zetlitz notes a slight falling off in funeral work following the long series of "flu" victims. Many fine floral designs were made for the obsequies of a prominent citizen.

Newark, O.—C. S. Osborn & Son find their seed business steadily increasing, although it has been in existence only ten years. Theirs is a most attractive store, the front of colonial design, seldom seen outside of New England.

Dover, O.—C. Betscher says business has been far ahead of expectations; October, 300 per cent; November, 260 per cent; December, 300 per cent, and January will run nearly 300 per cent above normal years, in local business.

Portsmouth, O.—Articles of incorporation were filed January 20 by the Herms Floral Co., with capital stock scheduled at $20,000. Incorporators were named as follows: Catherine M. Herms, Ida M. Herms, Clara L. Herms, Mary E. Herms and George Albert Herms.

Akron, O.—Hammerschmidt & Clark are well pleased with their venture in taking over the store formerly occupied by the Gilbo Floral Co. They draw upon the greenhouses at Medina, O., and outside sources, and the combination works well. The stock at Medina is in fine shape.

Sebring, O.—A. J. Eden met with a serious accident January 11, while attempting to look after his fires. An explosion of gas which had collected at the rear of the furnace threw him backward into the coal pit and burned his face and arms.

Painesville, O.—Thomas Murphy, who has worked in the trade for thirty years, fourteen of them with Storrs & Harrison Co., started in business here for himself in 1917, growing perennials, pansies and other specialties. He has now worked up considerable stock and is going into the wholesale end of the business.

Sidney, O.—Henry Ehrhard took up the growing of lettuce in place of closing part of his houses last winter and found it so profitable that he is continuing along the same lines this winter, growing four crops in the season, with a steady market at 25 cents per pound at retail and 17 cents per pound at wholesale. At no time has the market been dull. The same soil is used right along, with cow manure or other fertilizer mixed in when planting afresh. Dull weather affects the plants, producing mildew, which may be overcome by dusting with a sulphurous fungicide. The brighter the weather the stronger the crop.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market is in better shape than for some time. That is, supplies are more ample, except in the case of roses. Roses continue scarce, but those that arrive are of exceptional quality and, owing to the shortage, they clean up quickly. Carnations, while not any too plentiful, are equal to requirements and fine ones are to be had. While there is still complaint about sweet pea buds dropping, these flowers are of fine quality and the supply is ample. Freesias, Paper Whites and all miscellaneous flowers are in fair supply. Neither callas nor Easter lilies are to be had. The quality of all lines of stock this winter has been above the average, the demand holds good and the wholesalers clean up each day.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held February 10. This meeting was to have been devoted to framing a protest against the recent order of the Federal Horticultural Board prohibiting the importation of plants from Europe. As a meeting of protest I am afraid it was a dismal failure.

We did not thoroughly understand the law, so we invited men on both sides of the question to be present and we find there is something to be said for the measure which seems such a detriment to the florists of this country.

James Clark, of the Henry A. Dreer Co., ably presented the argument for the repeal of the law and he made points that were convincing. Dr. Kellum, of the Federal Horticultural Board, told the members why the bill had been passed. He said that if the florists of this country could show the board that the order was too drastic, they would find every member open to conviction; that there was still a chance for modification.

Hon. J. Charles Linthicum said the members of Congress knew absolutely nothing about the matter and when letters of protest reached them there was nothing to do but refer to the agricultural department for light on the subject. Mr. Linthicum's advice was for the national association to appoint a committee of its most intelligent members to take the matter up with the Secretary of Agriculture. He said Mr. Houston was a fair man and if this committee would show him that the bill was too drastic, he doubtless would grant the relief they sought. He also spoke of how congested the files of Congress were at this time, with only three weeks of the present session left. He said there was no time to lose.

Hon. Carville D. Benson spoke along the same lines.

Prof. Thomas B. Symons, of the Maryland State Agricultural College, took the floor and his argument was all in favor of the bill. He told of how on numerous occasions he had been obliged in his professional capacity to inspect great masses of Holland stock of all kinds in the warerooms of Patterson & Gahan, the auctioneers; of how this stock was advertised in the daily papers and sold to the general public for what it would bring, always at prices that the florists could not compete with. He brought out the fact that other interests had suffered more than the florists since the war started and said he had too much faith in the florists to believe that they would "lay down" because this law had been put on the statute books. Like every other American industry, they would soon find something to take the place of those things which the law prohibits entering the country. Prof. Corry, Isaac H. Moss and James Hamilton also spoke.

Attendance at the club has been falling off for some time. This, strange as it may seem, is due entirely to war conditions. The world is going through a course of reconstruction and the club will have to do the same.

The late Robert J. Halliday was the father of the club; in fact, the club was one of his hobbies. The same might be said of his son Robert. Robert L. Graham, in offering the name of Robert Halliday as the man best able to rehabilitate the club and put new life into it, referred to the strenuous work Mr. Halliday had done to get the national convention for Baltimore some years ago and his more strenuous work in making it the success it proved to be. Mr. Halliday is a man who never tires. With him for president, the club should come into its own again in a short time.

A complete list of the officers nominated is: President, Robert Halliday; vice-president, John Nuth; financial secretary, Harry W. Wagner; treasurer, Albert Fiedler; librarian, C. M. Wagner; secretary, Robert Tate Paterson.

In declining to stand for reëlection, Fred Burger said that for nineteen years he had been handling the club's finances and he felt that the time had come when he should be relieved of this burden and a younger man elected. There is no organization in the country whose finances have been watched over with more zealous care than the Baltimore Florists' Club and we feel that we have found a worthy successor to Mr. Burger in Albert Fiedler. A vote of thanks was extended Mr. Burger for his untiring efforts on behalf of the club during his many years of service.

Various Notes.

The new wholesale house of George J. Muhly will open for business February 24, 1919. Mr. Muhly will carry a full line of greens. His florists' supply lines will be up to the minute in every respect and he says that when the time comes he will be there with one of the best lines of cut flowers to be had.

There never was a more opportune time to launch a new business than the present. The only thing necessary is to have good stock in cut flowers. The retailers are obliged to look for stock. It is no longer a question of the commission men offering large batches of stock at special prices. Mr. Muhly is a hustler and is optimistic over the outlook. There is no good reason why this young man should not go "over the top." Tate.

BUTTE, MONT.

Flowers are still scarce and there is plenty of funeral work to clean up all stock that comes to the market. Spring flowers are commencing to appear and they are of excellent quality for the first cut.

Victor Siegel, grower at the Columbia Gardens, forced a fine lot of red tulips and jonquils for St. Valentine's day. They found a ready market. Business is excellent with this concern.

Fred Gust, manager of the Butte Floral Co., reports business good.

The death of Charles Adams, rose grower for the Butte Floral Co., is reported in the obituary column of this issue. A. C. W.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business continues good and everything that comes into the market clears readily. More stock could be sold if it were available. Prices are good. Shipping business is excellent.

The cut of roses coming into the market is short of requirements. All carnations that come into the wholesale houses sell quickly. Easter lilies are in fair supply and find a good market. Rubrum lilies and callas may be had. Tulips, both double and single, jonquils, daffodils, Dutch hyacinths, Paper White narcissi and freesia all find a ready sale. Sweet peas are plentiful and sell well. Snapdragon also sells well. Violets and orchids met with an excellent demand for St. Valentine's day. Among other offerings are calendulas, mignonette, baby primroses and wallflowers. Greens are in fair supply.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell had an excellent lot of daffodils throughout the week. They cleaned up quickly from day to day.

The William Murphy Co. has been getting in carnations from consignors at Delhi that are unusually good for the season.

Among recent visitors were J. T. Herdegen, Aurora, Ind.; Charles McKellar, Chicago, Ill., and Carl L. Roethke, Saginaw, Mich. C. H. H.

PIKES PEAK, COLO.

An example of worth-while publicity is the full-page ad the Colorado Springs Evening Telegraph recently published for the Pikes Peak Floral Co. It was embellished with cuts showing a view of the range of this concern, which comprises 130,000 feet of glass; a halftone of the office and salesroom adjoining and glimpses of the interiors of the retail store and the wholesale packing department. This business was founded on a small scale by the late William Henry Evans in 1901 and during the space of eighteen years it has grown to its present size. The first location was on East Pikes Peak avenue. Two years after the store was removed to its present site on North Tejon street. Since the death of the founder, his widow, Mrs. Augusta B. Evans, has conducted the business, which she has maintained at the high standard established from its inception. J. E. Johnson is superintendent of the range and William E. Crump secretary and sales manager.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Harris & Lever report business increasing right along, a case of young blood pushing ahead, with thoroughly up-to-date methods.

Detroit, Mich.—Peter F. Reuss & Co., successors to Bruno Schroeter, deceased, report an excellent trade in spite of the increase in prices of flowers. Mr. Reuss was with Mr. Schroeter for twenty years. His associates in business are Philip Breitmeyer and Peter J. Monaghan.

OMAHA, NEB.

The Market.

Stock has been more plentiful during the last week. Everyone is cutting a good many bulbous flowers, such as jonquils, hyacinths and tulips. Paper Whites are gone, but their place is easily filled with other spring flowers. Carnations are still selling at 6 cents. Roses run from 4 cents to 30 cents, jonquils and daffodils are 8 cents and tulips bring 4 cents to 8 cents.

One of the heaviest snow storms of the season occurred in central Nebraska the other day, many trains being snowbound. In Lincoln, North Platte and Hastings the snow drifted to a height of eight to ten feet in different places. As it was a heavy, wet snow, it was almost impossible for snowplows to get through. Passengers on the trains en route to Denver and other places were fed from nearby farm houses, wherever the train happened to be stalled. All shipments of flowers to the west were delayed. The roads are now open and trains are running on schedule time.

The florists of this section enjoyed one of the busiest St. Valentine's days in many years. It was hard to get around with deliveries, too, on account of the blizzard that struck Omaha and vicinity that day. The city was covered with sleet and snow and it rained or snowed practically all day February 14. However, everyone got his deliveries out in plenty of time. Even if it was hard going, there was little complaint of packages being received late.

Various Notes.

The window of Hess & Swoboda was a pretty sight St. Valentine's day. In fact, it is so at all times, for Mr. Hess makes it a point to keep the latest stock in flowers on display.

Lewis Henderson, although not in good health, is always at the store at Sixteenth and Harney streets.

One of the largest table decorations during the year was executed for the Rotary Club banquet by L. Rogers. There were ninety tables to decorate and, as everyone knows, the Rotary does not do things halfway.

C. G. Hargadine, Florence, Neb., is cutting some splendid sweet peas. While he has not had many years' experience in the florists' business, he certainly is producing excellent stock.

F. R. S.

W. Faulkner reports a record business throughout the month of January, which the fine weather helped by bringing on the greenhouse stock. S. R. Faulkner is recovering from an attack of appendicitis.

ROME, N. Y.

Ivar Ringdahl, who has purchased the range of E. J. Byam, has had a varied vocational experience gained in different countries. After an apprenticeship of two years in Sweden, his native country, he entered the employ of the Royal Gardens, near Stockholm. His talents in designing won early recognition there and he was appointed to do the decorating for the present queen of Sweden at the palace in Stockholm. Later he was connected with two English concerns, Sander & Son, St. Albans, England, with whom he spent a year, and the Islington Nurseries, in the environs of London, for two years. He embarked for America in the year 1904 and his first employment in the United States was with John Scott, at Flatbush, L. I. He was connected also with the ranges of Louis Krimmel, Brooklyn, and Willman Kelloy, Astoria, L. I.

In 1906 he started to work for Thomas Roland, at Nahant, Mass., and since 1907 he has been in charge of the growing, selling and designing for this establishment, specializing in fancy stock of every description.

The Byam range has catered principally to the retail trade, but Mr. Ringdahl intends to develop a wholesale trade in pot plants, as well as continuing the business of his predecessor.

LANCASTER, PA.

B. F. Barr & Co. note a highly satisfactory condition in each department of their business. The floral end, as well as the landscape and nursery branch, has exceeded the most sanguine expectations of Mr. Barr, who predicts that the coming season will be one of the best planting seasons on record in trees and shrubs, with a strong demand from both professionals and amateurs. If the embargo goes into effect it will create a shortage and stimulate planting to supply the demand, at prices that will advance accordingly.

Rudolf Nagel, who is a successful grower of sweet peas, has a beautiful white form of Yarrawa, with crimped petals. It is his pride and the envy of the several growers who have seen it. Being a shy seeder, it will be scarce for some time.

Among the many notable things at the range of H. K. Rohrer is a batch of myosotis in 3-inch pots, shapely plants, in bloom for St. Valentine's day. Primula malacoides is here in perfect form and of the finest strain. Calla lilies, grown in 5-inch pots, plunged in a bed of rich soil, are elegant stock. Harry Rohrer says that by confining the roots better results are obtained. A fine lot of calceolarias, with tobacco stems distributed between the rows, cinerarias and, what is now a rarity, a big batch of geraniums for the retail trade are other items. Sweet Peas Mrs. Skach and Louisa Gude are popular. Carnations Matchless and Enchantress Supreme are grown exclusively and are found to be money-makers indeed this season.

Paul Murphy writes his former employer, B. F. Barr, from "over there" and from the tone of his letters it would seem four walls will not hold him, after his experience as a soldier. So he probably will be put on the road selling nursery stock and giving advice on landscape work, for which Mr. Barr believes him well fitted, after his foreign service.

Albert M. Herr, speaking of the large demand and small supply of bedding plants, geraniums especially, observed that for shipping purposes calloused cuttings are preferable to rooted stock, for the reason that many roots damp off and the plant makes new ones slowly, whereas a calloused stem can be put in a 2-inch pot and will make a quicker root action. Once the truth of this is made clear, buyers appreciate it.

Anderson, S. C.—Mrs. W. W. Chisholm has sold the business known as the Anderson Floral Co.

Terrell, Tex.—C. R. Brewer has purchased the business of Mrs. W. D. Fletcher and will continue it under the name of the Terrell Floral Co.

Wilmington, N. C.—L. A. Koeth has bought the florists' business of Mrs. L. P. Fowler, which he will operate under the name of the Fifth Avenue Florist.

Memphis, Tenn.—A charter issued to Johnson Bros., wholesale florists, of Shelby county, named incorporators as follows: William C. Johnson, O. C. Johnson, Francis B. Johnson, L. S. Rankin and H. H. Hannoll. Capital stock was stated at $20,000.

Greenville, Miss.—The Idle Hour Floral Co. has outgrown its present location and will be removed to lands purchased of the Park Land Co., on which a range of modern houses will be built. L. A. Waas, a member of the firm, has conducted the growing end of the business with signal success, while Mrs. Craft has looked after the retail branch in a capable manner.

Tuskaloosa, Ala.—J. Carroll Meaney has started in the florists' business here.

Ada, Okla.—W. E. Pitt is planning to build another greenhouse, 27x100 feet, the contract having been placed with the John C. Moninger Co. This is the third new house to be added to his range of glass within the year. He will plant 10,000 carnations next season.

Houston, Tex.—The Houston Horticultural Society elected officers January 6 at a meeting at the Brazos Greenhouses, as follows: President, R. G. Hewitt; vice-president, A. S. Koehle; treasurer, C. E. Hogans; secretary, J. M. Laughlin; board of directors, C. L. Brock and E. Schwenke.

Brownwood, Tex.—Hans Schroeder, who some months ago sold his interest in the Schroeder Floral Co., of Temple and Waco, Tex., which he founded, has bought the business of Mrs. C. L. Steffens here, which he is conducting under the name of the Brownwood Floral Co. He intends to enlarge the establishment as soon as prices of building material become more nearly normal. Mrs. Steffens retired from business on account of the state of her health.

OBITUARY

Nathan S. Wax.

Boston lost its oldest lady florist January 30 when Mrs. E. M. Gill passed away and when the call came to sturdy Nathan S. Wax, February 2, the oldest male florist in the city, if not in the country, passed away. Mr. Wax was born in Germany, but came to America sixty years ago. He was always interested in flowers and continued in the florists' business in Boston nearly forty years, having stores successively on Park street near the present site of Zinn's store, on Winter street, in the quarters now occupied by Silverman, and at 143 Tremont street. He retired from active business fifteen years ago, since which time his sons, Martin and Samuel, have conducted a successful business under the name of Wax Bros.

A contributing cause toward the death of Mr. Wax was grief occasioned by the report of the recent death of his daughter, Mme. Flora Welldon, a noted opera singer, who had devoted herself to war work in France during the whole period of the war. Mr. Wax is survived by his wife, one daughter and four sons.

Funeral services were held at the chapel of the Temple Ohabei Shalon, East Boston, February 5. A handsome blanket of roses and sweet peas from the employees of Wax Bros. covered the casket, and there were many beautiful floral designs, including those from such prominent members of the trade as Thomas Roland, Welch Bros. Co., H. L. Cameron and others. Mr. Wax remained hale and hearty until a short time before his death. He will be missed by many friends. W. N. C.

Nathan Jackson Burt.

Many memories cluster around the name of Nathan Jackson Burt, veteran seedsman of Burlington, Ia., who passed away in that city recently, after a residence there of more than half a century, during which he had been prominently identified with the business, social and civic life of the community. Mr. Burt's father established the seed business which later became known as N. J. Burt & Co., in which the son was interested from the time of reaching his majority and of which he became sole owner by purchase. The first site of this store was on Front street, where for thirty years a steadily expanding business was conducted. It was in 1898 that removal was made to the Hawk Eye building, where this concern remained for eight years, before settling in its present location on North Main street. The fiftieth anniversary of this business, which is known from Canada to Mexico, was celebrated last year and was the occasion of many felicitations from the friends of a lifetime, who rejoiced with its proprietor in the prosperity which had brought this Burlington house into nation-wide prominence.

Mr. Burt was a charter member of Friendship Lodge No. 11, Knights of Pythias, and had held all the offices in the Grand Lodge of Iowa of this order. He was one of the oldest members of the Crystal Lake Hunting and Fishing Club, fishing being his favorite recreation. He was a member also of the Baptist church, having united with a church of this denomination first in St. Paul, Minn., in the pioneer days, when, in his early youth, the family home was there. It was in 1868, after he had completed a course of study in an academy in St. Paul, that the Burts came down the Mississippi river to Burlington, where the remainder of his long life was spent.

Besides his wife, Mr. Burt is survived by his daughter, Mrs. William S. Brophy, and three grandchildren.

Though his illness had been of some years' duration, the final attack was brief and his death came as a shock to his many friends in his home city and in the trade at large. Mr. Burt was held in the highest esteem for many fine qualities. His happy disposition and kindly nature attracted the warmest regard from all who knew him.

Antonio Avansino.

A number of the florists in the San Francisco bay district attended the funeral of Antonio Avansino February 11. The deceased was the father of Louis, David, Henry A., J. B. and John Avansino, several of whom are identified with the florists' business. He was a native of Italy, but had resided in California for many years. He passed away in Berkeley February 8 at the age of 80 years. Funeral services were held from the residence of his son, J. B. Avansino, 768 Green street, San Francisco, thence to the SS. Peter and Paul church. The store of Avansino Bros., in Geary street, near Stockton, of which Henry A. and J. B. Avansino are proprietors, remained closed the day of the funeral. M. M.

Charles Adams.

Many friends mourn the passing of Charles Adams, late rose grower for the Columbia Gardens, at Butte, Mont., which occurred January 15, following a siege of influenza.

Mr. Adams was born in Walsall, England, September 27, 1860. He came to the United States at the age of 22 years and took employment with the Ruxton Floral & Nursery Co., in Baltimore, Md. On account of ill health he was advised by his physician to come to Colorado. He located in Denver and for years was engaged in the florists' business there. He won honors for the best chrysanthemums grown in Colorado in 1893 and he was judge of exhibits at flower shows in that state for years. He later became identified with the Salt Lake City Floral Co., Salt Lake City, Ut., and remained in this connection for nine years. He was considered one of the best rose growers in Utah.

Mr. Adams is survived by his wife and two children. A. C. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

John V. Laver, of Erie, Pa., accompanied by his good wife, observed that just twenty-five years ago they passed through the portals of the Hollenden hotel, a blushing bride and embarrassed groom, on their honeymoon. How well they have borne the joke is known by their many friends in the trade.

* * * *

Philip J. Foley observed that, no matter how the subject of the growing and handling of the product was discussed, the fact remained that it had yet to be proved which greenhouse produced the best stock, arguing that the plants were naturally influenced by their environment.

* * * *

"Flowers lend their beautiful influence to lighten grief. Their use is largely a matter of sentiment. Their value appeals to the senses through the fitness of the types employed, their freshness and proper arrangement." The logic of this utterance of Warren G. Matthews, of Dayton, O., was emphasized by the variety of floral designs upon which he was putting the finishing touches, assisted by his worthy right bower, Sam Weller, who has held this position for twenty-eight years. "Excuse me while I wire an order to Le Borious, at Duluth. This is the second to him today. A great factor in our business is the F. T. D., which also makes us better acquainted with each other than anything else has done." Speaking of holiday business, our worthy confrere figures that if there was little profit at times, the boost the general trade has received through the entire season thus far should be sufficient satisfaction, all things considered.

A. A. Smith, of the Friedley Co., Cleveland, O., is recovering from the results of an automobile accident in which his right shoulder was broken. Frank Friedley observed that it happened at the busiest season, when a good partner could ill be spared.

"The timeworn quotation, 'All that glitters is not gold,' may be true," observed William Scott, of the William Scott Co., Buffalo, N. Y., "but Golden Spur narcissi and Yellow Prince tulips are bringing in the yellow metal to us this year." There are at this range 30,000 of the first-named variety and 35,000 of the latter, with 10,000 of Tulip La Reine and 15,000 of Tulip Fred Moore. All of them are coming into bloom and they make a gorgeous showing, which goes to prove that good bulbs are still to be had and, to use Mr. Scott's own language, require "careful handling, some help from the weather man and a good market to turn the trick." Next year, with the prospect of a large advance in the cost of bulbs, and with new conditions of sale imposed, it is predicted that many of the smaller growers will drop out of this line, leaving the game in the hands of the veterans. There are also 10,000 young plants of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati and 7,000 seedling cyclamens among the futurities. Bedding stock will be scarce, owing to the partial shutdown. American-grown, grafted hybrid roses here are in fine shape for Easter, which this year comes so close to Decoration day. Robert A. Scott is secretary of the Retail Florists' Association. He mentioned the fact that the local trade is in fine shape, paying bills promptly, a sure proof of good business. W. M.

A DOLLAR does not look so big to the average florist as it did a year or two ago.

AS it stands today, what we need is better quality rather than increased production.

ROBERT GEORGE, veteran plantsman, is spending in California one of his infrequent holidays.

WHAT the trade needs is not cheaper labor, or more labor, but increased production on the part of those now employed.

DID you ever notice that the condition of the stock in a greenhouse can almost always be told from the outside, by the appearance of the grounds and buildings?

THERE probably is nothing in which the danger of loss is greater than in the shipping of geranium cuttings. Some of the careful packers have found it expedient to ship nothing smaller than 2½-inch stock of geraniums.

ANY man is a traitor to his trade if he tells the newspapers how high prices are. Tell, instead, that prices of flowers right now are lower than other things the people crave, compared to pre-war standards, lower than coal or candy, food or finery; it is the truth.

A GOOD many florists are beginning to appreciate that their individual interest does not necessarily lie in buying at the lowest possible price; it is necessary to pay enough to encourage the production of good stock or the business will not rise in the estimation of anyone, neither of the public nor ourselves.

YOU can not, according to the experience of the S. A. F., get a page ad in the Saturday Evening Post for April 19 even when you order it as early as the first week of February, but you can get a page in The Review if your copy arrives forty-eight hours ahead of publication date—only why cut us so short; why not give the trade paper a week to work in?

NO doubt you have noted many of your customers prize flowers more highly now they are not to be had so cheaply.

WE shall seek to make up for lost time this summer and, among other tasks, a tremendous quantity of good, white paint will be spread on greenhouses.

SEND The Review a clipping of the St. Valentine's ad you, or the ad florists of your city, ran in the local newspaper. Also send a photograph of your St. Valentine's window display.

IT is a mistake to say that stock is short. Except for local shortages, the scarcity of cut flowers has passed; the wholesale markets, if given sufficient notice, can supply any local shortages, although the prices may still be above what some of those who grow their own stock are selling for.

THE trade certainly has become thoroughly inoculated with faith in the value of publicity—the only fear is that the ability has not yet been acquired to distinguish between the publicity which makes sales and that which makes selling difficult. Most of the talk in the newspapers of late has been harmful to our interests.

VALENTINE'S A FLOWER DAY.

Almost without effort we have made St. Valentine's day our own.

For the last two years the trade had relaxed its attempts to create new flower days; the general publicity of the S. A. F. was about all that was done. Indeed, only a few florists, comparatively speaking, turned to in the effort to boost flowers into favor for valentine uses, using the excuse that they were afraid of a shortage of stock. But flowers are so eminently fitted to the needs of the occasion that it took only a little local advertising to show that February 14 is our day—if we choose to take it.

The volume of sales exceeded all previous records and included everything from a half-dozen carnations to elaborate novelty arrangements that commanded real money. It is true that many people whose ideas of the values of flowers were formed at department store sales bought lightly if at all, after hearing the florists' prices, but on the whole the prices were paid willingly—no need to sell without profit.

THE GLASS MARKET.

Albert E. Baur, of the Baur Window Glass Co., Eaton, Ind., believes that it will be to the advantage of all concerned for the greenhouse trade to have knowledge of the facts regarding the reasons for the present and future price of window glass, and makes the following statement:

"Before the war the average production of window glass was ten million boxes of fifty feet each, but in 1918 the Fuel Administration curtailed the supply of fuel, with the result that the output was only slightly more than one-half the normal production, or around six million boxes. Owing to the uncertain market conditions, the high cost of the material they have on hand, etc., the manufacturers have voluntarily agreed to curtail production again this year to the same quantity of glass produced in 1918. The stocks of glass in the hands of the manufacturers are practically nil. This, coupled with the high fuel and labor cost, the voluntary reduction of production and the foreign demand which is beginning to be felt, accounts for the continued high price of glass. It is my opinion that prices cannot go back to pre-war level for a long time to come, if ever."

SOME PULL.

It's no trick to get your stock marketed nowadays, if only you let it be known that you have it for sale. The demand is something unusual and it is a demand that continues brisk, regardless of conditions that might be supposed to check it at times. It is a demand, moreover, that absorbs the all and every of greenhouse products. It is not one but many advertisers who are finding their stock taken as soon as they give notice through the Classified section of The Review, but the following will serve as a sample of the statements received with every mail:

Your classified ads pull like a mustard plaster. —Enid Floral Co., Enid, Okla., February 10, 1919.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

DECLINING COMMODITY PRICES.

A continued and extensive decline in commodity prices is reported by both Bradstreet's and Dun's, the latter explaining that although price changes last week were somewhat less numerous than of late, there was little abatement in the trend toward lower levels. Bradstreet's says: "Commodity prices crumbled slowly in December, but fell faster in January, with the result that not only the rise from July 1 to December 1 was canceled, but a good big slice cut off the rise from January 1 to July 1, 1918." The "index number" by which Bradstreet's indicate the rise and fall of prices still is twenty-six per cent above that of February 1, 1917, and just double that of August 1, 1914.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day proved to be the best the trade has experienced. The retailers did an exceptionally good business, far exceeding the St. Valentine's day sales of the years during the war period. Some of the leading retailers report that individual sales were larger than any within their memory and the public willingly paid high prices for novelties. The shipping trade was large and the market was well cleaned up; no doubt many more flowers might have been sold at lower prices, but there was, on the whole, about enough stock to meet the demand at the going prices. There was far less bulbous stock than usual and roses were short. Cattleyas were comparatively plentiful and sold at prices that induced some of the retailers to feature them.

This week shipping business continues as heavy as ever, with no let-up in the excellent city business. Stock conditions vary only a little from those of last week. Roses are slightly more plentiful. Long-stemmed stock remains in good supply, with enough to answer all present needs. Short and medium lengths continue scarce, the bulk of the demand being for stock at the lower prices. There is still a shortage of Beauties. Orchids continue to come in good supply and there are more than enough to fill orders. Big buyers are able to get them at attractive figures and excellent stock has retailed at 75 cents each.

Violets are plentiful. Carnations, which have been abundant, are no longer so, owing to the increased demand. Extra fancy stock continues to clean up, with the demand larger than the supply. There are, however, just enough of the lower grades to take care of immediate needs. There is not enough valley to go around, but there are plenty of sweet peas. Enough Paper Whites come in to fill orders; the same can be said of Roman hyacinths. Jonquils are in heavy demand and there are far from enough to meet the call. Tulips continue to come in larger supply each week, but the demand increases accordingly and there are not enough to go around. Freesia is plentiful. Small lots of iris are coming in. It is the same old story with calla and Easter lilies—far short of the demand. Calendulas continue to be popular, but the supply is short. Stevia is gone.

The green goods situation has changed, smilax, Sprengeri, plumosus, adiantum and Mexican ivy all being in short supply, making the situation bad for the retailers. Boxwood, leucothoe and ferns are plentiful.

Mrs. Budlong Sells Out.

Philip C. Schupp has become owner of the wholesale house heretofore conducted by him under the name of J. A. Budlong and A. H. Budlong has become owner of the Budlong greenhouses in Bowmanville.

At the death of J. A. Budlong, the business went to his wife, the greenhouses being run by her son, Albert H. Budlong, and the sales department by her son-in-law, P. C. Schupp, who has been manager for the last fourteen years. Mr. Budlong has purchased from his mother the entire greenhouse establishment of approximately 125,000 feet of glass in roses, etc., and Mr. Schupp has purchased the wholesale end of the business. Both men become sole owners of their ends of the business and become independent of one another. Mr. Schupp, in taking over the wholesale end, takes over all accounts, names of customers and good will of the business. There will be no change in the management of either of the establishments. The stock from the Budlong greenhouses will be shipped to the wholesale headquarters as before. Mr. Schupp will change the name to the J. A. Budlong Co. Since removal to the present location on the location to the ladies' wearing apparel store north of him at a rental that will make the move profitable to him. Mr. Friedman, it is understood, holds all the leases for the Congress hotel stores.

O. J. Friedman, who has been located at 522 South Michigan boulevard, in the Congress hotel, for the last ten years, will move two doors south before March 1. The new store, although smaller, should be better for hotel trade than is his present location, as it adjoins the south entrance of the hotel, leading into the famous Peacock alley and Pompeian room. The new store has a lobby window for display. There will be no change in management, Victor Bergman continuing in the same capacity.

Wehrman Buys Hardy Place.

Robert Hardy has sold his establishment in Franklin Park to Fred Wehrman and his son, Elmer. There are about 12,000 feet of glass and five acres of ground. The houses are in carnations this season, but are likely soon to go into chrysanthemums and sweet peas, as Elmer Wehrman, who will have charge of the growing, obtained his training with his uncle, Henry Wehrman, at Maywood. Elmer, who is 24 years of age, has just been discharged from the army.

They Liked the Sample.

"It was the best St. Valentine's business the trade in Chicago ever had; the best for everybody; by far the best." The speaker was L. R. Bohannon, president of the Retail Florists' Association, and he added: "Can you suggest a reason for it other than the coöperative effort we recently set going?"

The association published two large advertisements to call public attention to the exceptional fitness of flowers to express the sentiments of the day and supplied all florists with posters, but, best of all, it inspired in the trade the wish individually to make an extra effort for the day. The result was that practically every store in town made a special window decoration and display. The result of the combined effort was so satisfactory that it will be continued.

The next stunt will be a city-wide special sale timed to occur at the first sign of an approaching oversupply of flowers. The funds already are in hand, provided by the Retailers' Association, the Wholesale Cut Flower Association and the individual subscriptions of those who want to help the work along.

The Retailers' Association now has seventy-five members, nearly all active, having paid $25 initiation fee and $25 for the first year's dues. Associate membership can be had at $10. "The chief object of the organization," says President Bohannon, "will be to interest those who have not been flower buyers and to tell the public how to use flowers; who gets the new business thus created will be left to the individual efforts of those who can profit by it."

Various Notes.

John C. Bauer, whose vocation is publishing the Horse Review in the Masonic Temple and whose avocation is flower growing at his farm at Naperville, seems to find that cut flowers afford more profit as well as more fun than publishing; at any rate he has placed an order, with the Ickes-Braun Mill Co., for four additional greenhouses, to be used for summer roses.

It is reported that the growers; not to be outdone, are planning an organization. "Come on in; the water's fine," is the attitude of the retailers and wholesalers, who will welcome a means by which they can enlist such great assistance in the coöperative advertising work now on foot.

Edward Meuret has placed on the market, for sale, his greenhouse establishment at Park Ridge, Ill. As soon as he disposes of his property he plans going to California for a long rest. He may embark in business there, or return to Chicago and enter another line of business.

Kennicott Bros. Co. held a stockholders' meeting February 15. The stockholders agreed not to take a cash dividend and to put this money into the surplus, increasing it by $10,000.

Large quantities of gladiolus bulbs have been planted in the empty houses of Poehlmann Bros. Co. One concern reports having sold the company 53,000 bulbs. The market is likely soon to be unusually well supplied with forced gladiolus blooms.

E. C. Amling returned from California February 19, to devote a few days to business, after which he will rejoin his wife and daughter at Orange, where they have a cottage.

H. N. Bruns made a Twentieth Century trip to New York last week to inspect and purchase another nice shipment of Dutch valley pips. He says he now has enough stock to keep him going until the 1919 crop comes over.

Albert H. Budlong has purchased the greenhouses of said firm.

While the ownership has changed hands, there will be no change in the management whatsoever. Albert H. Budlong will run the greenhouses under his own ownership and as before will ship the output to the wholesale headquarters formerly managed but now owned by Philip C. Schupp, Jr.

The firm will be known as the J. A. Budlong Co., Mr. Schupp having taken over all accounts on the old firm's books. The new firm will serve its many patrons with the same quality of cut flowers and greens, handling the orders with the same personal care and attention as before.

Remember, no change in management—only in ownership. The ownership going over to the managers of the old firm. Last but not least, we desire to thank the many Budlong patrons for their support and hope for a continuation of our past pleasant business relations.

The Fleischman Floral Co. established a record St. Valentine's day, according to Edwin Mallinson. Mr. Mallinson worked for many days before St. Valentine's day on novelties for his windows and the longest time that any one item stayed in the window was fifteen minutes, which goes to show that a good, attractive window display catches the eye of the passer-by. As soon as one novelty came out of the window, sold, another went in. This kept up all day and it was necessary to add extra help to handle the orders.

The Ove Gnatt Co., of La Porte, Ind., is showing its line of prepared foliage, artificial flowers, baskets, etc., at room 589 in the Palmer House. George Husmann is in charge.

A few days before St. Valentine's day there appeared in the window of every Western Union telegraph office a large red heart in a frame, which was a great boost to the F. T. D. The wording started like this: "Send your valentine by wire, whether it be flowers, candy or greetings."

Winterson's Seed Store, now operated by A. Henderson & Co., has become port of first call for trade visitors. It has been suggested that a clubroom be opened on the mezzanine floor, so that the traveling salesmen need not be inconvenienced by the store's customers.

As an indication of the difference in business this year and last, the E. C. Amling Co. reports that the total of its sales to February 13 equals the sales for all of February last year.

Returning from Hot Springs, Ark., February 15, Albert F. Amling says he feels better than in many months.

The first car of cannas of the season has come and gone with the American Bulb Co. Gladiolus bulbs are going out rapidly.

Edward Hunt has obtained his release from the navy and was given his old position by the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

H. B. Kennicott left for Clearwater, Fla., February 16, combining business with pleasure. He expects to be gone about three weeks.

Thomas Fogarty, of the Friedman staff, returned to his duties February 17, after six weeks' illness. Mr. Fogarty was suffering from an infected hand and was constantly under the care of a physician and, when nearing recovery, was taken down with influenza. He was NASHVILLE, TENN.

St. Valentine's Day.

St. Valentine's day is a big day for the florist. It has been coming for some time, but it is not "coming" any longer; it has arrived. If you do not believe it, a look into the iceboxes of the Nashville florists the day after would have convinced you. All told the same story, that St. Valentine's day was almost a second Christmas. We were in three of the stores February 14 and we doubt if the sales force even had time to notice that we were there. Everyone was on the jump all the time. By night everything was sold out clean. The surprise of it all was how wide a range of flowers and plants sold. Cut flowers of all kinds went well, though of course the preference would have been for violets or sweet peas, had it been possible to secure them. Daffodils and other spring flowers proved popular as well, but when a customer could not get what he wanted, he took what he could get and was satisfied.

There was a nice line of novelty baskets shown, as well as the old standard baskets and made-up boxes. Many preferred these to anything else and as a result practically none were left when the day was over. The lesson seems to be, have good stock and put it up artistically. It will sell, no matter what it is.

The Market.

The season seems to be backward. Only twice before in the ten years we have been keeping a record, have we failed to have a good sprinkling of daffodils and hyacinths in the open by the middle of February, but this year we have none. In fact, things look no farther advanced than they did two weeks ago. Snow and high winds from the north have been in evidence for two days. It looks as though we might have the coldest weather of the winter before this storm is past. Will a late Easter mean a late spring this year? At any rate the ground hog must be having the surprise of his life, for, according to all reliable traditions, he failed to go back into his winter quarters this spring.

Floyd Bralliar has received a collection of forty rare cannas for breeding purposes. He is devoting considerable time to plant breeding at present.

Louis Haury is making a good showing of pot plants in the city market at present. From the way his business is growing, he will need a store soon.

The present indications are that there will be little greenhouse building here this season. Everything was put in good repair last year to help conserve fuel and it is felt that better growing

The Joys are producing the best valley at present that we have seen for years. It is Dutch stock, or at least is supposed to be. If the Dutch can produce such pips as these, there is no need to look farther.

Geny Bros. have a nice stock of bulbs and of flower seed on exhibition, but the present cold snap has cut sales to nil. Their bulk sweet peas and nasturtiums are shown in large glass basins that give them an attractive appearance. F. B.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There are two opposite views on the condition of affairs at the close of the second week in February. One is that the market is falling off, that business is lighter and that prices are declining. The other view is that business has been good and prices excellent. Both views are quoted to show that there is a wide difference of opinion among those who are in a position to know.

St. Valentine's day was the important day of the week. The retailers who made much of this day did well. A good many of them made no special effort and did little more than on an ordinary day. Sweet peas are the leading valentine flower. Some idea of the extent to which they are used may be gathered from the fact that one grower alone sent in 22,000 and at that there were not nearly enough. Violets are not in the same class with sweet peas for St. Valentine's day and forget-me-nots were rarely seen. Pink roses came next to sweet peas as popular floral valentines. All colored roses were favored.

Carnations are not so strong as they were a week ago. Good, bright-colored Wards bring top prices. So do well grown Enchantress Supreme, Pink Delight and a few more desirable varieties. The ordinary run of light pinks and white is not in demand, and they have declined in price. So has freesia; its season is drawing to a close and Romans likewise. There are more white flowers and less funeral work than there has been. Acacia pubescens has arrived.

There is no increase in the supply of roses. The market for them is good, exceptionally good, only that the poorest grade has declined in price. There are lots of poor Easter lilies. Callas are good, however. There are wallflowers, valley, a few gardenias and many orchids.

To Honor the Commodore.

There will be something doing at Dooner's the evening of February 22, Washington's birthday. It has been kept pretty quiet, so as to be a surprise, but now it is out. The boys are going to give a dinner in honor of Commodore John Westcott.

It is to be a fine affair, indeed. No starch, no frills. The Commodore hates that sort of thing. Just a real hearty good time. All the Commodore's friends are going to be there, not only his in-town friends, but a whole lot of his out-of-town friends are coming to town for the express purpose of telling the Commodore how glad they are to see him and singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," in chorus.

The committee that got up the affair, A. B. Cartledge, chairman; Edwin J. Fancourt, secretary, thought of having it on the Commodore's birthday, but that happy event being some 300 days ahead, they hit on Washington's birthday as the next best date. There are some things in common between George and John. Both were workers; both were leaders; both were presidents. So February 22 was set as the day. Before the guests assemble, let me tell you something of the doughty Commodore, businessly, socially and socio-businessly.

John Westcott first came to the fore in this city as a member of the firm of Pennock Bros. He and his brother purchased the greenhouse establishment of D. Ferguson & Sons, which he now carries on under his own name. He has been president of the Florists' Club, vice-president of the S. A. F. and a leader of all the big delegations this club has sent down to the society's conventions. He has a place at Waretown, on the shore of Barnegat bay, where he has entertained scores of the most noted men in this profession. He has hosts of friends.

That's how and when and where and why.

Blackmail.

An unusual incident has just occurred. Last month Frank P. Myers, of the firm of Myers & Samtman, Chestnut Hill, received an anonymous letter telling him to put $4,000 in a certain place or his entire range of greenhouses would be blown up. This letter was followed by others. Finally, after investigation, Joseph Kernan, a neighbor and former employee, was arrested. He was examined and pleaded guilty, saying that he needed money. His age was given as 26 years.

Various Notes.

Leo Niessen believes that Beauties will remain in the market and not go out for several weeks as they did last year.

Alexander B. Scott is at Summerville, S. C.

The meeting of the Florists' Club to be held March 4 will be devoted to carnations.

The Assembly ball scheduled for this month has been indefinitely postponed.

David Rust says that the interest taken in the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society is most encouraging and that it is wonderful how many fine varieties of flowers other than roses and carnations the gardeners have produced.

Eugene Weiss has been notified that he must vacate his store on Germantown avenue.

Arthur A. Niessen has been elected vice-president of the Florists' Club. This completes the ticket. The officers are as follows: President, Edmund A. Harvey; vice-president, Arthur A. Niessen; secretary, Robert Kift; treasurer, George Craig.

Emil H. Geschick has a promising lot of lilies.

Mark P. Miles believes that while azaleas will be missed, other flowers will not suffer because of their absence.

Samuel S. Pennock delivered an address before the Farmers' Institute of New York at Cornell University February 11. A number of florists from all over the state were present.

J. Otto Thilow delivered an illustrated lecture on "Hawaii," before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society in Griffith hall February 18.

M. J. Callahan made up some charming baskets to send as valentines, using cyclamen, daffodils, primroses and other flowering plants, which proved popular. Mr. Callahan also made up many floral valentines with sweet peas, violets and pink roses.

J. M. Deutscher has valley pretty much to himself at the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange.

March 4 will be Carnation night at the Florists' Club.

Henry Bauer, one of the most popular men in the trade, is ill at his home in this city.

Cut Flowers, Decorative Greens and Florists' Supplies

All the Florists within reach are invited to call on the opening day, or as soon as convenient—it will be to their advantage to get in touch with this new source of supply. Correspondence solicited.

Consignments of Cut Flowers of all kinds will find a good market here. I also invite the correspondence of importers and manufacturers of Florists' Supplies.

Charles Henry Fox put out some clever ideas for St. Valentine's day.

W. J. Baker will celebrate his birthday by sending out extra fine calla lilies.

Charles H. Grakelow has returned from his trip to Cleveland and Detroit, where he attended the S. A. F. executive committee meeting. Mr. Grakelow will try to interest the leading florists "over there" in the F. T. D., while abroad next summer.

Henry I. Faust and Clarence U. Liggit have just returned from a little trip out of town. They did not find what they sought, but found something better. Phil.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Arrivals during the last week increased to such an extent as to show in a forcible manner how small was the real demand. The increased supply has had considerable effect on the values of many items in the list of offerings. St. Valentine's day requirements buoyed up business somewhat and arrivals more easily cleared, but business dragged next day. The holiday did not create so much extra business as might have been expected, though business was good, and had it been much heavier, there probably would have been a shortage of stock.

There were plenty of choice flowers in the varieties suitable for the occasion. Violets and lily of the valley, strange to say, moved quite slowly, although prices were at or near normal. Sweet peas moved fairly well, as did myosotis and bulbous flowers. Orchids were in good supply and moved fairly well, at moderate prices. Roses were in good demand and prices stiffened a trifle, while carnations took an even course.

The weather was bad. A drizzle lasting all day, following a heavy downpour the previous night, kept many indoors, cutting down retail sales to a large extent.

This week opens with a limited demand and a fairly ample supply. American Beauty roses are on the scarce side and specials hold strongly at $100 to $125 per hundred, with other grades in proportion. While other roses are in anything but heavy supply, they are not particularly active in their movement and the shorter grades have declined a little in price.

Carnations are more plentiful and clearances difficult in consequence. Fancy varieties, such as Mrs. C. W. Ward, Benora and one or two undisseminated sorts, are bringing as high as 6 cents; other grades 2 cents to 5 cents.

Lilies are fairly plentiful and clear at $12 to $15. Lily of the valley is in much greater supply, and the range of prices has dropped to $2 to $6.

Orchids continue plentiful. Cattleyas in the hybrid sorts bring as high as 50 cents per flower, but in general 15 cents to 35 cents is the price, with a movement not particularly brisk. Phalænopsis amabilis and odontoglossum are available, but meet only a small demand.

Bulbous flowers, such as tulips, narcissi and freesias, are in much better supply, and clean up well with 75 cents per bunch the top price for ordinary good stock. A few special tulips bring $1. Acacia and lilac are in somewhat limited supply, therefor move actively.

Wallflowers, snapdragon, daisies, pansies, primulas, mignonette, bouvardia and calendulas are plentiful and seem to clean up well at remunerative prices. Sweet peas are arriving heavily and no longer bring fancy prices, fair quality flowers bringing $1 to $2 per hundred, with $3 for specials. Violets move sluggishly and are rather soft, due to the mild temperature prevailing. Gladioli are making an appearance in small quantities.

Various Notes.

In suburban districts narcissi are an inch or more above ground. Some of last year's foliage is still green on hedges of Wichuraiana roses. The robin and song sparrow are both here. Farmers are plowing on Long Island. All evidence an early spring, but still—we have not yet read of the annual killing of the peach buds.

A further meeting of horticultural interests was held at the S. A. F. offices February 14, lasting until well into the evening. Among those present were J. D. Eisele, of Dreer's, Riverton, N. J.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; C. B. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., New York; Robert Pyle, of Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.; John Watson, Princeton, N. J.; Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, Ill.; W. H. Moon, Morristown, N. J., and Thomas Meehan, Dreshertown, Pa. Ways and means of advancing the opposition to the quarantine against plant importation were fully discussed.

According to the record, a state charter has been granted to the Gloria Products Corporation, of Brooklyn, to deal in florists' supplies. The directors are Manuel M. Voit and Dora E. Horwitz, of New York, and Rae Beck, of Brooklyn. J. H. P.

An enthusiastic meeting of the flower show committees of the New York Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of New York was held at the headquarters of the former, 1170 Broadway, February 17. The following were present: Theodore A. Havemeyer, F. R. Newbold, Richard G. Hollaman, F. R. Pierson, C. H. Totty, W. H. Duckham, Jos. A. Manda, George V. Nash, P. W. Popp, John Canning, Philip F. Kessler, Charles Schenck, F. L. Atkins, J. Scheepers, Max Schling, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., A. L. Miller and Secretary John Young. The committees merged into a joint committee and unanimously decided to hold a spring show in 1920, the opening date to be March 15 and the closing date March 21. The show will be held in the Grand Central Palace, which is shortly to be re-converted to exhibition use. C. H. Totty was appointed chairman of the schedule committee. Arthur Herrington was appointed manager of the show. The meeting went on record as disapproving the recent action of the Federal Horticultural Board in establishing a quarantine against importation of plants and flowers.

Dean Thompson, 52 years old, a florist, shot himself through the heart at his home, 72 Lawrence avenue, Ocean Grove, N. J. He had been suffering from insomnia.

The annual dinner of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers took place at the McAlpin hotel, February 18, at 7 p. m. Tickets were $5 per plate. The committee, consisting of John H. Fiesser, Herman C. Steinhoff and William H. Siebrecht, Jr., had arranged the details for an enjoyable evening, for which this association's banquets have always been noted. Dancing was provided for as usual.

The Greek-American Florists' Association will give its twelfth annual entertainment and ball at Palm Garden, 150 East Fifty-eighth street, February 27, at 8:30 p. m. From all reports, Mr. Sakas, the chairman of the entertainment committee, and his associates have been working hard and the results look promising for the evening to be a huge success. Tickets for men are $2; for ladies, $1. Those who will attend are advised that each lady receives a corsage of flowers as she enters the door, from a handsome man who is on the committee.

Roman J. Irwin celebrated his forty-third birthday anniversary February 20.

LANCASTER, N. Y.

Barney Myers, manager of the range of W. J. Palmer & Sons, was interested in the news emanating from the carnation convention, especially in regard to the new varieties. He knows from experience, as an old-time exhibitor, that those who have made a business of staging blooms can often put one over on the novice, however well the blooms of the latter may appear on the plants at home. Speaking of carnations, Palmer's were fortunate in having allowed the plants to remain in a range they intended to close. At the eleventh hour, too late to do other than keep up heat, the old stock was fed with sheep manure and the return in blooms and cuttings will be a big asset. The varieties are Mrs. C. W. Ward and White Enchantress. Considering how the plants were neglected, the showing is remarkable.

Among the rose stocks here, Mrs. Russell looks promising for Easter and the summer. The smoky, cloudy atmosphere seems to suit it. Plants rested from November until January are now breaking freely in the most profitable house on the place. More roses and fewer carnations is the word here now. Fewer bulbs are in evidence, owing to their cost and to disappointing experiences. After many years' experimenting, our worthy confrere has concluded that his neighbor farmer's opinion that the bulbs were not planted on the right side of the moon, may be as good a guess as any other at the reason for the failures.

lemon bush which furnishes "orange blossoms" for many a bridal veil. A lot of sentiment has been associated with that lemon tree.

W. J. Palmer has been ill since his return from attending the carnation meeting at Cleveland. His son Mark is in charge of the stores, which are kept right up to the minute. During his period of probation at the greenhouses, Mark Palmer made a hit as a hybridizer of carnations. Some of the seedlings here are promising, but it is conceded that this is work for specialists.

The Market.

The market last week was in splendid condition. There was an oversupply, as usual at this time of the year, and the demand seemed good all the week. From all reports the St. Valentine's day business was as good as any for previous years and some of the leading retailers report it better than ever.

Violets did not come in for as big a call this year as sweet peas. Jonquils shared honors with sweet peas this year.

Roses are still limited in supply and fancy Russell, Ophelia, Stanley and Ward sell clean daily at good prices. The demand is large for short-stemmed roses, but these are scarce. Carnations are coming along better and the next ten days will find all the local growers in full crop. Top prices for fancies were still up to $8 during the week. All consignments are of fine quality, few common or splits coming in.

Sweet peas of the Spencer type have a large call and the market is well supplied. Violets are in plenty, with top prices up to $1.50 per hundred, but this week will find this price cut in half, it is predicted. Bulbous stock had a big demand all the week, especially jonquils, tulips, lilies and Paper Whites. Calendulas are selling better, as are valley and orchids. Freesias are overplentiful at present.

Everything in greens was in demand and the market was well supplied.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting February 13, in the wholesale establishment of C. A. Kuehn. The attendance was small. The retailers were all busy preparing for a busy St. Valentine's day. The attendance was made up of growers for the most part. President August H. Hummert presided over the meeting. The trustees reported that the annual carnation exhibition had been postponed until the March meeting.

The following florists filed applications for membership: Otto Sander, H. Rohrback, a grower, and William J. Patton, a retailer.

J. F. Ammann, president of the S. A. F., talked on the Cleveland meeting and of the meeting of the S. A. F. board of directors at Detroit. President Hummert also made an interesting talk on the Detroit meeting.

A vote of thanks was extended C. A. Kuehn for the use of his salesroom for the meeting.

The next meeting will be held March 13.

County Growers' Meeting.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held its regular monthly meeting February 12 at the Eleven Mile House. Attendance was large. President W. A. Rowe and all other officers were present. There was a long discussion of greenhouse insurance. The question of publicity was taken up. It was decided that the best plan was to have each wholesaler give a certain percentage of his profits monthly to a publicity fund. A committee was appointed to see the growers and report at the next meeting.

Members say this was one of the most interesting meetings the association has ever held. The next meeting will be held March 5.

Retail Florists' Meeting.

The Retail Florists' Association held a meeting February 10. Attendance was small, and considerable important business had to be laid over until the next meeting. The following members were placed in nomination for office: F. C. Weber, Jr., and Theodore Miller, for president; Andrew Meyer, Jr., and W. H. Kruse, for vice-president; Oscar J. Ruff and F. J. Hermann, for secretary, and A. V. Hoffman, for treasurer. The election will be held at the meeting to be held February 24, when a large attendance is expected.

St. Louis Gardeners' Meeting.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners held one of the best attended meetings since the association was organized February 12, at the Forest park greenhouses. The feature of the evening was a discussion of "Lawn Making."

Various Notes.

Westminster hall has been engaged for the florists' masque ball March 4. Tickets can be purchased at any of the wholesale houses. Art Beyer's jazz band has been engaged for the occasion.

Elmer Michel has left the employ of Sander's Garden and has accepted a position as manager of the shipping department of the Mullanphy Florists.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and P. L. McKee, of the American Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., spent a few days here last week calling on the trade.

Sam Roth, for the last few years with Mullanphy Florists in the downtown store, has resigned his position and is back at his old job at the Grimm & Gorly Washington avenue store.

Fire at the warehouse of the Schisler-Corneli Seed Co., February 10, caused damage to the stock of seeds to the extent of $25,000, fully covered by insurance.

The six wholesale houses all handled large consignments February 13 and 14, especially sweet peas and violets, which seem to have had the call for St. Valentine's day. It is estimated that 300,000 violets were handled in the two days.

Grimm & Gorly, Mullanphy, Sander's Garden, Vandervoort's floral department, F. J. Foster and the Riessen Floral Co. had attractive Valentine's day window displays and say business was better than ever this year.

The florists along Grand avenue and those in the west end all have a good word for St. Valentine's day business. Telegraph delivery business also was large and good orders were sent to many Review advertisers. J. J. B.

The executors of the estate of J. T. Milliken have appointed D. S. Geddis, of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., general manager of the large farm at Crescent, Mo., where there is in operation one of the best equipped dairies in Missouri. In connection with this, 200,000 feet of glass, which is devoted entirely to roses, is located on the farm.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business during the last week on the whole showed an improvement and prices in some cases were advanced. St. Valentine's day business was good, better than in 1918; but a drenching rain, which continued throughout the day, prevented it from breaking records. Violets were the best sellers, but roses, sweet peas, bulbous flowers and flowering plants all sold well.

Roses are arriving more abundantly, but prices hold up well, especially in the case of Ophelia, of which no short stems sell below $8. Hadley, Russell, Hoosier Beauty, Miller and Milady all showed improved quality. Carnations have had a tolerably good week, with an average of $4 for average blooms and $6 for fancies. Violets hold at $1.50 per hundred.

Sweet peas are fine. All good flowers make $3 per hundred. Callas and lilies average $16 per hundred. Of bulbous flowers a greater variety is now arriving, including tulips, trumpet daffodils, campernelles, ornatus and irises. Pansies, calendulas, wallflowers, forget-me-nots and snapdragons are more plentiful and cut acacia is available. Cattleyas and other orchids are in fair supply. There is a scarcity of Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. The amount of southern greenery arriving is small compared with shipments of former years.

The Plant Quarantine.

Dr. B. T. Galloway lectured at Horticultural hall on "Protecting American Crop Plants Against Alien Enemies," this being the closing lecture of the winter course. The weather was unfavorable, there being a driving storm of wet snow and sleet, but the audience was a large one and stayed from 2 p. m. until nearly 5:30 p. m. The lecturer did not attempt any decided defense of Quarantine No. 37, but devoted half his time to showing what the Department of Agriculture is doing in introducing and testing new and improved fruits, flowers and economic plants. He was bombarded with questions concerning the plant exclusion order. He made a number of statements such as, "This quarantine is going into effect June 1 and will remain in force." Another, "You may pass forty resolutions, but they will have no effect on this quarantine." Still another, in reply to an inquiry, "Orchids and all the other flowers you mention do not amount to a bagatelle."

Among those who criticised the quarantine were W. H. Wyman, George N. Smith, John L. Smith, John E. Lager, Julius Heurlin, W. N. Craig, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, J. S. Scorgie. Resolutions strongly condemning Quarantine No. 37 were adopted on motion of W. N. Craig. Some of the speakers suggested that the directors of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society ask a member of the Federal Horticultural Board to address a mass meeting in Boston, but the majority were of the opinion that none of the members of the board would be willing to come. Dr. Galloway's answers to point-blank questions were in nearly every case disappointing.

Club Flower Show.

The flower show, hastily arranged by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, was held in Horticultural hall February 18 and proved a great success. Carnations were a prominent feature. Large and artistic displays came from S. J. Goddard and C. S. Strout and other specialists made fine entries of high-grade flowers. Other varieties of cut flowers, as well as pot plants, made fine showings. The attendance was large and the exhibition proved a pronounced success. Special mention should be made that a grand display of phalænopsis and other orchids from Douglas Ecclestone, superintendent to A. C. Burrage, Beverly Farms, Mass., was kept away by cold.

Strout's, Biddeford, Me., staged a group covering 150 square feet and received reports of merit for four new carnations, White Delight, Donald, Improved Ward and Matchless Sport. The exhibit also was given first prize for best general display. Other carnation awards were:

Fifty blooms any variety—William Sim, first.
Fifty blooms white—D. W. Howard, first, on Matchless; Strout's, second, on Crystal White.
Fifty blooms light pink—D. W. Howard, first, on Cottage Maid; Littlefield & Wyman, second, on Enchantress Supreme.
Fifty blooms dark pink—George E. Buxton, first; William Sim, second, both on Rosalia.
Fifty blooms scarlet—Littlefield & Wyman, first; Mrs. E. K. Farr, second, both on Belle Washburn.
Fifty blooms crimson—Littlefield & Wyman, first; Mrs. E. K. Farr, second, both on Doris.
Fifty blooms variegated—Littlefield & Wyman, first; James Wheeler, second, both on Benora.
Best new carnation in the show—D. W. Howard, first, on Bernice.
Special prize for Laddie—Wollrath & Sons, first.
Special prize for Doris—George E. Buxton, first; Ernest Saunders, second.
Special prize for Pink Delight—D. W. Howard, first; Ernest Saunders, second.

S. J. Goddard received a report of superior merit for general display.

Peter Fisher received a report of merit for Carnation Red Cross and Littlefield & Wyman one for Carnation Eastern Beauty. H. A. Stevens received honorable mention for Carnation Princess Patricia. D. W. Howard received a cultural report of merit for a wonderful vase of Matchless.

Donald McKenzie and W. H. Colby captured the leading prizes in the carnation classes for private gardeners.

Merle W. Farr captured all the sweet pea premiums, showing splendid flowers. The prizes for bulbous flowers went to W. C. Rust, William Patterson, Paine Bros., W. H. Colby and Ernest Saunders. The prizes for violets went to Edward Bingham and Ernest Saunders. A splendid lot of acacias, cyclamens, ericas, cinerarias and schizanthus came from the W. W. Edgar Co., W. N. Craig, W. C. Rust, W. H. Colby, Henry Stewart, William Thatcher and others. C. T. Beasley had a beautiful display of pansies and William Sim's plants of polyanthus were of the usual fine quality. John L. Smith secured the silver medal for rare orchids. Peter Arnott won on specimen orchids and superb cyclamens.

Penn, H. R. Comley and the H. A. Ryan Co. each made fine displays of baskets and novelties.

Arrangements are practically complete for the Victory banquet of the club at Horticultural hall February 26. The tickets are well sold and a large attendance is assured. No tickets will be sold after February 24.

Various Notes.

The death of Nathan S. Wax is recorded in the obituary column of this issue.

The Boston Evening Transcript of February 12 contained an article several columns in length entitled "A Government Frost for Our Flower Gardens," written by E. I. Farrington, which strongly condemned Quarantine No. 37. The Transcript is Boston's leading evening paper and goes into the homes of all the best buyers of plants and flowers. Such articles are bound to accomplish much good.

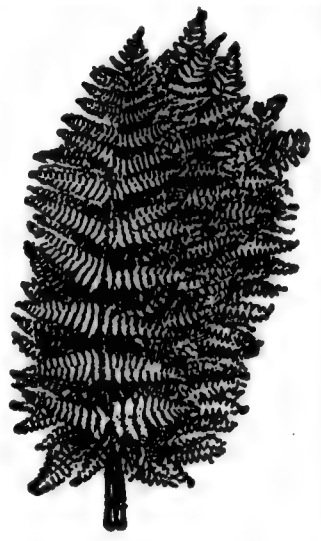
New York on the Battleship Connecticut. The residents of South Weymouth gave him a triumphant reception from the time he stepped off the train.



Among visitors from a distance last week were T. G. Sealey, of the Muller-Sealey Co., New York; Leonard Barron, Garden City, N. Y.; John E. Lager, Summit, N. J., and B. T. Galloway, Washington, D. C. Messrs. Lager and Barron came to see the "fireworks" at Horticultural hall.

The series of union meetings at Horticultural hall last week under the auspices of the State Department of Agriculture proved highly successful and all the lectures attracted large audiences. Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., lectured on "Rose Gardens" February 13 under the auspices of the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association, and W. H. Elliott, for the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, spoke entertainingly on "Why the Farmer Should be Interested in Greenhouses and Why the Greenhouse Man Should be Interested in Farming." Club members contributed displays of plants and cut flowers during the week.

Henry Penn states that his St. Valentine's day business went ahead of 1918, but would have been better still but for the unpropitious weather, which followed a long spell of clear skies. One window February 15 contained a large violet colored frame enclosing a single basket of yellow marguerites and single violets, a far better way to advertise these flowers than to crowd a window full of them.

Peter Hylen, of Randolph, who is always a most successful bulb grower, has the finest Golden Spur narcissi seen this season.

Philip S. Carbone sailed for Europe February 8. He will make large purchases in Italy, France, Great Britain and other countries. He expects to be away several months. W. N. C.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Markets.

A satisfactory volume of business is the record of last week. St. Valentine's day furnished evidence of the fact that flowers are becoming increasingly popular for the celebration of this holiday. Flowers of all varieties sold well, as did potted plants.

Roses are of good quality and prices on them remain the same. Carnations have been plentiful, but the supply is shortening up. Easter lilies are not in the market. Snapdragon and violets are scarce. Sweet peas, daffodils and narcissi are sufficient for requirements, but a sudden increase in the demand would create a serious shortage. Cyclamen, primroses, daffodils and a few cinerarias constitute the list of potted stock.

Club Meeting.

The Tri-City Florists' Club met in regular session at the residence of L. Stapp, Rock Island, with a good attendance. President H. G. Pauli, Davenport, presided. L. Stapp showed a vase of Carnation Laddie, which was much admired. The next meeting will be held at the residence of William Knees, March 13.

Various Notes.

L. Stapp has plans drawn for extensive improvements under contemplation at his range. They include a new boiler house, with better facilities for the handling and storage of coal, also the remodeling of the office and garage and new barns. Mr. Stapp intends to purchase a five-ton motor truck.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Change in Schedule.

In the notes furnished by our promotion bureau last week was the schedule covering the national magazine advertising planned for the spring publicity. In that schedule a page and a half-page were apportioned to the Saturday Evening Post. It is disappointing to have to change our plans in respect to this publication. The proprietors of this magazine decline to accept advertising necessitating such large blocks of space until their mechanical conditions are such as to enable them to take care of more than pre-contracted space. There is a limit to everything, even the mechanical possibilities for turning out popular magazines.

In the emergency created our committees have arranged to use two other magazines which more than fill the circulation gap.

But there is a lesson to come from the turn-down, one for the trade rather than our executive forces.

None of us realize the immense amount of foresight and preparedness which the modern magazine of large circulation must bring to bear on the publication of each number. The proprietors must know weeks, perhaps months, ahead exactly what an edition is to demand in the way of pages and mechanical preparation is made accordingly. It is big work and the problems are always onerous.

A Lesson to Be Learned.

Now, here is the lesson. We are desirous of having our publicity appear at the times when we think it will be most beneficial. To fulfill our desires we must act betimes. If our committees have not the assurance of financial support sufficient to warrant the making of contracts three or four months ahead, they lose prestige so far as selection of mediums is concerned. With them it is not a matter merely of spending money; it is rather a question of getting the most for the money they expend.

The committees are grateful for the continued and, in the majority of cases, added support of a large number of florists whose vision is clear enough to see that the work of our campaign has actually, without question, benefited the florists' trade to an enormous extent. It is known that thousands in the trade have not yet subscribed a cent towards this greatest of all movements for our common good. If they will come into line (there is no dictation as to what their contributions shall be), our committees can better look ahead and make arrangements which bespeak greater proficiency in their service. It is, of course, comforting to know that a certain sum can be expected, but this is not a case where personal liability can be pledged and we should have our drawing needs in hand.

We are at the end, almost, of the first two months of 1919 and we have, altogether, $100,000 to raise for this year's publicity. Of this amount $30,000 is already raised. The balance is big, but heavy with possibilities for the florists' trade. Wallace R. Pierson said at a recent trade meeting, "Through this publicity we are entering the 'promised land,' where we shall get the best from our endeavors."

Mr. Nonsubscriber, is it not time you headed for this land of promise with a subscription ticket?

John Young, Sec'y.

PUBLICITY AND ADVERTISING.

Many people ask what is the difference between publicity and advertising. Well, to simplify the answer, our publicity campaign, featuring the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," spreading the propaganda for more general use of flowers through national magazines, may be taken as an example of the right kind of publicity. The advertising of flowers, on the other hand, would be done by local florists through newspapers by direct appeal, or by mentioning certain items which would attract attention by specific description. Both are essential for satisfactory results. Now, the florist who takes advantage of the publicity campaign and then advertises locally has a team working for him that is equal to the best twelve-cylinder motor that has ever been invented for producing twentieth-century results.

Of course, mere advertising, without the essentials that go hand in hand with it, would be like the best Pierce-Arrow car without gasoline. You would get no action. But with motor power you cannot help going and you might just as well keep going while the going is good.

Now, the idea back of good advertising is to create for yourself what everybody strives for but few get, namely, good will. Once you get it, you hold it dear. Good will is an asset that is worth more than dollars and cents and it must be earned by hard work and honest dealing and by giving the public what you would like if you were the other fellow. When once built up, it is the greatest asset on earth, whether it be in business or in private life. Strive to make your business what you want it to be and, once you get to the standard you strive for, you will find it essential to keep working harder than ever, in order to "stay put," because the goal will keep going higher, unless you relax. The greatest inspiration toward the attainment of that goal for the florist today is advertising of a dignified kind, making your messages so many talking photographs of the man behind them, of his actions and his methods, for these are factors in success. The days of competition are past. These are the days of coöperation and your national publicity campaign is a fine example of the latter.

It seems only yesterday that the subject of publicity at our convention in New York was so forcibly presented. The listeners were so enthused that they were exuberant in their desire to contribute to the fund, as the result of a fine demonstration by the speakers present of the good a publicity campaign can do. Those who were not present at that meeting are beginning to enthuse also. In a short time we shall have all expressing the same spirit of coöperation for the general good which will ultimately result from our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," circulated among 120,000,000 people in this country and Canada.

Boys! It's good business. Join.

Henry Penn, Chairman,
National Publicity Campaign.

READING, PA.

This is a city of 110,000 population, largely well paid working people; there are few in the population who could be called wealthy. There are ten florists, each of whom is doing a first-class business, principally funeral work. The death rate under ordinary circumstances is ten to twelve per day, but it has been considerably higher this season.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Practically since the beginning of the year business has not shown the activity and spirit that are usually seen in the flower trade in this city. For St. Valentine's day, however, business became more active. There was a good assortment of bulbous stock, both in cut flowers and potted arrangements. This stock has sold well and the daily demand has cleaned up stock as it arrived. Jonquils are the most popular of all spring flowers, although large quantities of Paper Whites and Soleil d'Or sell readily. The tulips that arrive are chiefly short-stemmed and can only be used for funeral work. Occasionally some longer stock arrives and is quickly cleared. Some particularly fine sweet peas are seen, with long stems, in white and pink. They bring good prices. Snapdragon in both bronze and pink sell readily. fair supply at the usual winter prices. Easter lilies are not plentiful and the few that reach the market are cleared quickly. The supply of carnations has been considerably heavier the last two weeks and prices are easier. The quality, however, is lowered on account of the weakness of the stems, but the blooms are good. Some fine cherry blossoms are seen. The supply of roses is equal to the demand and fine stock reaches us each day. Red varieties have been in demand during the last few days, but the average demand is for the lighter shades. Russell, September Morn, Ophelia, Prima Donna, the Wards and Sunburst are all popular. Good lilac, both potted and in cut sprays, is selling well. Pussy willows are enjoying large sales so far this season and the supply is adequate. Cattleyas are arriving and cypripediums are plentiful. A few calendulas are seen, but the sales are light. Violets were in good supply for the holiday and the demand was considerably heavier. The supply of asparagus is light. All kinds of potted plants are noted in the stores.

Florists' Club took place at the Musicians' Headquarters February 10. The meeting was well attended and among the crowd were several men who had not been at a florists' meeting for a year or two. The president, Harry E. Bates, in his opening remarks said this was a good omen and prospects for the present year as far as our association was concerned were most promising. Fifteen new members were proposed and accepted. The treasurer's report was read and showed a small balance on hand. George Arnold and Ambrose H. Secker were chosen as delegates to the Farmers' week convention at Cornell University this week. As the second Monday in each month, which is our regular meeting night, is an inconvenient night for several members, a discussion arose as to the advisability of changing the date. This matter, however, was held over to be more fully discussed at the next meeting. A committee was appointed to investigate the possibility of a flower show this fall. The members present were favorable towards this project.

The speaker of the evening was Colin B. Ogston, who discussed in detail the subject of "The Reconstruction of the Lælia." Twenty-four beautiful specimens of cypripediums, lælias and other orchids were displayed. These were kindly loaned by Mrs. William S. Kimball, of this city, who has a large collection of rare plants. Mr. Ogston said that the one and only objection to the lælia was the stickiness of the stem. This, he said, can be entirely removed by an application of soapy water.

The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker and also to Mrs. Kimball for the display of choice flowers.

Various Notes.

Considerable advertising was done this year for St. Valentine's day by all the uptown florists and the results have been gratifying to them all. The store windows were all gayly trimmed with valentine novelties, combined with flowers. A mammoth heart standing nearly seven feet high, made of red paper, through which a large arrow and spray of flowers were fastened, was seen in the window of George T. Boucher. Another good-sized heart was in the window of Salter Bros., surrounded by novelties and plants. A circular mound

They dressed old soil with lime, bone meal and manure, but the plants were slow to take hold and, as the weather was ideal for growing, they were convinced that new soil is the most satisfactory.

Apropos of dressings, two benches of Rosalia, dressed with a special carnation fertilizer, show excellent results from this treatment in the vigor of the plants and quantities of buds. "The cloudy weather has necessitated keep-

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

CANNAS, caladiums and tuberoses are among the items that are held as good property.

THE Department of Agriculture is advising farmers that there is no shortage of seeds this season.

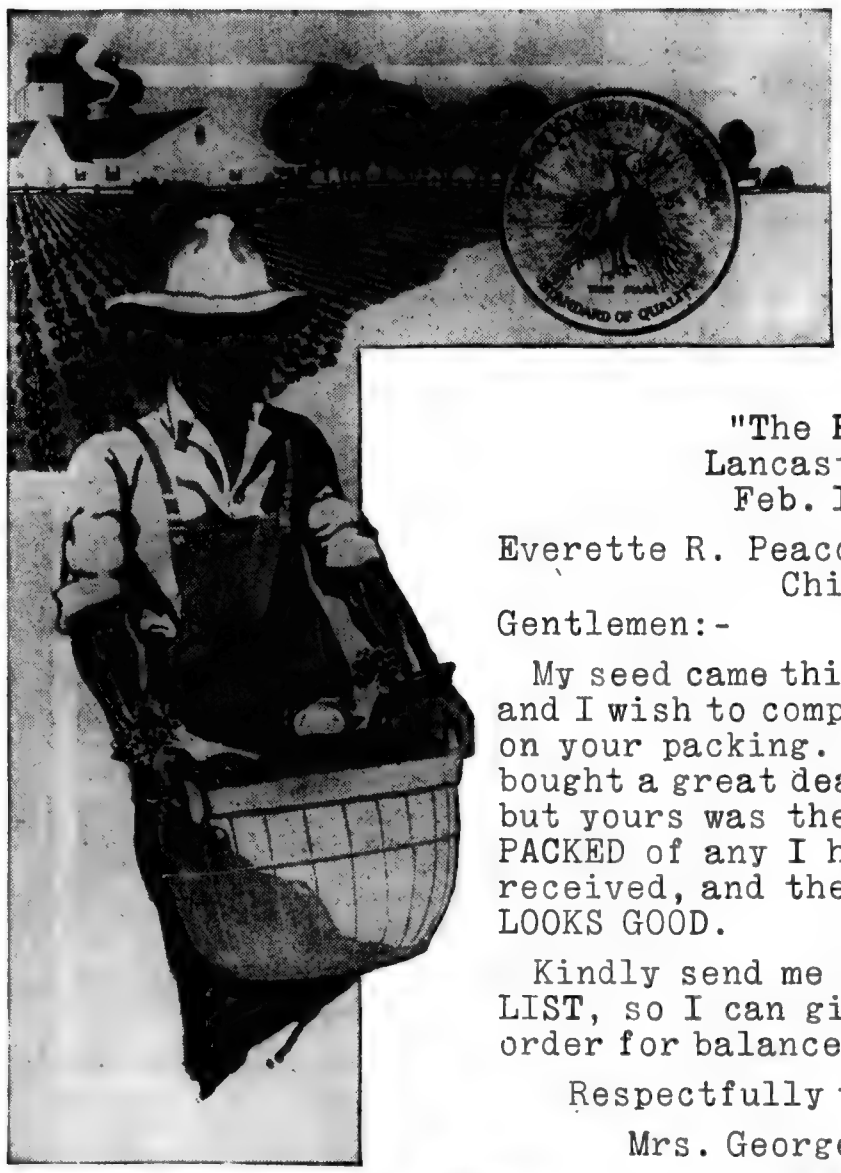
THE early-bird seed catalogue certainly caught the order worm this year. The man whose book is not yet mailed is tearing his hair, if he has any.

THE death of N. J. Burt, of N. J. Burt & Co., seedsmen, Burlington, Ia., which occurred in that city recently, is recorded in the obituary column of this issue.

VISITED CHICAGO: L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, Cal., on his way home from an eastern contracting trip; C. W. Scott, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., New York, booking jobbers' orders for 1919 crop lily bulbs.

THE situation in the seed trade, last season and this, again illustrates the fact that a widely advertised shortage and high prices tend to disclose stocks no one knew to be in existence, to check demand while increasing the supply, one being less and the other more than was expected.

WHILE the prices of seeds as a whole have been slipping, there is no prospect of anything except a continued high level of values; the cost of doing business, which is an important factor in determining the price of seeds, can not go down rapidly and 1919 growing costs will be in proportion to the prices of other farm products.



THE demand for gladiolus bulbs has let up, but it is expected to revive at any moment. At the moment the gladiolus bulb season is between hay and grass; the bulbs have to a large extent passed from the hands of the producers to those of dealers, the buying for forcing has ceased and buying for outdoor planting hardly has begun.

WARM weather has resulted in an unprecedented volume of early mail orders, practically all from planters whose orders were later last year, with little change in the average size. Still, the average mail order seed house looks on every dollar of increased sales in the first six weeks of the year as being so much clear gain, the second six weeks being busy enough under any conditions.

SOMETHING new in receiverships has developed at Mt. Pleasant, Mich., whence unopened mail is coming back rubber-stamped "Returned by Walter W. Russell, receiver for Harris Bros. Seed Co." As an instance, a letter with regard to a paid-in-advance order which had been shipped C. O. D. was held unopened by Receiver Russell from September 21 to February 13 and then returned to the sender.

KAISER PEA CHANGES ITS NAME.

Those who want to buy quantities of the variety of field pea introduced several years ago by the United States Department of Agriculture from Germany, and then known as the Kaiser pea, will save trouble by not using that name any more. These peas are now known as McAdoos, and they are as widely distributed through the northwest as Liberty bonds, which caused the substitution in nomenclature.

THE SEED SITUATION.

"You can say that seedsmen are like other business men, waiting, just waiting, for something to turn up."

The speaker was a California grower who had just completed a trip that included a call on all the principal seed buyers in the United States.

"Retail mail order trade has started earlier or is in larger volume than ever before, but the wholesale trade is slow. The seedsman is confident of his ability to obtain in quick time almost any item he finds himself running short on and he is buying only a little from day to day. There is every confidence that a big retail seed season is under way, but there is no disposition to get excited over it. The conditions are the opposite of a year ago.

"Nor is the trade keenly interested in 1919 contracts. The growers have put out acreage without contracts back of them and are not placing the crops readily. Their costs are high and they are compelled to ask prices that are higher than the present spot delivery market. The trade is willing to let the growers speculate.

"For the last two or three years the California growers have put out all the acreage they could, with confidence they could not lose. There still is a world-wide demand for seeds, but it is in the tomorrow, not today. The 1918 crop was a poor one, but the acreage was so large that it was only the interposition of Providence that cut down the production to a point that leaves everyone fairly comfortable. There is no need to sacrifice anything, especially in view of the continued high cost of production.

"The acreage in California this year probably does not exceed seventy-five per cent of last year's acreage under seed crops. Some growers may not agree that the reduction is as much as twenty-five per cent, but my own belief is that it is greater rather than less."

THE GIGANTEUM SITUATION.

Within the last few days month-old letters have been coming to hand from the exporters of lily bulbs at Yokohama. It is apparent that not all the 1918 crop of giganteum was dumped; moderate quantities, at least, went into cold storage. It seems that the British government granted import permits about a week before Washington did and that the cable at once started considerable quantities of bulbs toward England. Some advices say all the bulbs went to England and that only hardy lilies are left for America, but other letters indicate that it might be possible to pick up a few hundred cases of giganteums if a suitable price were offered.

As to the 1919 crop, the planting is reported to be about half of an average year. As the largest output was about 22,000,000 bulbs and the recent crops were about 16,000,000 bulbs, the outlook is for from 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 bulbs in 1919. It is to be remembered, too, that in 1917 the United States and Canada took practically the whole crop, while in 1919 it is expected the whole world will be buying again. The exporters explain all this as a pre-

Stamford Beauty Tomato Was Tried and Found True

The finest outdoor Tomato the world has ever seen. Awarded highest honors wherever exhibited. Winners of five Certificates of Merit from Horticultural and Agricultural Societies.

Stamford Beauty Tomato has been exhibited and judged by the most expert gardeners in America and has received most flattering honors, probably more than any other Tomato on the market today.

Stamford Beauty resembles the old favorite Stone Tomato, but is earlier, sweeter and has a handsome color finish of deep scarlet. Stamford Beauty is a strong, healthy grower and a most wonderful cropper, producing a wealth of large, beautiful smooth Tomatoes from early Summer until late Fall. Stamford Beauty will give you full reward for your money and labor. Plant some this year,

What others say:

ALFRED OLSEN, truck farmer, Springdale, Conn., grew about two hundred plants last summer. He says: "Your Stamford Beauty Tomato has them all beaten a mile. It is a real bread and butter Tomato for the truck farmer. Aside from being a heavy producer, it is very smooth and fine of color and sells before others. Next season I shall grow nothing else."

MR. EUGENE BLANDIN, Summit, N. J., says: "Your new Tomato, Stamford Beauty, is all and more than you claimed for it. I always considered the old Stone good enough for anybody, but you have improved it greatly, especially in sweetness and color. We are very pleased with this and thank yo for the seed, which germinated perfectly."

liminary to indicating a belief that war losses on the 1918 crop are to be made up this year by those who were strong enough to stay in the game. On the other hand, ocean freights have fallen to less than half what was paid for bringing over the 1917 crop.

MORE SEED LEGISLATION.

The second bill to be introduced recently for the regulation of the seed trade in that state has been proposed by the Hon. Adon P. Brown, of the New York senate. The first was introduced by Assemblyman Witter, as mentioned in the issue of The Review for February 6. The latest bill is known as "an act to amend the agricultural law, in relation to agricultural seeds and the sale thereof."

It is urged by Marshall H. Duryea, New York correspondent of the American Seed Trade Association, that the seedsmen of New York arrange for large representation at the committee hearing of the Brown bill, as well as at the hearing of the Witter bill.

A joint hearing on the Brown measure will be held by the senate and assembly committees on agriculture February 26, at Albany. While no definite date has been fixed for consideration of the Witter bill by the assembly agricultural committee, it is expected that this will be done either February 19 or 26, probably the latter date.

RED CLOVER SHORT.

There is not enough red clover seed to meet the demands upon that important legume as a restorer of soil fertility to American farms following the strain of war-time conditions—not enough, that is, unless farmers practice economy and good judgment in its use. Both the carry-over and the current crops of red clover seed appear to be below normal, while the need for seeding a large acreage to red clover in the middle and northern states is greater than for several years.

This information, perhaps not new to any well informed seedsman, comes from the United States Department of Agriculture in a circular, "Crops and Livestock Production in 1919." To make the available supply of clover seed go as far as possible, farmers are urged to follow the best methods practicable in seeding and to avoid undue risk of waste of seed by attempting to secure stands of red clover on lands unsuitable either in character or condition for this crop. In some cases, it is pointed out, alsike clover can be substituted successfully, especially in lands too wet or too acid for red clover. The War Trade Board still has red clover on the export conservation list, the only seed item there.

The supply of seed for the leading staple crops is shown to be adequate. In some parts of the southwest and the northwest, there are local shortages due to drought, but in the main they are balanced by surpluses in surrounding sections.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

Harry Chaapel, of Chaapel's Seed Store, Williamsport, Pa., commented upon the subject of habit, noting how a habit can be imbibed into one's system. He illustrated by mentioning that last fall he moved into the store adjoining, and that even yet he and others make for the old place, while patrons of the firm formerly located in the new store do likewise, so that many people visit the new place looking for the other firm. The result is that the store gets many more visitors than before and some of them make valuable additions to its big list of customers. "Get the habit," is the slogan here. W. M.

J. W. Jung Seed Co., Randolph, Wis.—"Jung's Superb Asters," a neat, well illustrated booklet, in a marbled green and white cover; the seeds are priced by the ounce and pound. Seeds of Kochia tricophylla, or mock cypress, also are listed.

W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., Boston, England.—An abridged wholesale seed catalogue, "prepared specially for customers in the United States and Canada." Only vegetable and herb seeds are offered in this list.

Danish Seed Import, Minneapolis, Minn.—Fifth annual wholesale catalogue, illustrated; thirty-two pages and cover. The specialties are stated as "cabbage, cauliflower and flower seeds." The stock is largely imported from Denmark, but "where the American seeds are better than foreign," says the company, "we only have the American-grown."

Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.—Wholesale catalogue of the company's specialty, chrysanthemums; well illustrated; sixteen pages and cover. The novelties for 1919 get their share of attention, but the standard varieties occupy most of the space in the book. A list of "the best varieties for florists" appears on the inside of the back cover. "This catalogue," says the company, "is really a book of reference, giving the height the plants attain and the best bud to reserve for the many sorts offered."

George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.—"Dahlias of Distinction for 1919, describing my own creations and standard varieties of all the different types, classes and colors of this flower," an illustrated catalogue; fifty-six pages, in a handsome colored cover. The book contains some "pointers on growing dahlias" and an explanation of the classification of dahlias, as adopted by the American Dahlia Society. The proprietor draws attention to his new group of ten varieties, which he names collectively "The Ten Sea Lions."

Rue's Reliable Seed Store, Peoria, Ill.—"Rue's 1919 Garden Guide," an illustrated catalogue of seeds, roots, bulbs, plants, nursery stock, tools, poultry supplies and sundries; eighty well printed pages, in an attractive cover. tion," another of the high-quality books for which this company is distinguished; it is excellently illustrated and contains sixty-eight large pages, printed on a fine grade of enameled paper. The Market.

to $10. Calla lilies are ample enough to meet the demand at $2 per dozen. Easter lilies are scarce. Due to the dark days, sweet peas are again short and the price now ranges from $1 to $1.50. A few freesias still remain but the crop is practically gone. Narcissi are fairly ample at $5 and $6. Jonquils and tulips are more in evidence, prices ranging from $5 to $8. Hyacinths are good and are available at $1 and $1.50.

Miscellaneous stock, as usual, is in display, though violets are less conspicuous.

A larger variety of potted plants is here to be chosen from and includes Chatelaine begonias, cyclamens, cinerarias, Primula obconica and malacoides, hyacinths, jonquils, tulips and ferns. None of these is in abundance.

St. Valentine's Day.

St. Valentine's day business was good; a great advance over last year's. Prices were high. The demand was heavy and, as flowers are not abundant, everything was well cleaned up. The Circle Flower Store and Greene's Flower Shop were compelled to close their doors in the late afternoon, their large stocks sold out.

Clever advertising and unusually attractive and suggestive windows put flower valentines in first place. John A. Rieman's window was elaborate, showing excellent stock of all seasonable flowers and plants. Bertermann Bros. Co. featured an attractive display of dolls, fancy vases, pretty boxes and plenty of flowers and plants. The Circle Flower Store was gay with Kewpies and spring flowers. The Claypool Hotel Florist and Greene's Flower Shop showed plants, fancy boxes and novelty suggestions fitting the day. A. Wiegand's Sons Co. was also in gala dress and moved an enormous amount of potted plants, as well as cut flowers. Pahud's did a large volume of business.

Various Notes.

Paul R. Klingsporn and party were visitors in Indianapolis last week en route to Richmond to see Rose Premier.

Karl Hack has been mustered out of the service.

The Circle Flower Store furnished 400 carnations for St. Valentine's day to the War Mothers' Federation for the wounded soldiers at Fort Benjamin Harrison. Each carnation was tied with a red ribbon, attaching a red heart and a card on which was printed: "American War Mothers, Marion County Unit, Indiana Chapter." This store has been furnishing carnations for the wounded soldier delegations that attend Keith's theater every Friday.

Joseph Hill and wife were among the Rotarians here last week.

Robert Ellis will take full charge of the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co. March 1.

Joseph Schoey, now with Bertermann Bros. Co., will move to a farm this spring with his father-in-law.

The various florists in and about the city unite in expressing sympathy for Morris Mayer, who recently lost his mother.

Donald W. Saville, of Kokomo, was a visitor last week.

Greene's Flower Shop arranged an Abraham Lincoln memorial window worthy of mention. Lincoln's picture was featured with a gilt-leaved magnolia wreath. E. E. T.

GYPSOPHILA.

We would like to secure stock of the variety of gypsophila which was largely grown in the west for the cut flower markets last summer. We have planted several trials of seeds, but none were the desired kind and no one has offered stock of gypsophila in The Review. Information on its habits and history, and where stock, either of seeds or plants, can be obtained, will be appreciated. Leading articles in The Review on various plants have been helpful and we would like to suggest another on the subject of gypsophila. V. S. G.—Mo.

There are two kinds of gypsophila that are largely grown in the west for commercial purposes. One is G. paniculata, the other is G. elegans. G. paniculata is a perennial plant, easily grown from seed. It produces thick rootstocks and the flowers are small and long lasting. The effect of the large panicles is misty and elegant, giving rise to the name, "baby's breath." Seed of G. paniculata should be obtained at once and sown in flats or on a bench of light soil, to which a little old lime or sifted plaster and leaf-mould has been added. Cover lightly and when the seedlings are large enough to handle, prick them out separately, two inches apart, in frames or flats. When the leaves touch, the plants should either be potted or placed in their permanent flowering quarters, a sunny southern aspect being best for them. Two feet apart in the rows and the rows three feet apart is a good rule for distance. The only after-treatment necessary is frequent cultivation. The plants will flower freely the second year. This gypsophila always brings a high price in the market, owing to its superior qualities as noted above.

G. elegans is a totally different plant from the above. It is always treated as an annual and the mode of culture followed is to sow the seed thinly in drills two feet apart. The seed is cheap and germinates freely, so that sometimes a little thinning may be necessary. It is not particular as to soil, but in a warm, light medium the plants come to maturity more quickly than under opposite conditions and as a result more sowings may be made during the season.

In southern California growers sow the seed at all times of the year and, by lightly fertilizing and liming, use the same ground over and over again, making this a remunerative crop. In colder districts from spring to early autumn would be the only time to sow. G. elegans is much softer in texture than G. paniculata and bears larger, pure white flowers, those of paniculata being grayish.

G. elegans does not last so well as paniculata and therefore sells for a lower price, but it is so much more quickly and easily grown that it is generally more profitable. Still, an acre or two of good, well established G. paniculata is a mighty good asset to any florist. There is also a double form of paniculata and a rosy pink "gyp" that is more or less grown, but the two kinds mentioned above are the best for general use. H. R. Richards.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A considerable falling off in funeral work has been noted this week and as this has constituted the bulk of the business for some time, retailers found themselves with more time on their hands than has been the case of late. The rains, while a great blessing to the country generally, have had the effect of spoiling much of the outdoor stock for shipping long distances; but this will be only a temporary trouble and the plants eventually will benefit.

The price of good indoor carnations holds up well, but field-grown stock varies from day to day, sometimes going low. Roses are not too plentiful and the demand takes care of them. Violets are in good condition and were plentiful enough to insure big business St. Valentine's day. Orchids, too, are fairly plentiful and they are always in big demand on this occasion. Sweet peas are coming in fine shape, but are not plentiful. Daffodils are scarcer than for years. Excellent Roman hyacinths are being sent in from the Glendale neighborhood. Although grown outside, they have stems from nine inches to a foot in length. Erica melanthera of fine color is arriving and continues to meet with a good demand as a cut flower. Good plants also are offered. Potted cyclamens are especially fine. The northern growers are helping out local supplies.

Ferns are still good and some bright red Japanese azaleas help the display. Wild greens, such as huckleberry and ferns, keep getting scarcer and various other local shrubs are being used. Among these are buddleia, cassia, eucalyptus, leptospermum and the various peaches, plums and acacias.

Various Notes.

J. W. Wolters is reducing the size of his store front in order to save on the expense of display, which, with the two large windows, was great. Some charming spring baskets and fine plants of Erica melanthera are shown here.

Gustav Teufel, of Portland, Ore., returned home this week after a long visit in California, which included the principal towns. He purchased a good deal of stock and seemed especially interested in strawflowers.

George Roeding, of the Fancher Creek and California Nurseries, is in town this week.

The first of Fischer's beautiful hybrid freesias were shown at the store of W. Armacost & Co. the other day, the colors being delightful. In an announcement sent out by this progressive firm it is stated that from now on Mr. Armacost will put in most of his time at Sawtelle, overlooking the construction and growing end, while other heads of departments are noted as in charge at the store. Everything apparently is well systematized and working with the smoothness that shows good organization. Work is in progress on the new addition to the plant at Sawtelle.

Robert Armstrong, now of San Diego, paid a visit to old friends in the city this week. Mr. Armstrong says that there are several large landscape projects in and around the southern city that will call for a lot of nursery stock.

The sympathy of his many friends in the trade goes out to Frank Raymond, of the force of the Athletic Club Florist, in the death of his brother, L. B. Raymond, which occurred this week from paralysis.

S. Murata looks cheerful and says business is keeping up well. Miss Mary Rohr is now helping out here.

J. Dieterich reports the sale of another carload of kentias to go east. He also is cutting heavily of Erica melanthera.

Some extra choice baskets of spring flowers are shown in the windows of D. S. Purdie & Co., who report good business.

In the past there has been a little feeling against California-grown plumosus seed, but the experience of Harry Bailey, of Montebello, thus far shows that this is dying out, as it should. It is difficult to see how there could be better conditions for ripening seed than in the almost constant sunshine of a California winter. It is true that in the past some irresponsible parties have been in the business of selling seed and doubtless some of the stock sold was unsatisfactory, but when firms like the above and others make a specialty of growing, ripening and hand-picking it and getting it on the market early, then there need be no fear of results. Being anxious to know about this, the writer asked Mr. Bailey how he found the demand from people who had used it before. His answer was to show a letter ordering 600,000 seeds, from a firm that last year bought 300,000. He said, with a smile, "That's not the only one." It is interesting to note in this connection that this one grower already has orders filled and to be filled for one and one-half million seeds. So some one has confidence in California-grown Asparagus plumosus seed.

Roy F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia., arrived in Los Angeles this week and intends to make a long stay.

Fred Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., reports another week of big shipping. The elegant window displays kept up at this wholesale house are an especial feature.

After a trip to San Diego and Santa Barbara, F. Lemke, of St. Paul, Minn., who has been here all winter, returned home. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The market is flooded with daffodils and still the supply increases daily. As a result of the heavy rain during the last week, the stems are longer and the blooms leave nothing to be desired, but the splendid quality cannot maintain prices in the face of the heavy offerings. The finest flowers obtainable may be had for 50 cents per hundred. China lilies and Paper White narcissi, though not so plentiful as daffodils, are in much the same position, being hard to clean up in view of the increased general supply of flowers.

With tulips coming on, ranunculi and anemones beginning to appear and quantities of outdoor freesias expected within a week or ten days, there is no fear of a further shortage of flowers here for some time to come. As far as tulips are concerned, the crop will be light, however, in comparison with the avalanche of previous years, due to the scarcity and high price of the bulbs last year. The limited supply of these flowers is well taken now and the same may be said of the initial offerings of anemones and ranunculi. Potted hyacinths are in good demand. Freesias have dropped to 25 cents per bunch of two dozen.

Carnations are in oversupply, only fancy grades bringing more than 75 cents per bunch, while the larger number of the offerings sell for 50 cents. Roses are still on the short side; consequently prices remain firm. The quality of the arrivals continues good, with a preponderance of high-grade flowers. Russell and Ophelia are particularly fine.

The rain has helped the violets, but it came at an unfortunate time, interfering with the filling of shipping orders for St. Valentine's day, the heavy storm making it impossible for pickers to remain in the fields the first part of the week.

Sweet peas are scarce and lilies are a rarity, being almost in the same class with valley. Orchids are sufficient for all requirements. Fine acacia was arriving, but the rain has stopped it for a few days.

Various Notes.

The death of Antonio Avansino is noted in the obituary column of this issue.

Bert Harris, formerly with B. M. Joseph, has accepted a position with the MacRorie-McLaren Co. He will give special attention to the Palace hotel stand, working in conjunction with Fred Bertrand, who recently took over the management of the company's retail business and finds it necessary to spend practically all his time at the main store on Powell street. Many improvements have been made at the Palace stand, including more lights and equipment, which make it one of the finest hotel stands in the country.

with Pelicano, Rossi & Co., after serving with the "Grizzlies," the California regiment which returned from France recently and was discharged after a short stay at the Presidio here.

Steve Fazio, of the California Floral Co., has no complaint to make about business, the demand for flowers for all purposes being seasonably brisk.

Friends of Patrick Orr, of Albert O. Stein's force, are pleased to learn that he has left the hospital. It will be two or three weeks before he will be able to resume his duties at the store, however. Norman Marcus and Mr. Dudley have returned to work after serving their country, the former being Mr. Stein's assistant decorator and the latter chauffeur. Mr. Stein reports much funeral work and a good many table decorations, mainly for small affairs.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee had a fine crop of violets for St. Valentine's day, but she had difficulty in filling her shipping orders on account of the storm which interfered with the picking. General business, she says, holds up well.

B. M. Joseph's store on Grant avenue remained closed February 10, out of respect for the memory of Mrs. Pauline M. Joseph, mother of the proprietor, who died in this city February 7. She was a native of Alsace and is survived by two sons and a daughter, B. M. Joseph, the florist; Joseph L. Joseph and Mrs. Alexander Coblentz.

Enomoto & Co. were rushed with St. Valentine's day orders for violets, carnations, daffodils, freesia and roses.

Mr. Lincoln, of the Los Robles Nursery, at Santa Cruz, Cal., was a recent visitor.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is sending in an increasing supply of roses, but Manager J. A. Axell says more could still be sold at the Bush street headquarters if they were available. He reports a nice shipping business for St. Valentine's day.

SWISS FLORAL CO., Portland, Ore.

Big orders for violets and freesias were shipped out by the United Flower & Supply Co. to reach their destinations by St. Valentine's day.

The Art Floral Co. made an attractive display for St. Valentine's day and orders began to stack up early in the week for novelties for that day's delivery.

SPOKANE, WASH.

The Market.

The weather is mild and business is brisk. Potted plants are plentiful, including cinerarias, azaleas, cyclamens and primroses. Calendulas are becoming scarce. Narcissi, freesias and jonquils are arriving in quantities. Carnations and snapdragons are plentiful, but no reduction in price has been noticed. Roses hold their own, with fine Hadley, Ophelia and Russell to be had. Home-grown violets are on the market and are superior to those shipped in from California.

Various Notes.

H. Hill, who for the last eighteen months has had charge of the retail store of the Montana Floral Exchange, Great Falls, Mont., has accepted a position with A. J. Burt. Mr. Hill is not a stranger in Spokane, having formerly been in the employ of Mr. Burt in his old stand at Riverside and Lincoln. F. G. Matthews, who for the last five years has been in the employ of Mr. Burt, has resigned to accept a position with the Riverside Park cemetery as superintendent.

The Spokane Florists' Club held its regular meeting February 10 in the Stone room of the Spokane Silver Grill. After dinner regular business was discussed, with twenty-six members present. C. T. Kipp, president of the Spokane Florist Co., was chairman. The proposed plant embargo was under discussion at the last meeting and as no decision could be reached, the matter was made an item of special business at this meeting. A great deal was said on both sides and it was the opinion of all present that the short notice given growers and importers to prepare for this embargo was an injustice to the trade. However, the welfare of the country as regards the importation of insects and diseases is the important issue and it was decided not to send a protest to Washington but to endorse the proposed ruling. A special meeting was held by the retail florists to consider the early closing, which met with the approval of all. It was decided to close week days at 7 p. m. instead of 9 p. m. and Sundays at 1 p. m. instead of 6 p. m. R. W. N.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

Richard King, superintendent of the United States Cut Flower Co., believes the continued bright weather is chiefly responsible for the unusual crop of carnations and roses this season and, thinking other growers may have experienced similar results, mentions an item of 36,000 carnation blooms for 1917, as compared with 52,000 for 1918, the number of plants being less in the last planting. The cut of roses shows a like increase. Carnation Belle Washburn is fine and widely popular. Beacon, nearby, pales in comparison. The rose, Jonkheer J. L. Mock, is the standard summer variety. It has been cut back and is being started up. A fine stock of geraniums and carnations is seen, practically all outside of their own requirements bespoken. This is one of the few places where a good supply of stock plants of geraniums was acquired in the fall.

Rawson the Florist feels the loss of Manager Durand, who is threatened with the "flu." His right bower, Oscar Formann, reports a busy season.

John B. Rudy has given up growing violets, owing to the big call for plants this season. Extra efforts are being made to cope with the big spring call for bedding stock.

H. N. Hoffman may be seen in the early morning making a tour of the greenhouses before going to town, where he fills the office of mayor acceptably, as is evidenced by his continued occupation of that seat of honor. Fred Gantz, for many years grower here, who left for Florida to grow tomatoes, finds growing carnations more profitable. He has returned to his old post and is showing results. W. M.

The Market.

Business for St. Valentine's day was good. In fact, many of the retailers report better business than for the holiday in 1918. Double violets arrived on the market in good condition and cleared well. Red carnations were in good demand and advanced in price accordingly. The supply was soon exhausted and sweet peas also were short of requirements. The same is true of short-stemmed roses, which were in request for corsages. There were few red roses to be had and Easter lilies also were scarce. Callas are more plentiful. Long-stemmed American Beauties are scarce. Fine valley, which has been scarce, is in the market. Narcissi are not so plentiful as they were and are soon cleared. Tulips and jonquils are enjoying a good demand.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day was highly satisfactory to both wholesalers and retailers, the big fellow and the little fellow all sharing in the well-earned profits of this popular holiday, which is surpassed only by Christmas and Easter as a flower day. That the business, all things considered, was more profitable than that of last year is undoubtedly owing to the return of so many of "the boys" to the pursuits of peace, which, it goes without saying, include the celebration of this holiday, which has come to be one of floral remembrances rather than the old-time paper heart designs.

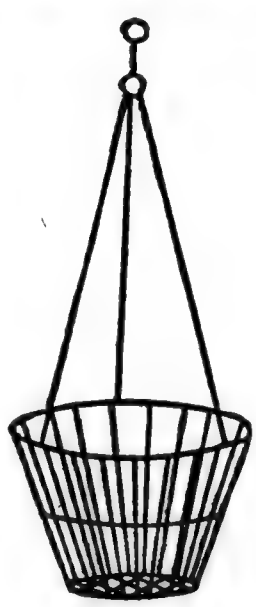
Sweet peas and violets were the most favored flowers of the day, violets being restored to their old-time popularity for the day.

Ordinary business also has been satisfactory, although there are not always enough blooms to go around, the demand continuing strong, due to the continuous funeral work and a few orders for social affairs.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, who has been an indefatigable promoter of War Savings since the inauguration of the movement, has a self-imposed personal quota of $25,000 for 1919 and confidently expects to go over the top with it. Her window display, however, is less conspicuous than during the earlier days, owing to the attempted robbery a few months ago, when the thieves succeeded only in breaking the plate glass, without getting away with the War Savings' stamps. Mrs. Sheaff, the wife of Mrs. Williams' manager, Harvey C. Sheaff, is equally enthusiastic in helping Uncle Sam to meet his financial obligations.

Miss Mary Catherine Thompson, a student of the University of Pittsburgh, who spent the Christmas holidays with Randolph & McClements, has been permanently engaged for evening and holiday work.



The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. is displaying a patriotic window filled with French and German trophies sent home by Sergeant Edward Ernest Ludwig, of the Fourth Ambulance Company. The Ludwigs are the only western Pennsylvania growers of calla lilies, of which they now have a magnificent showing from their Saxinwald greenhouses at Castle Shannon, Pa.

Peter Matsukes has become a partner of Abraham Krongold in the ownership of the Grand Flower Shop in the Fifth avenue corridor of the Grand Arcade.

John Hellstern, of Pleasant Valley, W. Va., a prominent grower for the Wheeling market, was a visitor in town last week.

On every side one hears expressions of regret that George W. Marshall has severed his connection with Pittsburgh and the McCallum Co. He was popular with the western Pennsylvania trade, both retail and wholesale, as well as with the commercial traveling contingent, and, what is better, he was considered an exemplary, all-around good citizen, and the good wishes of his fellow townsmen follow him in his new venture. Mr. Marshall left February 15 for Okmulgee, Okla., where he will engage in the retail florists' business. Mrs. Marshall, who has relatives there, remained when she and her husband went on for a visit shortly after the holidays. Mr. Marshall has a successor as manager

PRICES OF NURSERY STOCK.

War and labor conditions have affected the production of nursery stock to an extent not fully appreciated by the trade at large and prices on this class of stock are due to rise within a short time.

The plant embargo, of course, will be a factor making for increased prices on woody plant stock of various sorts, as well as on other items for which the trade now looks to European growers. The restrictions and limitations under which nurserymen labored throughout the period of the war have reduced the output of nursery stock.

The balance of supply and demand, never fully adjusted in this line of production, has been disturbed by the vicissitudes of the war period. Landscape plantings were diminished almost to the vanishing point during the war in many sections and smaller plantings of fruit trees than under normal conditions still further reduced development of this line. As nursery stock requires for its development a cycle varying from one to several years to bring it to marketable condition, the shortage of these lines will be felt for years to come, especially as no reinforcements may be looked for from abroad after the embargo goes into effect.

Catalogues of nursery stock show slight advances in price for the approaching spring season in practically all lines. It is probable that the shortage of nursery stock and the increased demand due to resumption of activities in the planting of orchard and landscape stock will result in further increases in the years to follow, until American growers adjust themselves to the new conditions.

THE DOOM OF THE BARBERRY.

Berberis vulgaris has been tried, convicted and sentenced to death for the crime of harboring wheat rust. The Secretary of Agriculture, the judge who pronounced sentence upon the offending shrub, has delegated its execution to the Federal Horticultural Board, which in turn has called to its assistance the Bureau of Plant Industry. The Bureau of Plant Industry in its turn is calling into coöperation the several state boards to assist in the work of extermination. So complicated is the machinery required to deal adequately with this baneful but beautiful shrub, which has enjoyed heretofore such wide popularity that its numbers compel concerted action to prevent the ravages of the blight from reducing seriously the wheat crops, now when the world looks to the United States for its food supplies.

Exhibits and demonstrations conducted under the auspices of the Bureau of Plant Industry in some instances have included displays of harmless varieties of barberry, that in the work of extermination the innocent might not suffer with the guilty. The Japanese variety is the one most commonly known to the layman, perhaps, of these latter, which may still be used with impunity to beautify lawns, hedges, parks and gardens.

TREES TO MARK HIGHWAYS.

F. E. McCall, extension specialist in horticulture for the state of South Dakota, endorses the plan suggested by the American Forestry Association of planting long lines of trees to mark national highways. Mr. McCall says that the method now in use of marking national highways with bands of various colors wound around telephone poles has not proved satisfactory, because the markings have no landscape value and are inadequate from the standpoint of utility. These signs have not always been placed properly and therefore may be misleading.

DEMAND WILL EXCEED SUPPLY.

Many varieties of fruit trees and plants are scarce, according to a representative of C. M. Hobbs & Sons, Bridgeport, Ind., who added, however, that this concern would have enough to go around. "We have less stock to sell for spring," it was stated, "than we have had for many years. There is also less stock in our neighborhood. If there is a normal demand for stock in the spring, most nurserymen will be sold out of their first grade of trees and plants before the season is far advanced.

New Varieties of Phlox and Other Flowers

Developed by

Willis E. Fryer, of Mantorville, Minn.

By CLARENCE WEDGE.

SOMETIME last June we told the readers of The Farmer about our visit to Willis E. Fryer's place at Mantorville, in iris season. In August we yielded to the temptation to make another trip to see his phloxes and gladioli in full bloom. They are among the most brilliant and interesting we have ever seen, a display well worth the fifty-mile trip.

Among the varieties of phlox produced by Mr. Fryer, the Amelia impresses me as not only one of his best, but one that should take a high place among standard varieties. I have had this on my own grounds for some time and have found it to be healthy and satisfactory. Mrs. Mellinger, another one of Mr. Fryer's own phloxes, is a fine rosy red of solid color.

About the nearest approach to blue that we have ever seen in a phlox is the one that he has named Mrs. K. Andrist.

One of the most interesting things in phlox we have ever seen is the Curiosity, which produces blooms in all shades from pure white, through all variations in marking, to nearly pure red. Its name certainly is appropriate. From this variety Mr. Fryer has made a selection of pure white that comes very true to color and forms one of the most satisfactory of all the whites. This he has named in honor of his wife, Mrs. Fryer. I saw this variety in several places on his grounds and it seemed everywhere to be one of the rugged kinds that makes good in unfavorable seasons.

Among the gladioli I was again greatly impressed with the variety that he has named Mrs. W. E. Fryer. It certainly is one of the most robust and dependable of the red varieties and seems especially adapted to landscape work.

There was nothing at Mr. Fryer's place that I enjoyed more than his wonderful delphinium. We have never seen a finer collection and have no doubt that it is among the best in the country.

Trade list on request.

"It takes two, three and four years to grow fruit trees and plants; consequently the supply for the next two, three and four years is already started in the nurseries and the trees and plants to sell in these next few years must necessarily consist of those already propagated. On account of war conditions, scarcity of help, high prices, etc., having curtailed propagation, if demands are normal, it stands to reason that there will be a shortage for the next two years and on some items for the next four years.

"Most of our fruit seedlings, except apple, are imported from France. Many apple seedlings also are imported. The conditions referred to have reduced the supply materially. Should we get all the seedlings the French people have grown in the last two years, we do not think we would be getting our normal supply. But we anticipate that France and other European countries will now use more of the stock they propagate than usual. We think also there will be more propagating of fruit tree seedlings in the United States from this time on, but to date this country has failed to produce as satisfactory stock as France produces, considering the number of live seedlings after planting and also the catch of live buds after propagating."

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day business was excellent. There was a marked shortage in roses, especially Columbia and Russell. The entire cut of roses has been less than usual, with only a limited amount of stock to choose from. In fact, there was no choice, as customers were glad to get anything they could in this stock. Carnations were plentiful up to St. Valentine's day, but cleaned out well at that time. Both violets and sweet peas were tremendously scarce. Prices were high, but the entire crops were taken up. There was a good supply of extra fine cattleyas on the market, which sold readily. All sorts of bulbous stock are scarce and everything that comes into the market is taken up immediately. Funeral work was exceptionally heavy during the last week, which helped to increase the already heavy demand for stock. There is no question that the community advertising was responsible in some degree, at least, for the increased business. Taken as a whole, St. Valentine's day brought good results.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Advertising Club, which has been advertising the business from a community standpoint, ended its fiscal year February 1. The annual meeting took place February 10 at the Republican House and was preceded by a banquet. The meeting was exceptionally well attended and was a truly representative florists' meeting. The club was fortunate enough to be able to secure Walter F. Dunlap, of Milwaukee, who gave an interesting talk on advertising. The audience was enthusiastic about what had been accomplished during the year and, as evidence of the merit of the undertaking, voted unanimously to double the assessment for the coming year. This increase in the assessment goes into effect March 1. It should aid materially in bringing the looked-for results. H. J. S.

A. M. Dettman & Son are about to build a store and show house on Green Bay avenue, the store to be 24x60 feet and the show house, or greenhouse, 24x 75 feet. The site selected adjoins the present location of this concern. It is expected the new quarters will be in readiness by Easter. Prospects point to a large increase in the volume of business of this firm for the coming season.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held February 11 at the nurseries of E. J. Canning, at Northampton.

James Whiting, of the department of floriculture of the Agricultural College, at Amherst, Mass., gave an interesting address on the subject of "Outdoor Roses."

M. Adams, of Butler & Ullman, Northampton, was elected a member of the club.

A pot of Primula malaccides King Albert, exhibited by H. E. Downs, of Smith College, Northampton, carried off the honors at this meeting. A. H.

The Market.

St. Valentine's day was second only to Christmas as a flower day, in the holidays of the year to date. Business increased to a "hair-raising" finish during the afternoon hours. Violets were in the lead as the favorite flower, with sweet peas a close second. Red roses and red carnations moved well at satisfactory prices. Potted plants fell short of the demand and brought good prices accordingly.

Various Notes.

Of several of the retailers heard from, all gave a good account of St. Valentine's day business, such as the following: "The happiest St. Valentine's day of my life," from Mrs. J. B. Freeman; "It was a 'young Christmas,' with plenty of good stock," was the opinion of Thomas McGee; "Like old times," said Mrs. E. Suder; "It was a hummer. We could have sold many more plants," from Schramm Bros. "It could not have been better," said Miss Helen Patton. "Sold everything in sight," said Miss Josie Helmer. "It is a pity the growers cannot send in enough sweet peas for St. Valentine's day," said Max Spanner. "We could not get enough stock to supply the big demand," said a representative of Metz & Bateman.

Miss Helen Flick, of the Patten Flower Shop, has gone to California for a needed rest.

The force of Schramm Bros. are all well again and all are at work harder than ever.

William F. Krueger has had excellent success with sweet peas this season and has cut quantities of the finer varieties.

J. B. Gray, of Gray's Gardens, at Sylvania, O., has been cutting fine peas all winter, but had the misfortune to lose one of the best crops by gas escaping from an adjoining house. His primroses are doing well.

According to letters recently received, Herman Hirzel will soon be back from overseas and will rejoin his brother John in the work at the Hirzel range.

Various Notes.

Carmichael Bros. are preparing for a considerably larger acreage of gladioli at their farm in Shannock.

George L. Stillman is sending out his 1919 catalogue of dahlias and announces a large increase in standard varieties, as well as new ones.

Peter S. Byrnes, of Wickford, was reelected president of the Narragansett Veteran Firemen's Association of that place last week.

Smith's Flower Shop reports an unusually active business in connection with St. Valentine's day.

Mrs. Otis P. Chapman, Jr., is busy preparing for spring shipments of dahlia roots.

Mrs. George Carmichael is seriously ill at her home in Shannock. W. H. M.

Ithaca, N. Y.—Prof. David Lumsden, of the department of horticulture at Cornell University, gave a highly interesting talk recently to his class upon what he saw when in Cleveland attending the carnation meeting.

Its Season is December 10 to 30, after practically all other pompons are past.

We offer 2-inch pots, April delivery, 20c each; $17.50 per 100; $150.00 per 1000.

The Story of Christmas Gold

Originated by Herbert Bate, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., in 1915. A seedling of Baby. The most unique novelty pompon ever offered to the trade. Has all the tough, lasting qualities peculiar to its parent, with a free growing habit similar to Lucille Knoble, Golden Climax, etc. The color is much darker than in the old Baby, almost a Golden Wedding yellow. Size, about one inch in diameter, of solid button type. Can be cut tight for Thanksgiving, is at its best from December 10 to 30, and holds on for weeks. We cut the last batch this season January 12, 1919.

Certificated by and scored 90 points before the Chrysanthemum Society of America committee of Chicago, December 14, 1917. Above photo was taken at that time by The Review's photographer.

What good judges say of it:

The box of flowers of Christmas Gold pompon came safely and I would be glad to get 500 rooted cuttings of this variety, and would be willing to pay $30.00 per hundred for same. Should you decide to put Christmas Gold on the market this spring, please advise whether you can let me have the number mentioned, payment to be made before shipment of cuttings.—Charles M. Weaver, Ronks, Pa., December 19, 1918.

The box of Christmas Gold pompon mum came to hand in good shape. It is a splendid flower and in my opinion a wonderful flower to have through the whole month of December and especially at Christmas. Wish we had had a thousand bunches of it this season at Christmas time. I hope you will see your way to grow a big stock and sell a lot of it to our Detroit growers, so we will have it to sell in our Detroit retail stores next Christmas.—E. A. Fetters, Detroit, Mich., January 8, 1919.

The yellow pompon chrysanthemum, Christmas Gold, reached us December 19 in perfect condition. To our mind the sale of this flower at Christmas would be limited only by the supply to be had. It has remarkable keeping qualities and at this date, January 4, it is still in a fairly good condition. We feel that you have a good thing.—Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., January 4, 1919.

Your late blooming pompon, Christmas Gold, was received December 19. Half the bunch we kept in our icebox and the other half I took home with me. Those I took home remained in good condition until December 26, and those in the icebox until December 28, when the flowers were still good, but the foliage had shriveled. The variety, in my opinion, is a very good one for working up, not only for Christmas, but all through December, when there is a scarcity of the smaller yellow flowers. Christmas Gold seems to be a good shipper; it reached us in perfect condition.—Max Schling, New York, December 10, 1919.

Young stock will be in great demand after next season, when its merit has become known to the growers.

The Market.

The florists are highly elated over the St. Valentine's day business. According to reports, there was an increase of fully fifty per cent over last year. It is believed that this is due in great part to the publicity campaign, featuring the slogan, "Say It with Flowers" and the coöperative advertising of the Florists' Club in the local press. The weather was decidedly unfavorable, but it seemed to have no effect on the market.

Roses were scarce and prices high. Russells were decidedly short and there was a shortage of Richmond. There was an exceptionally good supply of orchids and the call for them was excellent. Rainbow freesias were featured at several of the stores at $1.50 and $2 per dozen.

Various Notes.

A. J. Lanternier & Sons have redecorated their downtown store and installed new mirrors.

The Flick Floral Co. featured cyclamen plants, heart-shaped baskets filled with violets and bulbous flowers for St. Valentine's day.

At the greenhouses of W. J. & M. S. Vesey 1,000 cattleyas and cypripediums were cut last week.

John Lanternier, son of A. J. Lanternier, has taken a position with the Dreibillis Abstract Co., having resigned the office of deputy clerk.

St. Valentine's day business at Edgar Wenninghoff's went away ahead of last year. Mr. Wenninghoff was obliged to have extra help to handle the trade.

Spencer sweet peas and violets met with a heavy sale at the store of the Doswell Floral Co. Myosotis in pots was an attractive offering here.

The New Haven Floral Co. had a record cut of bulbous flowers and roses for the holiday.

The Freese Floral Co. had Dutch hyacinths, cinerarias and primulas for the holiday sales. R. F. B.

Batavia, N. Y.—L. C. Stroh & Sons have this year adopted a unique plan for the distribution of advertising matter. As they have a large Latin patronage, they are sending a fine picture of Italia enfolding the new annexations. With this goes a circular letter calling attention to their fine assortment of plants and cut flowers. A handsome water color picture is sent to American patrons. Walter Stroh believes this is a good move at this particular time. Anyhow, it is a novelty and they have the goods to back it up. Albert Stroh observed that he was putting on flesh this winter, while taking his turn at firing.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

STEAM FOR THREE HOUSES.

I have three greenhouses, to be heated to temperatures of 60 to 65 degrees. The outside temperature in some winters drops to 15 degrees below zero. One of the houses is 24x100, another is 16x125 and the third is a lean-to, 6x125, for propagating purposes. The walls are concrete and the side walls are four feet high. A potting shed extends across the north end. The boiler pit is eight feet deep. The boiler is for steam and is of the sectional type, with a firebox 26½x44 inches. My idea is to use 1¼-inch or 1½-inch flows and 1-inch returns, connecting each flow with two or three returns. Would this system work to the best advantage? If not, please describe a better way. Also state the number of flows and returns needed. The flows are to be fastened to the plates and purlins; the returns are to be placed under the benches. Is the boiler large enough to heat all the space?

W. H. B.—N. J.

Good results may be obtained either with 1½-inch or 1¼-inch flow pipes and with either 1¼-inch or 1-inch return pipes in the coils. On the whole, we would prefer 1½-inch flows for houses over 100 feet in length.

For the house 24x100 we would suggest the use of two 1½-inch flows and either fifteen 1-inch or twelve 1¼-inch returns. In the house 16x125 we would use two flows and either nine 1-inch or seven 1¼-inch returns. In the house 6x125 there should be one flow and three returns, either 1¼-inch or 1-inch. Provided the houses are in a sheltered location and the outside temperature only occasionally reaches the low figure mentioned, it would be possible, with careful attention to the firing, to carry the houses at 60 degrees with one or two less returns in the two wider houses.

If for any reason it is deemed advisable to use three flow pipes in the wider houses, good results will be obtained by putting in 1¼-inch flows, instead of two 1½-inch as already suggested. There should be no difficulty in keeping up the temperature with a boiler having a grate 26½x44 inches.

BOILER SIZE CORRECT.

I must replace an old boiler that has been in use for many years. I believe the new boiler should be a little larger than the old, to be efficient. I now have a steel tubular boiler, fifty-four inches in diameter and sixteen feet long, with fifty 3½-inch flues. It is bricked in. I want a boiler that will heat 20,000 square feet of glass; 5,000 feet to 60 degrees and 15,000 feet to 52 degrees, night temperature. What size of boiler would you recommend? The houses run east and west and the mercury sometimes drops to 30 degrees below zero. Have the steel firebox boilers any advantage over the brick-in style? Is there any difference in the efficiency of square and round brick stacks? What size of stack will be required for the boiler you would recommend for my use? C. L.—Ill.

Even under the severe weather conditions mentioned, the boiler described should be able to maintain the temperature needed, provided the houses are well built, with tight joints, and the radiation is ample.

This is with the understanding that the glass surface as given above includes all of the exposed glass in the roof, end and side walls of the house. If there is actually more than the above amount a corresponding increase in the size of the boiler should be made. If there is a large surface of wooden, concrete or brick walls, this also should be taken into consideration.

While some slight changes might be made in the number, length or diameter of the boiler tubes, it would not be advisable to use a boiler rated for less than sixty horsepower.

Whether a square brick or a round steel stack is used, we would make it twenty inches in diameter. This size will answer if the height of the stack is thirty-five or forty feet above the entrance of the smoke-pipe from the boiler. If only twenty-five or thirty feet high, it should be twenty-four inches in diameter. In either case the stack should extend several feet above the neighboring buildings, trees, or other objects which might obstruct the draft. If it is to be three feet or more in diameter, we would prefer to build a round stack of reinforced concrete.

HORSEPOWER REQUIREMENTS.

In the issue of February 6 one of the questions by L. M. M. was overlooked. He asked for information regarding the number of square feet of radiation allowed per horsepower for steam heating, and also for hot water heating. The portion regarding steam heating was answered to the effect that 100 square feet of radiation could be used for each horsepower.

When a boiler is used for hot water, provided it is adapted for the purpose, it will handle the same amount of glass, but practically twice as much radiating surface in the greenhouse will be required as when steam is used and, besides, not only should larger pipes be used for coils, but the flows and returns should be considerably larger. When the estimates are made on the minimum temperature likely to prevail, it will be safe to select a boiler for hot water heating based on one horsepower for each 200 feet of radiation; but when only ordinarily low temperatures are considered, it will be better to figure the horsepower of the boiler at about three-fourths of the manufacturer's rating and make a corresponding reduction in the amount of radiation to be handled. This will apply both to steam and hot water heating. For boilers under sixty horsepower, an even greater reduction should be made.

What the greenhouse men say must be true. and they say that VITAPLASTIC is a wonder glazing material, and the claims that we make for it are modest. If it is a GOOD product, then it is a safe material to buy.

You owe it to your greenhouses to glaze them with a real glazing material, a compound that will give years of service.

CYPRESS RESISTS ALL ROT INFLUENCES

A wise business man figures costs by the year, right down the line, and especially so if his business has to do with greenhouses. He knows, either by experience or from a close study of the subject, that the only businesslike method of determining material costs in greenhouse building is by the year—first cost and up-keep cost.

CYPRESS, "the wood eternal" for greenhouse construction, is positively the cheapest wood to use, figured by its years on the job, without repairs or replacements.

All good constructors in these days are insisting on genuine "Tide-Water" Cypress, "The Wood Eternal"—every board and bundle bearing the famous Cypress Trade-mark.

Vol. 8, CYPRESS Pocket Lib ary, is a little book filled with a big bunch of facts and figures about greenhouse construction - profitable reading. There are 48 books in the "Library," all of which give useful facts and plans about HOW, WHEN and WHERE to use CYPRESS, "The Wood Eternal," AND WHY. Which one shall we send you?

LOUISVILLE.

The Market.

Stock has been extremely scarce. Carnations are scarcely obtainable in the local market. Columbia roses are few, but are in fairly good condition, likewise Ophelias. Few Sunbursts are seen, but Wards are good. Sweet peas have been a great help in the shortage and violets are in good condition. Unusually good valley has arrived in the local market. Blooming plants are scarce.

Various Notes.

The Kentucky Society of Florists held its monthly meeting at the store of the William Walker Co. The selling of cut flowers and plants by growers and retailers was discussed. Mr. Rasmussen gave an interesting talk.

Miss Emma Baumer, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, is again in good health and is back at the store of August Baumer.

Louis Kirch, of the Kirch Greenery, is having a hard time to supply the local florists with greens. He has made several attempts to secure plumosus from the south without success. However, his own greens are beginning to make a showing and he hopes to be able to supply the local trade with home-grown stock in the near future. Mr. Kirch expects to be able to furnish Rainbow freesias soon, as his stock is looking promising.

All the florists throughout the city report St. Valentine's day the best in years. The only trouble was the shortage of stock. Many were compelled to turn customers away. L. K.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business is rushing, funeral work being especially heavy. There have been a number of social events calling for flowers and St. Valentine's day was a busy day for the trade. If properly advertised, this doubtless may be made one of the big flower days.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann reports a heavy sale of plants for valentines.

The William Blackman Floral Co. had a pretty valentine window last week, which attracted a good deal of attention.

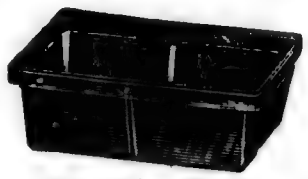
Julius Niednagel is cutting fine sweet peas and carnations. There is a big crop of carnations on, but they are kept harvested so closely that there is scarcely anything in sight but buds.

C. L. Niednagel's roses are coming into crop.

Karl Zeidler had a fine lot of plants and carnations for the St. Valentine's day trade.

Theodore Kuebler keeps a good supply of potted plants and cut flowers on display at his market stand.

The greenhouses of William Halbrooks & Sons, which have been closed during the winter, will soon be alive with tomato plants. Norwood Halbrooks has contracted to grow plants for the Dyer Canning Co.



The Lockyear Floral Co. had a good trade St. Valentine's day and is busy all the time with funeral work.

Jack Niednagel has returned home from the war, having received his discharge. E. L. F.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

No important change has taken place in general business conditions. There was a slight flurry for red flowers on account of St. Valentine's day and there has been more or less funeral work. Roses are a little more plentiful and an increasing amount of bulbous stock that is coming in affords a positive relief. Roman hyacinths, daffodils, Paper Whites and freesia are in good quality and quantity. Sweet peas are beginning to come along, the stock being exceptionally fine and in good demand. The longer, warmer days of the last fortnight, during which the sun has been shining brightly a larger part of the time, have caused a considerable increase in the supply of carnations.

Various Notes.

Edward Mianelli has resigned his position with T. O'Connor to accept one with Vincent Berarducci.

Hugo H. De Wildt, associated with George Johnson & Sons, Elmwood avenue, and several members of his family, have been confined to their home by illness.

A brush fire endangered the greenhouses of Frank P. Barker in East Warren February 13 and spread rapidly over unobstructed ground. The flames were extinguished, however, before any damage was done.

Joseph E. Koppelman, who has been on the sick list, has returned to his business.

Joseph Smith, son of Charles Smith, has been elected secretary of his class in Brown University.

Ed Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., was in Philadelphia last week on business.

Fire on wooded land belonging to the Budlong Rose Co., Auburn, caused damage estimated at several hundred dollars February 12.

Macnair had an attractive St. Valentime's day window last week. An immense heart of bright red artificial roses arranged in his corner window, Broad and Chestnut streets, was highly suggestive.

Hugo H. De Wildt reported to the police that thieves broke into his greenhouses, Elmwood avenue and Earle street, several nights ago and stole valves and couplings, as well as two pairs of climbers, all valued at nearly $75.

Col. Alexander H. Johnson, of George Johnson & Sons, who recently was discharged from military service, commanded the first battalion in the big "welcome home" parade. W. H. M.

The Market.

Roses are holding their own in price and quality. Carnations show the effects of warm, cloudy weather, but bring fair prices, ranging from $3 to $6 per hundred.

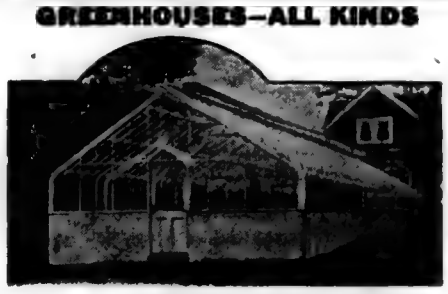
St. Valentine's day business more than met expectations. Flowers of one kind or another were plentiful and it was not necessary to advance prices. Violets, sweet peas, calendulas, jonquils, daffodils and roses cleaned up, but late buyers were not disappointed, as fine carnations were to be had. There was also a good demand for plants. Some stores had a supply of hyacinths and daffodils in pans, which sold readily. Then there were cyclamens, begonias, primroses and a few cinerarias. Of course the trade was brisker in some locations than in others, but in general it can be said to have proven satisfactory and was as good as, if not better than, Thanksgiving.

Various Notes.

Edward Baum, son of Frank J. Baum, Kingsley street, had a severe attack of appendicitis February 8, which necessitated an immediate operation. He is doing finely and will be home in a few days.

Karl Van Leeuwen, of L. Van Leeuwen & Sons, of Sassenheim, Holland, bulb growers, paid the trade a visit during the week.

A new seed and nursery store will open on Chippewa street March 1. It will be known as the Queen City Seed & Nursery Co., Inc. Some of the stockholders will be Emil C. Brucker, Wallace H. Eiss and H. Elbers.



The retail florists united in advertising for St. Valentine's day in the local paper. Newspaper space is costly, so the most effective way to reach the public is to join together. F. P. A.

Manheim, Pa.—E. P. Hostetter pulled down part of his range last season and stored the material, awaiting what was expected to be more settled conditions, as a few others have done. Meantime the good prices being received for the stock on hand is an incentive to rebuild. So up goes a new range this summer, and an extension of former areas is in prospect.

Mr. Bahr Did. Read What He Says:

Highland Park, Illinois, July 21, 1918.

MR. F. A. ZENKE, Chicago, Ill.:

Dear Mr. Zenke: Nothing pleases me more than to acknowledge that you were right when you praised up "New Plant Life" to me, and there couldn't be a better proof of it than my asking you to forward five more gallons just as soon as you can.

The results obtained were most satisfactory to me: stunted, small bedding stock after about ten days began to show new life and kept on improving. With the existing lack of help, instead of giving thousands of 3½-inch Geraniums a final shift, three light doses of "New Life" were applied and I am more than pleased with the outcome.

Sincerely yours, FRITZ BAHR.

Gladiolus: "Mrs. Watt" has been grown from Massachusetts to California, and has made good with every florist who has given it a trial. Resembling the American Beauty rose in color, but more brilliant, it will occupy the same place among gladioli as does the American Beauty among roses. Unexcelled for forcing, and because of its distinctive beautiful shade and strong upright growth, it meets the need of every florist.

TWO CLASSY GLADS. YOU NEED.

Those who know have purchased GRETCHEN ZANG and HERADA in most liberal quantities.

GRETCHEN ZANG—Beautiful soft melting shade of pink, blending into deep salmon. Large bulbs, $5.00 per 100; ½-1 in. diam., $2.50 per 100; 25 at 100 rate.

HERADA—Blooms of immense size, a new color, clear glistening mauve, as brilliant as a poppy. Large bulbs, $5.00 per 100; ½-1 in. diam., $2.50 per 100; 25 at 100 rate.

Read this: "Please let me know if you can let me have 2500 GRETCHEN ZANG. I had spikes of GRETCHEN ZANG over five feet high and with eighteen to twenty-six blossoms." James F. Rychlik, Florist and Grower, Painesville, O.

AUSTIN-COLEMAN CO., WAYLAND, OHIO.

Prince of Wales is destined to be the best florists' cut flower Gladiolus ever known. Color a clear, gorgeous, glistening salmon, melting to a throat of the sweetest yellow. Extremely early, large flowered on tall, strong spike and grand multiplier. Every spike a bouquet. Excellent forcer, weeks ahead of America, in short, the one best bet on the Gladiolus horizon. Award of Merit, Haarlem, Holland, 1913, a rare honor. I have sold all the large bulbs and planting stock that I care to dispose of, but having a surplus of bulblets, I will sell a limited quantity at $1.00 per 100, $9.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate and with every order of 500 or more, will include one large bulb free. These prices are away below value and are made for a quick disposal of my surplus. All bulblets have been kept in damp sand and are of high germination. Raymond M. Champe, Walled Lake, Oakland County, Mich.
